Neutrality Fight Abandoned Until 1940

Wage-Hour Law Changes Are Spiked By President

Cox Unwilling to Gamble on Veto of Barden Bill on Farm Industries Workers

By John B. Oakes.

President Roosevelt yesterday apparently killed a bill proposing sweeping amendments of the wage-hour law when he asserted at a press conference that it would mean unconscionably low wage rates for the 2,000,000 poorest paid industrial employes of the Nation.

The measure, offered by Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, goes far beyond Administration desires for alteration of the wage-hour law by exempting certain classes of white-collar workers in many industries closely related to agriculture.

As soon as he heard of President Roosevelt's statement, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, chief proponent of the Barden bill in the powerful Rules Committee, told The Post that he would no longer press for passage of the Barden measure, but now favored a compromise instead.

Without sanction of the Rules Committee, it would be practically impossible at the present time to bring the Barden bill to the floor. Therefore, it was thought, Cox's refusal to fly in the teeth of the President meant committee death for the Barden amendments.

Veto Foreseen

However, a bitter fight over less drastic changes in the wage-hour law is still in the offing. Even though the Barden proposals in their entirety may be lost, it is almost certain that the conservative Southern Democrats, allied with the Republicans, will endeavor to obtain more extensive modifications of the present law than the Administration desires.

"If this statement (of the President) means that the Barden bill would meet with a veto," said Cox, "then it would be foolish to further contend for the adoption of the measure. Therefore, I would counsel those pressing for amendments to consult with the President, find out what amendments he will agree to, adopt these and stop the controversy for the time being." Cox clearly indicated that he thought a veto was in prospect if the Barden amendments were passed.

Shadow of Coming Battle

Prior to the President's statement, a shadow of the coming battle over the wage-hour law was cast in a meeting of the Rules Committee yesterday.

Cox, angered at refusal of Chairman Sabath to set a date for taking up the Barden bill, snapped at Sabath:

"You're going to receive a terrible shock. You can't shut this committee off; it's not going to be left to you to hold up bills before this committee."

He told reporters, in Sabath's hearing, that the committee would grant no more rules until it granted one on the Barden bill. Later, Cox said he had been speaking in jest.

After he had been informed of the President's stand on the wage-hour question, Cox still further revised his original position by stating he had no intention of holding up any other legislation in an effort to secure wage-hour amendments.

Nevertheless, it was still certain that Cox and his group would strive for more drastic revision of the law than that originally proposed by Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee, seconded by Andrews.

'Neat Appearance?' Why Call Broun!

New York, July 18 (AP).—The following advertisement appeared in the New York Post today under "situations wanted—male":

Newspaper man of thirty-one years' experience is desirous of job. Has worked as reporter, copyreader, rewrite, book reviews, dramatic critic, war correspondent, sports writer, columnist and briefly as publisher. Of neat appearance, although labor agitator. Not sure of recommendation from present post. No reasonable offer will be refused. Address Mr. X., P. O. Box 521, Stamford, Conn.

The Post said it had telephoned Heywood Broun, the columnist, at his Stamford home and had been rewarded with a chuckling "no comment."

Troth Broken, Girl Evades Police, Leaps Off Bridge; 200 See Rescue

Parker chided police, who were directing traffic at the bridge, for not attempting to rescue her

Picks Eve of What Was to Have Been Her Wedding Day for Death in Potomac; Man Lowered on Rope Saves Her

Twenty-year-old Ella Sisk was to have been married today. Instead, she was in Gallinger Hospital, after a heroic rescue following her plunge off the Highway Bridge, 40 feet above the Potomac River.

Heartsick and despairing, the young woman jumped after plans for a second marriage had gone awry and when there appeared to be no balm for her grief over her husband's death last February and her only child's death less than three weeks ago.

Mrs. Sisk, who lives with her brother-in-law and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Sisk, at 1404 Duke street, Alexandria, Va., jumped only a few feet away from Alexandria police who learned of her intent and were attempting to stop her. She was rescued when a passing motorist was lowered to the water by a rope and supported her for 25 minutes until they were towed to safety.

Man Lowered by Rope

The rescuer was Arthur Parker, 43, of 1206 Tenth street northwest, a clerk in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who was driving by with his wife. He was tied to a rope commandeered from a passing truck and lowered by police.

According to Lucian Sisk, his sister-in-law's despondency began with her husband's death. Her subsequent engagement was broken off and the crowning blow came when her 3-year-old child died of whooping cough July 6.

Last night, Sisk said, the young woman rose from her evening meal and announced that she was going out.

"When will you come back?" Sisk asked her.

Family Followed Her

"Maybe tonight, maybe not until tomorrow or maybe never," Sisk quoted her as replying.

Alarmed, Mr. and Mrs. Sisk followed her in their car. The young woman had taken a cab, driven to an Alexandria drug store, where, it was discovered later, she had sent two telegrams—one to the family with whom she lived and one to a Washington youth. They told of plans to kill herself at the Washington Airport.

She entered the cab again, and with her relatives following, rode to what Sisk said was the address of her former fiance. There was no

28,000 Fired, WPA Strikers Thin to 26,511

Walkout Cut to Third: Roosevelt Dashes Hope Of Pay Restoration

Public Frowns on Strikes

WPA Strike Collapse

By International News Service.

Collapse of the WPA strike was indicated yesterday when the Works Progress Administration reported all but 26,511 strikers had returned to their jobs.

Those still out were estimated at only about a third of the number previously participating in walkouts from WPA projects in protest against abolition of the prevailing wage for skilled workers.

At the same time, President Roosevelt, at his press conference, dashed American Federation of Labor hopes he would issue an executive order reinstating the prevailing wage on projects authorized or under construction July 1.

President Doubts Authority

Mr. Roosevelt said that, reading the law as a layman, he doubted Congress intended the administrator to change the act, except in unusual or unthought-of circumstances. The strike, he indicated, did not fall in the category of an unthought-of circumstance.

Asked how far the Minneapolis strike disorders might go before Federal intervention, Mr. Roosevelt advised his questioner to read the Federal Constitution.

WPA Commissioner Harrington said regional reports disclosed operations to be "normal in most States and the outlook good for early resumption of normal operations in most States."

The WPA said Illinois had 13,026 on strike; Minnesota, 4,050; New Jersey, 1,309; Ohio, 1,196; Pennsylvania, 1,364, and New York City, 1,720.

Dismissals since inception of the walkout were: New York City, 12,200; Illinois, 8,094; Minnesota, 5,871; New Jersey, 725; Ohio, 1,109.

Michigan Beauty Gaily Braves 'Evils' Her Governor Deplored

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—The most enlivening visitor New York's had in many a day, "Miss Michigan Aviation"—she's 23 and very pretty—smiled merrily over the brim of a water glass today and said: "I'm afraid I may have just a teeny hangover."

Miss Sheridan.

She sipped only two highballs at a night club last night, so the hangover was just a quip of Miss Willo Sheridan, goodwill ambassadress of the Michigan aircraft industry, who arrived in the wake of a blast of criticism from Gov. Luren D. Dickinson, of Michigan, about the evils he saw on a trip East.

But the opposing views of the 60-year-old Governor and titian-haired Willo about the perils that beset "unprotected girls in anything smattering of high life" swung into wider divergence tonight, with Willo donning her prettiest evening gown for another whirl in some gay night spots.

She had seen quite a bit, she said, since she arrived for a week's visit, and she still felt safe.

Willo's night clubbing evoked a curt "no comment" from Gov. Dickinson, who had issued a statement after his trip East to the annual Conference of Governors warning mothers and daughters "of the dangerous proximity to a hellish brink

Jury Dooms Burgunder, Slayer of 2

Mother Near Collapse As Father's Plea for Insanity Ruling Fails

By the Associated Press

Phoenix, Ariz., July 18.—A stern jury accepted 22-year-old Robert Burgunder's challenge today and ordered him executed in the lethal gas chamber for murder.

Without a sign of emotion, Burgunder listened to the verdict, which was the jurors' answer to his assertion that he "should be given the death penalty" if his story that an unidentified "pal" killed two automobile salesmen was untrue.

The jury, which sat through an 18-day trial, rejected his story and the plea of his father, Robert M. Burgunder, Seattle, Wash., attorney and associate counsel, that the boy was "born with a defective brain."

The youth's frail mother, Mrs. Ruth Burgunder, of Alhambra, Calif., was on the verge of collapse after the verdict was read. His gray-haired father sat tight-lipped and weary.

Burgunder was convicted of the murder of Jack Peterson, Phoenix

Pilot Killed, 2 Coast Guardsmen Hurt in Air Crash

Fernandina, Fla., July 18 (U.P.).—Pilot F. Schweining was killed and two other Coast Guardsmen were injured today when their plane crashed while attempting to take off here.

Thomas S. McKenzie and Frank W. Dryden were the injured.

Witnesses said the plane struck a buoy as it was taxiing down the harbor for the take off. The ship, the CG-147, sank shortly after striking the buoy. A pleasure boat which was nearby in the harbor rescued McKenzie and Dryden before the plane sank.

Coast Guardsmen in a cutter lifted the plane, beached it and recovered Schweining's body.

Rain Gives D. C. Its Coolest Day Of the Month

Rain yesterday gave Washington residents their coolest day of the month, with the mercury dropping from 73 at midnight to 64 at 3 p. m., the Weather Bureau reported. A little less than a third of an inch of rain was recorded.

The peak mark of 73 was the lowest maximum recorded this month, only 1 degree above the record for the date, set in 1910.

The weather today will be mostly cloudy and somewhat warmer, but no rain is expected after dawn. Tomorrow will be fair, the Weather Bureau said.

Park Head, Ballot Spying To Be Probed

Witnesses Say Eakin Voted for Landon; Affidavits Cited Show Secrecy Violated

By the Associated Press

The Senate yesterday directed an investigation into management of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park under Supt. J. Ross Eakin, and at the same time called for an inquiry into a reported "smearing" of Eakin's 1936 election ballot to ascertain how he had voted.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, long has sought to have Eakin removed. McKellar's resolution for the inquiry into his management of the park twice has been blocked by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, but Vandenberg withdrew his opposition yesterday when McKellar added provision for the "ballot-marking" investigation and agreed that the Senate Public Lands committee, rather than a special group of five, shall make the investigation.

Secretary of Interior Ickes has vigorously defended Eakin.

When McKellar sought to amend the Interior Department appropriation bill to prevent payment of Eakin, Ickes wrote to the Senate saying McKellar's charges of gross mismanagement involved only bookkeeping and accounting errors.

Say He Voted for Landon

Ickes reported further that three election officials at Gatlinburg, Tenn., had made affidavits that they smeared with red ink Eakin's ballot in the 1936 presidential election so they could identify it and later gave it to a Knoxville attorney who transmitted it to McKellar.

The election officials said they saw Eakin's ballot and that he voted for Alf Landon, Republican nominee, for President.

Eakin made an affidavit saying he voted for President Roosevelt and that any ballot marked for Landon was not his.

McKellar first demanded Eakin's removal several months ago on the grounds that Eakin was a West Virginia Republican and that he "got around" civil service regulations to appoint Republicans to his force.

Ickes ordered an investigation and said later that Eakin had complied with all civil service regulations and that he was "doing a good job."

Transfer Canceled

Repeated criticism from McKellar led the park service to direct Eakin's transfer to the superintendency of the Shenandoah National Park, but Ickes later canceled the order of transfer when he said McKellar objected to Eakin's continuing in the Government service at all.

The committee was authorized to spend up to $9,000 for the investigation and to report to the Senate at the next session.

Two Guanacoes And Pair of Llamas Join Zoo Colony

Four beasts, so gentle they even apologize to their food before biting it, finally reached the Washington Zoo yesterday after narrowly escaping deportation as undesirable aliens.

They are a pair of guanacoes and a pair of llamas. Members of the animal cargo which Zoo Director William M. Mann brought back from South America last month, they've been undergoing scrutiny at a quarantine station all this time as a precaution against foot and mouth disease.

"This gives us every representative of the 'American camel' family except the vicuna," exulted Dr. Mann.

Another late arrival from the South American expedition was a tapir, which stayed behind in New York to have a scratched nose treated. Other newcomers yesterday were a pair of wombats and two pairs of black swans, all from Australia.

18 D. C. Playgrounds Open in Next 3 Days

All set for playground opening. Let's go, boys and girls!

First Six School Spots Will Admit Children Today With Experienced Supervisors From WPA Rolls in Charge

Padlocks will snap wide today on the gates to half a dozen District school playgrounds, opening to hundreds of youngsters an opportunity for supervised recreation, free from traffic perils.

Another six playgrounds are expected to welcome a happy host of children tomorrow, and a similar number of grounds will go into service Friday.

Grounds to be opened today will be designated from a list of ten, named by Lewis R. Barrett, head of the recreation commission, as serving congested areas where the need is "most critical." The ten are:

Grimke, Harrison, Curtis, Smallwood, Gales, Cleveland, Ambush, Bryan, Wormley and Bell.

Which six will be chosen depends on what workers the District WPA assigns today to playground service, Barrett pointed out last night. More than 60 men and women were interviewed yesterday and Monday, he said, and the new recreation commission has requisitioned 20 of these, all with previous experience as playground or nursery supervisors. U. S. Starts Hot Oil Probe In Louisiana

Biggest Blow-Off Since Teapot Dome, Industry Predicts

By the United Press.

New Orleans, July 18.—The biggest blowoff since Teapot Dome was privately predicted by oil men tonight as Federal agents investigated the possibility of violations of the "hot oil" act.

Those forecasts followed closely the indictment yesterday of Louis Lesage, contact man for a major oil company, on charges of using the mails to defraud. The indictment itself had nothing to do with the petroleum business, but many interpreted it as official disdain for persons high in the industry or high in the State administration.

While that indictment was being returned, Clifford Rowland, investigator for Secretary of the Interior Ickes, was making his first visit to New Orleans under instructions to inquire into reports of hot oil running.

Negotiations Dropped

The major oil companies have been primary complainants that hot oil was being run from the rapidly expanding petrolaum fields of Louisiana. Several of them have conducted their own investigations to determine from where apparent over-production was coming to flood the market, and to prevent unknowing purchases of petroleum produced in violation of State allowables.

One company, it was said, dropped negotiations for one Louisiana field when it became suspicious of production depletion. When purchase of the producing field was dropped the company began leasing land and drilling its own wells, a some-

Senate Votes Bill to Curb U. S. Agencies

Bureaus Think Selves Above Congress, Courts, Sponsors Complain

By the Associated Press

Legislation designed to curb and control the powers of scores of Federal agencies that now exercise both legislative and judicial powers was approved by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House.

The bill, introduced by Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, aims at standardization of regulations and court appeals from dozens of bureaus such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Wage and Hour Administration and National Labor Relations Board.

Senators who sponsored the bill protested in the accompanying report that many of these agencies "consider themselves above the statutes and show contemptuous disregard for both the Congress and the courts."

The proposed restrictions, the Senators added, were necessary unless "this country is to become first a parliamentary and then a totalitarian government with the States reduced to mere police provinces, and with both the legislative and judicial branches of this Government dominated by the administrative agencies."

The report complained that Congress had established scores of powerful agencies without consideration "to providing means and methods whereby the governors would be governed and the regulators could be regulated."

Provisions of the bill passed yesterday were recommended by the American Bar Association after three years' study.

Metropolitan Tenor Attacks Legality of National Anthem

A court attack on legality of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and on the right of Congress to declare it the national anthem was being prepared in New York last night by attorneys for Frederick Jagel, a Metropolitan Opera Company tenor who was born in America.

But the story was only a few hours old when, in Washington, the great-grandson of the song's author and veteran campaigner for its lawful rights, Lieut. Col. Francis Scott Key-Smith, once more entered the lists in its defense.

Furthermore, Col. Key-Smith was found an ally in Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who heard about the tenor's assault at her home in Annapolis.

Thomas Todarelli, Jagel's attorney, told the International News Service he would ask the Federal District Court to decide whether Congress had the right in 1931 to designate "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem at a time when the depression had the country on the ropes and too weak to make an outcry.

"Tomfoolery!" Key-Smith retorted: "There are a lot of people in this country who haven't very much to do, so they think of things to do and they usually think of something destructive. That's one of the chief troubles with this country."

"It seems a peculiar thing to me that Mr. Jagel should try to bring that out now so many years after Congress declared the song the national anthem and after the people had considered it as such so many years before that," said Mrs. Robert, who shied away from legal

President Disappointed

By Robert C. Albright

Senate Democratic and Republican leaders agreed at the White house last night to abandon all efforts for neutrality legislation at this session of Congress but to make the Administration bill the first order of business next session.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull maintained the need of neutrality action until the end. They reluctantly accepted the bipartisan leadership decision only after painting a pessimistic picture of the international situation and making their position clear.

Net effect of the unusual three-hour conference is that Congress is now free to adjourn, possibly in two or three weeks, without further consideration of the blockaded neutrality bill.

Leaders in Joint Statement

Both Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senate Minority Leader McNary accepted full responsibility in a joint statement, and a separate White House statement made clear the views of the President and Secretary Hull.

"The President and the Secretary of State," said the White House statement, "maintained the definite position that failure by the Senate to take action now would weaken the leadership of the United States in exercising its potent influence in the cause of preserving peace among other nations in the event of a new crisis in Europe between now and next January."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said the consensus on the part of those Senators present was that no action on neutrality legislation can be obtained in the Senate at the present session, and that a majority of the Senate would concur in that view.

First Matter Next Year

Both the White House and Barkley statements were released by Stephen Early, Secretary to the President, by prearrangement with the conferees.

Senator Minority Leader McNary concurred in Barkley's announced view.

Early said Barkley and McNary agreed "that a majority of the Senate would consider neutrality legislation at the beginning of the next session."

On leaving the White House, McNary said the decision was "perfect" with him, and Senator Borah, (Republican), of Idaho, nodded

He says: "Imagine eight singletons in one deal! Who would ever guess anything quite so bizarre? The swing was 2,290 points. Had we played the hand at five spades, doubled, we would have won 800 points, but actually our opponents made 1,490 points on six diamonds doubled.

"I was sitting South. Perhaps I should have said three spades instead of four clubs, but I wanted to show the length as well as strength in clubs; in addition, my partner might have bid somewhat psychically. However, when he rebid spades (not wanting to go to the six department in clubs), I knew that suit was all right.

"When West doubled I figured that we couldn't lose more than two tricks, so I made the first mistake by redoubling. West evidently realized the situation so he sacrificed (so he thought). I doubled and thereby got myself into a peck of trouble, for I had to lead!

"My partner had to have an ace, but which one? I felt reasonably sure it wasn't the ace of diamonds, for if so he would have doubled six. So it could be clubs or hearts.

"I didn't want to lay down the ace of spades because I thought that there being 10 or 11 spades between my partner and me I would probably find a void in either East or West. If that was so the best chance was to find the ace in my partner's hand. If it was clubs that might be the only trick we'd get, but if it was hearts he could return another heart, which I would trump, and then possibly we could get a spade trick for a set of two. So I led my singleton heart. The rest is obvious. (Ah, woe is me!)"

St. Mary's Crops Hit

Leonardtown, Md., July 16.—The long drought in May and June followed by a scarcity of rain, has caused serious damage to garden and truck in St. Mary's County. The potato crop is almost a failure.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

To the secretaries of the three men with a "passion for anonymity" . . . who necessarily must have more of a passion for that certain characteristic than the three men themselves . . . this column is forthwith inscribed.

The three men, of course, are the new Roosevelt aides—James Henry Rowe, jr., William H. McReynolds and Lauchlin Currie.

They are, in the same order, Miss Katherine Gilligan, Miss Gladys Callaway and Mrs. Eleanor Myer.

Miss Gilligan, who has been in the White House offices for two years, comes from Lawrence, Mass. Mrs. Myer, who has been with Mr. Currie since 1934, is a born and bred Washingtonian. And Miss Callaway, Mr. McReynolds' secretary, is from Lincoln, Nebr.

Statement: There's nothing in that rumor that Paul McNutt will use the Radio Division of the Office of Education for political propaganda. In fact, according to Miss Verna Phillips, of the audience preparation staff, no rumor could be sillier. What the office broadcasts throughout the country is strictly Government stuff without a single bias in it. And furthermore, its programs are under the direct supervision of the commissioner of education.

Also (we add) it must be good. It drew letters from 800,000 fans during the past year.

You'll be able to reel the hours away down by the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal once the Bureau of Fisheries and the National Park Service get into action. They're planning to make it fishermen's seventh heaven, when the recreational area west of Georgetown is finally opened for pleasure. Right now the wildlife technicians of the Park Service, in consultation with the Fisheries Bureau, are selecting what species will nibble your bait.

And particular attention will be given to working out a proper diet for the fish in question . . . just so they'll grow large enough to make a tale that's worth repeating.

The technicians are approaching this matter of fish selection from several angles. First they are examining fish already caught to find out just what kind of food they are eating now. Then they will keep a record of catches being made at present. In the meantime microscopes are busy in the Zoology Department of George Washington University examining the amount and types of underwater plant and animal life.

The National Park Service is paying most attention to the portion of the canal between Great Falls and Seneca, Md., known among the Izaak Waltons of the area as the stretch between Locks 20 and 23.

And, say the technicians, the study when completed will give a picture of the private life of a fish for the period of one year through the four seasons.

Patent Office employes will be taking their first outing en masse on Saturday, August 5. The idea grew from a series of "excursion ballots" in which votes were a landslide in favor of the party. Max Klivitsky, who is chairman for the event, says the Recreation Association will charter the play field and dance floor at Marshall Hall. The championship Patent Office softball team is ready to do or die with any and all comers; and in addition to that a game between clerks and examiners is promised.

Klivitsky is planning for ticket sales up to 1,000. And even more.

A swarm of southern bees has just taken off for the north. For the most part they traveled by fast express and motor truck. A few took a de luxe route by air mail.

Under a marketing program set up by the division of marketing and marketing agreements of the Department of Agriculture, they'll replace winter colonies of other bees from Maine to Montana.

Their Pullmans were wire cages supplied with toothy mixtures of sugar and water. Packages of them weighed from 3 to 5 pounds . . . and that means 5,000 bees per pound.

Drawing room compartments were furnished for the queen bees who made their royal progress in cages attended by a dozen or more nurse bees.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER XL.

PENNY AND JODY turned back to the campfire. It glowed comfortingly in the darkness. The midnight was still. The stars were so bright that when they looked away from the fire, they could see the water shining in the ponds. The air was cool. Judy wished that he could camp always like this, with his father. All that he lacked was Flag beside him.

M. K. Rawlings

Penny moved the torch across the Forresters. Buck threw his arm across his face, but slept on. His black beard lifted and fell with his heavy breathing.

"He blows near about as deep as a 'gator," Penny said.

THEY PILED more wood on the fire and returned to their pallets. They did not seem as comfortable as when they had first lain down on them. They shook up the moss and tried to flatten the pine boughs. Jody made a nest for himself in the middle and curled up kitten-wise. He lay a few luxurious moments watching the fresh blaze, then fell into a sleep as deep as the first.

The dogs were the first to awaken at daybreak. A fox had crossed under their noses, leaving its rank taint fresh on the air. Penny jumped up and caught them and tied them.

"We got bigger business today than fox," he told them.

From where he lay, Jody could look straight across into the sunrise. It was strange to see it on a level with his face. At home the thick scrub growth beyond the cleared fields obscured it. Now there was only a morning fog between. The sun did not seem to rise, but to sweep forward through a gray curtain. The curtain began to part its folds for the passing. The light was the thin pale gold of his mother's wedding ring. It grew brighter until he found himself blinking into the very face of the sun. The light September fog clung tenaciously a little while to the tops of the trees, as though resisting the tearing and destructive fingers of the sun. Then it, too, was gone and the whole east was the color of ripe guavas.

Penny called, "I need somebody to help find the panther oil, so I kin cook breakfast."

Buck and Mill-wheel sat up. They were stiff from their heavy sleep.

Penny said, "The 'gators and the foxes has been runnin' right acrost you fellers."

He told of the night's encounter.

Buck said, "You shore 'twsan't one o' them swamp skeeters you seed, after Doc Wilson's liquor?"

"A foot less, and I'd say mebbe. But not scarcely 6 feet."

"Oh, yes. Why, I went to sleep on a camp like this oncet, and I dreamed I heerd a skeeter buzzing', and when I waked up here was me and my bed both, hangin' up on a snag in a cypress swamp."

PENNY CALLED JODY to wash his face and hands at the pond's edge. When they reached the water, the stench turned them back.

Penny said comfortably, "Well, our dirt is nothin' but woodsmoke. Even your Ma wouldn't make you wash in that kind o' water."

Breakfast was the same as supper, except that there was no more swamp cabbage with panther oil. Again the Forresters substituted a draught of whisky for the missing coffee. Penny refused it. The pond water was not fit to drink, and Jody was thirsty. In a world so full of water it had occurred to no one to carry it.

Penny said, "You watch for a holler log is well off the ground, and has rain water in it. Rain water's allus fitten."

The fried and roasted venison and the hush-puppies did not taste as good as the night before. Penny cleaned up after breakfast. Grazing for the horses had been poor because the grasses were beaten flat. Jody gathered armfuls of moss for them and they ate it with relish. Breaking camp, mounting, turning the heads of the horses south, was the beginning of a fresh journey. Jody looked over his shoulder. The camp site was desolate. The charred logs, the gray ashes, were forlorn. The magic had died out with the flames of the camp-fire. The morning had been cool but the climbing sun began to heat the day. The earth steamed. The stench of the polluted waters was often overpowering.

Penny, in the lead, called back, "I wonder, kin the creeturs' bellies stand this rotten water?"

Buck and Mill-wheel shook their heads. The flood was unprecedented in the scrub. No man could tell what would come of it. The cavalcade continued steadily south.

Penny called to Jody, "Remember where we seed the whoopin' cranes dancin' so purty?"

Jody would not have recognized the prairie. It was a flat body of water, where even a crane might hesitate to wade and wander. Farther south was scrub again, then gallberry flats and bay-heads. But where marsh should be was a lake. They reined in the horses. It was as though they had camped overnight on some strange borderland and had now come into another country. Fish were leaping in the air from water that a week ago had been land. And here, after all the miles, were the bears—They were fishin with an abandon that made them unaware of, or indifferent to, the approach of horses and riders. Two or three dozen black forms moved through the waters, belly-deep. Fish jumped ahead of them.

Penny called, "Hit's mullet!"

BUT MULLETT, Jody thought, lived in the ocean. They lived in Lake George, with its touch of salt, its faint surge of tide. They lived in the tidal rivers, and in a few fresh-water rivers where flowing springs and swift currents pleased them as well as the ocean, and from which they might leap, as they were doing now, in tensile silver arcs.

Penny said, "Hit's plain as day. Lake George backed up Juniper Creek, and the creek backed up, and the spring overflowed onto the prairie. And here's mullet."

Buck said, "We got a new prairie then. Mullet Prairie. And look at them bears——"

Mill-wheel said, "Hit's bear heaven. Well, men, how many do we want?"

He sighted his rifle experimentally. Jody blinked his eyes. He had never seen so many bears at once in his life, except in dreams.

Penny said, "Don't let's be hogs about it, even if 'tis bears."

Buck said, "Four'll do us for a while."

"One'll do the Baxters. Jody, you want to kill a bear?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well—Now men, if it's agreeable, we'll pick our shots here and spread out a leetle. Somebody'll be obliged to git a second shot. Mebbe three, do Jody miss."

He assigned Jody the closest shot. It was a large fellow, probably a male.

Penny said, "Now Jody, you ride to the left a mite, 'til you git a bead on his cheek. When I give the word, ever'body'll fire. If he's moved by that time, take the best head shot you kin git. And if his head's down, and hid from you, aim for his middle and one of us'll finish him after."

Buck and Mill-wheel indicated their choices and the group spread cautiously in both directions. Penny lifted his hand. They halted. Jody was trembling so violently that when he lifted his gun he could see nothing in front of him but a blur of water. He forced himself to steady his aim. His bear was quartering from him, but he was able to draw a bead on the left cheek from the rear. Penny dropped his hand. Guns barked. There was a second bombardment from Buck and Mill-wheel. The horses reared a little. Jody could not remember having pulled the trigger. But 50 yards in front of him a black body that had been upright, lay half-sunk in the water.

Penny shouted, "Nice shootin', boy!" and rode forward.

THE REMAINING BEARS were scrambling across the swamp like paddle boats, churning the water behind them. It would take a long shot now to bring one down. Again Jody was amazed at the speed of the bulky bodies. The first shot of each man had been accurate and deadly. Buck and Mill-wheel had only wounded on their second shots. The dogs, kept at heel, broke into bedlam. They barked in a frenzy and dashed into water. It was too deep for wading and too thick with growth for swimming. They were forced to retreat, shrill with frustration. The men rode in close on the two wounded animals. They fired again and the game lay still. The unharmed bears were vanishing before their eyes. No game was quicker or cleverer.

Buck said, "Now we never figgered on gittin' these scapers outen the water."

Jody had eyes only for his own kill. He could not believe that he had done it. Here lay food for the Baxter table for a fortnight, and it was of his providing.

Mill-wheel said, "We best go back home and git a yoke o' oxen."

Penny said, "Tell you. You got five to haul and we ain't got but the one. Now I'm satisfied with the hunt, and I'm satisfied we all know for a while where to look for the game. Do it suit you, you he'p me and Jody with this un o' his, and leave me keep this horse a day-two, and we'll jest go on our way and you go yours."

"Suits us."

Penny said, "You'd think men our age would of thought to of throwed in a rope."

"Who'd of guessed the hull blasted scrub was under water?"

Buck called, "Our legs is longer'n you Baxters. You stay in the saddle."

Penny was already on his feet. The water was over his knees. Jody was ashamed to stay on his horse as though he were a child. He, too, slid off into the water. The bottom was firm. He helped drag his bear to high ground. The Forresters seemed unaware that it was important that he had shot it, for it was his first. Penny touched his shoulder, and that was praise enough. The bear would weigh better than 300 pounds. They agreed that it was best to halve it lengthwise so that the portions might easily be thrown over the rumps of the two horses. They skinned it and were surprised at its fatness, when deer and panther were so lean. The bears must have fed here through the latter days of the storm.

Old Caesar jumped and shied when the half of the long frame was thrown across him. The taint of the hide was not to his liking. He had smelled the rank odor too often through alarmed nights at the clearing. Once a bear had climbed into the lot and was in the stall with him before Penny, awakened by his whinnying, had come to him. The Forrester horse was better able to carry the extra load in any case and the bear hide was added to Penny's portion. Buck and Mill-wheel turned their horses' heads toward home.

Penny called, "Turn your hames backward and the oxen kin haul all the load to oncet. Come see us."

"You come."

Rogge Holds Parley With All U. S. Agents Investigating Scandal

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, July 16.—Assistant United States Attorney General O. John Rogge conferred here today with Federal agents who have entered the State in the wake of scandal that erupted when Dr. James Monroe Smith resigned as president of the State University and disappeared.

"I came here at the request of Attorney General Frank Murphy to aid in investigations of alleged violations of Federal income tax laws, alleged WPA fraud and other alleged violations of Federal criminal statutes," Rogge said.

Among conferees was District Attorney Rene A. Viosca, who has been aiding a Federal grand jury investigation at New Orleans. Six assistant district attorneys and investigators for the WPA, the PWA and the Department of Justice, Interior and Treasury sat in on the conference, which some observers believed preliminary to wholesale Federal grand jury indictments.

Meanwhile, dismissal of Mark W. Monget, WPA construction superintendent at L. S. U., led to a charge of intimidation of WPA employes and protection of "higher-ups."

Referring to his dismissal by State WPA Administrator J. H. Crutcher, Monget said:

"I was discharged immediately after it became known that I had given a full and complete statement of everything I knew to Federal investigators. My summary dismissal is intended as a warning to other employes and possible witnesses before the Federal grand jury, and to let them see what will happen to them if they tell the truth."

Leche Testifies Today

WPA officials refused comment. Crutcher said when he discharged Monget yesterday that WPA Investigator Paul Hansen has advised him that Monget "had knowledge of misuse of materials and WPA labor on L. S. U. projects."

Federal authorities already have arrested some former university construction officials and a WPA foreman there on charges of diversion of WPA materials and labor to private use.

Former Gov. Richard W. Leche has been summoned to testify before the Parish grand jury here tomorrow on university affairs. Also summoned were Associate Justice John Fournet and Superintendent of State Police Louis F. Guerre.

Gov. Dickinson Hopes Attack On High Life May Bring Reform

Tells His Sunday School Class He Would Make Stronger Statement Second Time; Urges Mothers to Set Examples of Morality

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, Mich., July 16.—Gov. Luren D. Dickson, in the role of Sunday school teacher, told his adult class today he hoped his stories of gay drinking parties at the recent National Conference of Governors at Albany might result in a Nation-wide reform movement.

The 80-year-old chief executive, who is retiring president of the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan, spoke in the little white frame Eaton Center Methodist Church near here, addressing men and women, some of whom have been his Sunday school pupils for more than two decades.

"I Made Strong Statement"

"I made a strong statement that went across the continent," he declared. "It gives me the greatest satisfaction I have ever had in my life because I made a start. It is men and women in important positions who must make the start."

Discussing with newspapermen his charges of "high life" at the governors' conference, Dickinson said:

"If I had it to do over again, I would make it stronger." He added sharp retorts and denials from governors and other guests at the conference were "just what I expected —I won't reply to them."

To his Sunday school class Dickinson said:

"I saw young girls drinking. It was such a common affair no one seemed to have any thought of its effect. Mothers set the example for their daughters, but they didn't tell their girls of their danger.

Saw Wholesale Danger

"We had one of the finest gatherings (at the governor's conference), but you can't gather in any such proportions but you have devils there. There was wholesale danger. I have studied the vice investigating commission's report in Chicago."

Women members of the class nodded in assent as the Governor told them: "We'll never put the liquor traffic out of commission and get it away from our young people until the mothers set the example."

Groups of Sunday school members gathered early at the church, awaiting the governor-teacher's arrival. Across the road sheep bawled in a corral and a little girl in overalls tugged at the halter of a balky calf.

Glasgow Mayor Urges U. S. Defy Bully Nations

New York, July 16 (AP).—Patrick Joseph Dollan, lord mayor of Glasgow and the first head of a Scottish city to visit the United States, said on his arrival today that the United States and Great Britain should "make it clear" that they would not be "bullied or intimidated" by other nations.

Sanita Lodge Crowd Thins to Under 3,000

Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, July 16.—Fewer than 3,000 guests showed up today at Sanita Lodge, and traffic moved easily through the corridors and living rooms of the gray stone chateau, formerly the estate of the late Otto H. Kahn, now a retreat for employes of the New York City Sanitation Department.

Carmelite Pays Jubilee Tribute To Catholic U.

Dr. Bradley, of N. Y., Lauds 'Unrivaled Greatness' of University

Massed at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception after a picturesque procession marking the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, more than 500 students and members of various orders yesterday morning heard the Rev. Dr. Stanislaus Bradley, O. Carm., of New York City, felicitate Catholic University on its golden jubilee.

Preacher at the solemn mass of Thanksgiving, conducted according to the ancient Carmelite rite of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem, he declared that "we hail your glorious achievements of half a century and your unrivaled greatness which has shed so much luster on the Catholic Church in America."

Reviews Procession

Earlier, the cleric stood on the steps of the shrine with the Most Rev. Hilary Doswald, prior general of the Carmelite order, here from Rome on a tour of the order's houses, and celebrant of the mass; the Very Rev. Monsignor Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University; the Rev. Celestine Fitzpatrick, O. Carm., prior of St. Elias' House of Studies, arch-priest, and Father Timothy Donoghue, S. A., and reviewed the procession, in which a statue of Our Lady of Mount Carmel was borne on a rose-trimmed base by members of the Carmelite, Augustinian, Franciscan and Dominican orders.

Describing the Carmelite significance of the day, Dr. Bradley pointed out that since 1609, the order had celebrated the "solemn commemoration of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel," an occasion "intimately connected with the badge of the Carmelite Order—the Brown Scapular of Our Lady."

On the 16th of July, 1251, Our Lady appeared to Saint Simon Stock in the university town of Cambridge, holding in her hands the Scapular of the Order, the preacher said. Handing him the Scapular, she had assured Saint Simon that "they who shall die clothed with this habit will not suffer eternal fire. It is a sign of salvation, a safeguard in perils, and the pledge of my special protection to the end of time."

Province's Diamond Jubilee

Dr. Bradley also emphasized that the celebration marked the fiftieth anniversary of the Irish Carmelites coming to the United States, and the diamond jubilee of the Chicago province, and that Mgr. James McMahon, whose name was long associated with Catholic University, was instrumental in bringing the Irish Carmelites to New York City.

Climaxing the rites of mass, Father Doswald invoked the Papal Blessing. The Very Rev. George Klasinski, O. Carm., was deacon, and Father Edgar Newman, O. Carm., served as sub-deacon.

FDIC Warns Higher Levy To Be Needed

Easing of Liquidation Compulsion, Avoiding Capital Drain, Urged

By the Associated Press

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation warned Congress yesterday that unless it gets new powers to prevent dissipation of bank capital, it will have to increase eventually the present one-twelfth of 1 per cent assessment on deposits of insured banks.

The corporation, which guarantees deposits up to $5,000 per depositor in 13,661 banks, said in its annual report:

Avoid Sacrifice Sales

"The corporation believes that provision will have to be made for assumption of losses in excess of the present rate of assessment, unless deposit insurance is accompanied by supervisory action to prevent the dissipation of bank capital through excessive dividends without provision for losses, and by provision for relieving the banks of the necessity, to which they have been subjected in the past because of heavy withdrawals and inadequate rediscount facilities, of liquidating assets at sacrifice values during periods of crisis.

"If the cost of deposit insurance is to be kept low, bank supervision cannot be weakened or deflected from its primary objective—the maintenance of sound banks."

The corporation made plain, however, its warning was strictly precautionary and did not reflect any probability of heavy bank losses.

Low Loss Rate Indicated

In fact, it made public a tabulation estimating that on the last date the banks were examined their assets were valued at 98.5 per cent of "book value." In other words, the banks faced probable losses on poor securities or uncollectible loans amounting to only 1.5 per cent total assets.

Last year, the corporation said, 74 insured banks failed or were merged with sound banks to prevent failures, and 99.95 per cent of the 201,437 deposits of the closed banks were paid off in full. Total payments amounted to $30,465,000, for which the FDIC was reimbursed, in part, from the assets of the closed banks, the FDIC loss being 14.5 per cent of the total payments.

100 Tenderfeet Boys Off to Camp At Mt. Victoria

One hundred sun browned veterans of two weeks at camp will exchange places today with five-score tenderfeet at Camp Reeder, Mount Victoria, Md., camp of the Boys Club of Washington.

Officials from the Rotary, Optimist and Lido Clubs, who are unofficially adding financial support to the Community Chest-supported organization, will supervise the shift at the Southeast Branch headquarters of the Boys Club. Some will drive the new campers to Camp Reeder, and bring home the youngsters who formed the season's first batch of two-week campers.

Cost of supporting each boy for the two-week term is $8. Some of the boys can pay only part, some none. The three clubs make up the difference and hope to enable at least 400 Washington youngsters to enjoy the camp before the season ends.

Geophysics Union To Meet in D. C.

The International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics will meet in Washington from September 4 to 15, the Smithsonian Institution announced yesterday. The meeting will be the first held in this country. The union meets once every three years.

The union is made up of groups of associations representing geophysical and geodetic sciences, gathering to exchange information and plan international co-operative ventures on subjects of world-wide scope. Dr. C. C. Abbot, Smithsonian Institution secretary; Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, curator of marine invertebrates of the National Museum, and L. B. 'Ickes Village' Urged as Name of Spaniards' Haven

Paris, July 16 (AP).—Officials of the International Conference for Aid to Spanish Refugees proposed today that one of France's southern "deserted villages" be renamed Ickes and peopled with refugees from Spain.

Paul Perrin, French chairman of the resettlement committee of the conference, asked that such a project be financed by the American branch as a tribute to Secretary of Interior Ickes.

The conference adopted a four-point program calling for "material and moral" aid to improve the condition of refugees in French concentration camps, eventual evacuation of all camps, resettlement of refugees in other lands and resettlement of International Brigade volunteers.

Hull Is Urged To Demand Nazi Propaganda End

New York, July 16, (AP).—L. M. Birkhead, national director of the Friends of Democracy, Inc., today urged Secretary Hull to demand of the German ambassador an immediate cessation of alleged Nazi propaganda in the United States.

Citing numerous examples of what he described as "official Nazi propaganda . . . sponsored by and emanating from official sources" Birkhead declared it was being shipped into the United States "via German vessels."

Birkhead declared the propaganda assailed American traditions of liberty, undermined the country's institutions and insulted public officials.

D. C. Bartenders Give Union Aide Farewell Party

Washington bartenders took a day off yesterday and spent it on the other side of the counter.

Occasion for the festival, conducted in a satisfying atmosphere of malt and yeast, was a farewell party for Charles E. Sands, resigning executive secretary of the Bartenders' Union, "Old" Local 75. Festivities began at noon in the basement of the Pythian Temple and lasted through several Dutch lunches, quantities of amateur and professional entertainment and several hours of dancing, until the iced tea gave out.

Sands resigned to accept a position with the international union. His successor is Claude S. Martin.

Alaska's Mining Output Tops All But War Years

Output of Alaska's mines in 1938 was estimated by the Interior Department yesterday at $28,607,000, the greatest of any year excepting 1915-17 wartime production.

Last year's output swelled to $777,818,000 the total of mineral wealth the Territory has produced since its purchase by the United States from Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000, the department said.

In comparison with 1937, there was an increase in both quantity and value of gold and platinum; an increase in quantity and decrease in value of lead and a decrease of both quantity and value of silver, copper, tin and miscellaneous metals.

Pantry Shelves Full of Ants?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep shelves and cupboards free of food particles, sugar, etc. That's what attracts ants. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it in corners and along the back edges of shelves. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. Build a powder barrier between the ants' nests and places where they feed. As they crawl through this powder they will pick up enough killing particles to kill them. Repeat these directions at regular intervals, and your pantry will soon be free of ants.

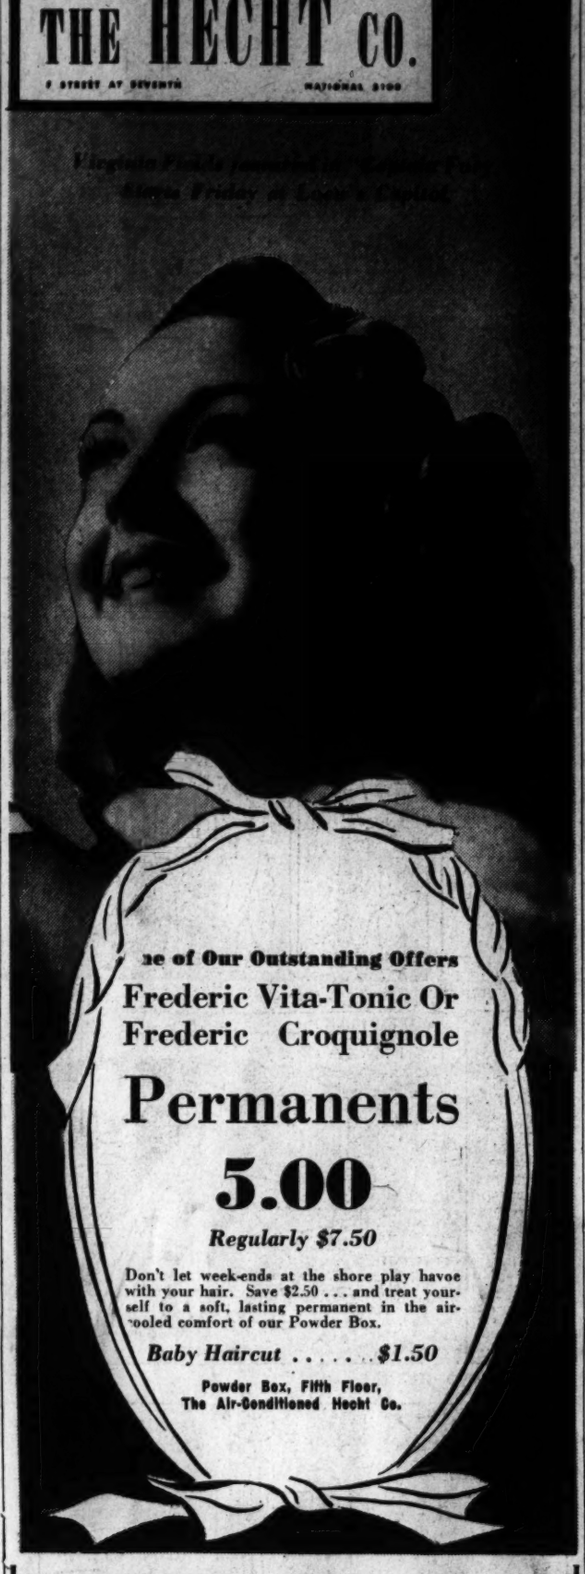

Bee Brand really kills ants, roaches and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the home. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

NOTE: You can also kill ants and roaches, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

Neutrality Fight Abandoned Until 1940

Wage-Hour Law Changes Are Spiked By President

Cox Unwilling to Gamble on Veto of Barden Bill on Farm Industries Workers

By John B. Oakes.

President Roosevelt yesterday apparently killed a bill proposing sweeping amendments of the wage-hour law when he asserted at a press conference that it would mean unconscionably low wage rates for the 2,000,000 poorest paid industrial employes of the Nation.

The measure, offered by Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, goes far beyond Administration desires for alteration of the wage-hour law by exempting certain classes of white-collar workers in many industries closely related to agriculture.

As soon as he heard of President Roosevelt's statement, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, chief proponent of the Barden bill in the powerful Rules Committee, told The Post that he would no longer press for passage of the Barden measure, but now favored a compromise instead.

Without sanction of the Rules Committee, it would be practically impossible at the present time to bring the Barden bill to the floor. Therefore, it was thought, Cox's refusal to fly in the teeth of the President meant committee death for the Barden amendments.

Veto Foreseen

However, a bitter fight over less drastic changes in the wage-hour law is still in the offing. Even though the Barden proposals in their entirety may be lost, it is almost certain that the conservative Southern Democrats, allied with the Republicans, will endeavor to obtain more extensive modifications of the present law than the Administration desires.

"If this statement (of the President) means that the Barden bill would meet with a veto," said Cox, "then it would be foolish to further contend for the adoption of the measure. Therefore, I would counsel those pressing for amendments to consult with the President, find out what amendments he will agree to, adopt these and stop the controversy for the time being." Cox clearly indicated that he thought a veto was in prospect if the Barden amendments were passed.

Shadow of Coming Battle

Prior to the President's statement, a shadow of the coming battle over the wage-hour law was cast in a meeting of the Rules Committee yesterday.

Cox, angered at refusal of Chairman Sabath to set a date for taking up the Barden bill, snapped at Sabath:

"You're going to receive a terrible shock. You can't shut this committee off; it's not going to be left to you to hold up bills before this committee."

He told reporters, in Sabath's hearing, that the committee would grant no more rules until it granted one on the Barden bill. Later, Cox said he had been speaking in jest.

After he had been informed of the President's stand on the wage-hour question, Cox still further revised his original position by stating he had no intention of holding up any other legislation in an effort to secure wage-hour amendments.

Nevertheless, it was still certain that Cox and his group would strive for more drastic revision of the law than that originally proposed by Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee, seconded by Andrews.

Picks Eve of What Was to Have Been Her Wedding Day for Death in Potomac; Man Lowered on Rope Saves Her

Twenty-year-old Ella Sisk was to have been married today. Instead, she was in Gallinger Hospital, after a heroic rescue following her plunge off the Highway Bridge, 40 feet above the Potomac River.

Heartsick and despairing, the young woman jumped after plans for a second marriage had gone awry and when there appeared to be no balm for her grief over her husband's death last February and her only child's death less than three weeks ago.

Mrs. Sisk, who lives with her brother-in-law and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Sisk, at 1404 Duke street, Alexandria, Va., jumped only a few feet away from Alexandria police who learned of her intent and were attempting to stop her. She was rescued when a passing motorist was lowered to the water by a rope and supported her for 25 minutes until they were towed to safety.

Man Lowered by Rope

The rescuer was Arthur Parker, 43, of 1206 Tenth street northwest, a clerk in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who was driving by with his wife. He was tied to a rope commandeered from a passing truck and lowered by police.

According to Lucian Sisk, his sister-in-law's despondency began with her husband's death. Her subsequent engagement was broken off and the crowning blow came when her 3-year-old child died of whooping cough July 6.

Last night, Sisk said, the young woman rose from her evening meal and announced that she was going out.

"When will you come back?" Sisk asked her.

Family Followed Her

"Maybe tonight, maybe not until tomorrow or maybe never," Sisk quoted her as replying.

Alarmed, Mr. and Mrs. Sisk followed her in their car. The young woman had taken a cab, driven to an Alexandria drug store, where, it was discovered later, she had sent two telegrams—one to the family with whom she lived and one to a Washington youth. They told of plans to kill herself at the Washington Airport.

She entered the cab again, and with her relatives following, rode to what Sisk said was the address of her former fiance. There was no

Walkout Cut to Third: Roosevelt Dashes Hope Of Pay Restoration

WPA Strike Collapse

By International News Service.

Collapse of the WPA strike was indicated yesterday when the Works Progress Administration reported all but 26,511 strikers had returned to their jobs.

Those still out were estimated at only about a third of the number previously participating in walkouts from WPA projects in protest against abolition of the prevailing wage for skilled workers.

At the same time, President Roosevelt, at his press conference, dashed American Federation of Labor hopes he would issue an executive order reinstating the prevailing wage on projects authorized or under construction July 1.

President Doubts Authority

Mr. Roosevelt said that, reading the law as a layman, he doubted Congress intended the administrator to change the act, except in unusual or unthought-of circumstances. The strike, he indicated, did not fall in the category of an unthought-of circumstance.

Asked how far the Minneapolis strike disorders might go before Federal intervention, Mr. Roosevelt advised his questioner to read the Federal Constitution.

WPA Commissioner Harrington said regional reports disclosed operations to be "normal in most States and the outlook good for early resumption of normal operations in most States."

The WPA said Illinois had 13,028 on strike; Minnesota, 4,050; New Jersey, 1,309; Ohio, 1,196; Pennsylvania, 1,364, and New York City, 1,720.

Dismissals since inception of the walkout were: New York City, 12,200; Illinois, 8,094; Minnesota, 5,871; New Jersey, 725; Ohio, 1,109.

Michigan Beauty Gaily Braves 'Evils' Her Governor Deplored

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—The most enlivening visitor New York's had in many a day, "Miss Michigan Aviation"—she's 23 and very pretty—smiled merrily over the brim of a water glass today and said: "I'm afraid I may have just a teeny hangover."

Miss Sheridan.

She sipped only two highballs at a night club last night, so the hangover was just a quip of Miss Willo Sheridan, goodwill ambassadress of the Michigan aircraft industry, who arrived in the wake of a blast of criticism from Gov. Luren D. Dickinson, of Michigan, about the evils he saw on a trip East.

But the opposing views of the 86-year-old Governor and titian-haired Willo about the perils that beset "unprotected girls in anything smattering of high life" swung into wider divergence tonight, with Willo donning her prettiest evening gown for another whirl in some gay night spots.

She had seen quite a bit, she said, since she arrived for a week's visit, and she still felt safe.

Willo's night clubbing evoked a curt "no comment" from Gov. Dickinson, who had issued a statement after his trip East to the annual Conference of Governors warning mothers and daughters "of the dangerous proximity to a hellish brink

Witnesses Say Eakin Voted for Landon; Affidavits Cited Show Secrecy Violated

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday directed an investigation into management of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park under Supt. J. Ross Eakin, and at the same time called for an inquiry into a reported "smearing" of Eakin's 1936 election ballot to ascertain how he had voted.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, long has sought to have Eakin removed. McKellar's resolution for the inquiry into his management of the park twice has been blocked by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, but Vandenberg withdrew his opposition yesterday when McKellar added provision for the "ballot-marking" investigation and agreed that the Senate Public Lands committee, rather than a special group of five, shall make the investigation.

Secretary of Interior Ickes has vigorously defended Eakin.

When McKellar sought to amend the Interior Department appropriation bill to prevent payment of Eakin, Ickes wrote to the Senate saying McKellar's charges of gross mismanagement involved only bookkeeping and accounting errors.

Say He Voted for Landon

Ickes reported further that three election officials at Gatlinburg, Tenn., had made affidavits that they smeared with red ink Eakin's ballot in the 1936 presidential election so they could identify it and later gave it to a Knoxville attorney who transmitted it to McKellar.

The election officials said they saw Eakin's ballot and that he voted for Alf Landon, Republican nominee, for President.

Eakin made an affidavit saying he voted for President Roosevelt and that any ballot marked for Landon was not his.

McKellar first demanded Eakin's removal several months ago on the grounds that Eakin was a West Virginia Republican and that he "got around" civil service regulations to appoint Republicans to his force.

Ickes ordered an investigation and said later that Eakin had complied with all civil service regulations and that he was "doing a good job."

Transfer Canceled

Repeated criticism from McKellar led the park service to direct Eakin's transfer to the superintendency of the Shenandoah National Park, but Ickes later canceled the order of transfer when he said McKellar objected to Eakin's continuing in the Government service at all.

The committee was authorized to spend up to $9,000 for the investigation and to report to the Senate at the next session.

Jury Dooms Burgunder, Slayer of 2

Mother Near Collapse As Father's Plea for Insanity Ruling Fails

By the Associated Press.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 18.—A stern jury accepted 22-year-old Robert Burgunder's challenge today and ordered him executed in the lethal gas chamber for murder.

Without a sign of emotion, Burgunder listened to the verdict, which was the jurors' answer to his assertion that he "should be given the death penalty" if his story that an unidentified "pal" killed two automobile salesmen was untrue.

The jury, which sat through an 18-day trial, rejected his story and the plea of his father, Robert M. Burgunder, Seattle, Wash., attorney and associate counsel, that the boy was "born with a defective brain."

The youth's frail mother, Mrs. Ruth Burgunder, of Alhambra, Calif., was on the verge of collapse after the verdict was read. His gray-haired father sat tight-lipped and weary.

Burgunder was convicted of the murder of Jack Peterson, Phoenix

Pilot Killed, 2 Coast Guardsmen Hurt in Air Crash

Fernandina, Fla., July 18 (U.P.)—Pilot F. Schweining was killed and two other Coast Guardsmen were injured today when their plane crashed while attempting to take off here.

Thomas S. McKenzie and Frank W. Dryden were the injured.

Witnesses said the plane struck a buoy as it was taxiing down the harbor for the take off. The ship, the CG-147, sank shortly after striking the buoy. A pleasure boat which was nearby in the harbor rescued McKenzie and Dryden before the plane sank.

Coast Guardsmen in a cutter lifted the plane, beached it and recovered Schweining's body.

Rain Gives D. C. Its Coolest Day Of the Month

Rain yesterday gave Washington residents their coolest day of the month, with the mercury dropping from 73 at midnight to 64 at 3 p. m., the Weather Bureau reported. A little less than a third of an inch of rain was recorded.

The peak mark of 73 was the lowest maximum recorded this month, only 1 degree above the record for the date, set in 1910.

The weather today will be mostly cloudy and somewhat warmer, but no rain is expected after dawn. Tomorrow will be fair, the Weather Bureau said.

Two Guanacoes And Pair of Llamas Join Zoo Colony

Four beasts, so gentle they even apologize to their food before biting it, finally reached the Washington Zoo yesterday after narrowly escaping deportation as undesirable aliens.

They are a pair of guanacoes and a pair of llamas. Members of the animal cargo which Zoo Director William M. Mann brought back from South America last month, they've been undergoing scrutiny at a quarantine station all this time as a precaution against foot and mouth disease.

"This gives us every representative of the 'American camel' family except the vicuna," exulted Dr. Mann.

Another late arrival from the South American expedition was a tapir, which stayed behind in New York to have a scratched nose treated. Other newcomers yesterday were a pair of wombats and two pairs of black swans, all from Australia.

First Six School Spots Will Admit Children Today With Experienced Supervisors From WPA Rolls in Charge

Padlocks will snap wide today on the gates to half a dozen District school playgrounds, opening to hundreds of youngsters an opportunity for supervised recreation, free from traffic perils.

Another six playgrounds are expected to welcome a happy host of children tomorrow, and a similar number of grounds will go into service Friday.

Grounds to be opened today will be designated from a list of ten, named by Lewis R. Barrett, head of the recreation commission, as serving congested areas where the need is "most critical." The ten are:

Grimke, Harrison, Curtis, Smallwood, Gales, Cleveland, Ambush, Bryan, Wormley and Bell.

Which six will be chosen depends on what workers the District WPA assigns today to playground service, Barrett pointed out last night. More than 60 men and women were interviewed yesterday and Monday, he said, and the new recreation commission has requisitioned 20 of these, all with previous experience as playground or nursery supervisors. U. S. Starts Hot Oil Probe In Louisiana

Biggest Blow-Off Since Teapot Dome, Industry Predicts

By the United Press.

New Orleans, July 18.—The biggest blowoff since Teapot Dome was privately predicted by oil men tonight as Federal agents investigated the possibility of violations of the "hot oil" act.

Those forecasts followed closely the indictment yesterday of Louis Lesage, contact man for a major oil company, on charges of using the mails to defraud. The indictment itself had nothing to do with the petroleum business, but many interpreted it as official disdain for persons high in the industry or high in the State administration.

While that indictment was being returned, Clifford Rowland, investigator for Secretary of the Interior Ickes, was making his first visit to New Orleans under instructions to inquire into reports of hot oil running.

Negotiations Dropped

The major oil companies have been primary complainants that hot oil was being run from the rapidly expanding petrolaum fields of Louisiana. Several of them have conducted their own investigations to determine from where apparent over-production was coming to flood the market, and to prevent unknowing purchases of petroleum produced in violation of State allowables.

One company, it was said, dropped negotiations for one Louisiana field when it became suspicious of production depletion. When purchase of the producing field was dropped the company began leasing land and drilling its own wells, a some-

Bureaus Think Selves Above Congress, Courts, Sponsors Complain

By the Associated Press.

Legislation designed to curb and control the powers of scores of Federal agencies that now exercise both legislative and judicial powers was approved by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House.

The bill, introduced by Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, aims at standardization of regulations and court appeals from dozens of bureaus such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Wage and Hour Administration and National Labor Relations Board.

Senators who sponsored the bill protested in the accompanying report that many of these agencies "consider themselves above the statutes and show contemptuous disregard for both the Congress and the courts."

The proposed restrictions, the Senators added, were necessary unless "this country is to become first a parliamentary and then a totalitarian government with the States reduced to mere police provinces, and with both the legislative and judicial branches of this Government dominated by the administrative agencies."

The report complained that Congress had established scores of powerful agencies without consideration "to providing means and methods whereby the governors would be governed and the regulators could be regulated."

Provisions of the bill passed yesterday were recommended by the American Bar Association after three years' study.

Metropolitan Tenor Attacks Legality of National Anthem

A court attack on legality of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and on the right of Congress to declare it the national anthem was being prepared in New York last night by attorneys for Frederick Jagel, a Metropolitan Opera Company tenor who was born in America.

But the story was only a few hours old when, in Washington, the great-grandson of the song's author and veteran campaigner for its lawful rights, Lieut. Col. Francis Scott Key-Smith, once more entered the lists in its defense.

Furthermore, Col. Key-Smith was found an ally in Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who heard about the tenor's assault at her home in Annapolis.

Thomas Todarelli, Jagel's attorney, told the International News Service he would ask the Federal District Court to decide whether Congress had the right in 1931 to designate "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem at a time when the depression had the country on the ropes and too weak to make an outcry.

"Tomfoolery!" Key-Smith retorted: "There are a lot of people in this country who haven't very much to do, so they think of things to do and they usually think of something destructive. That's one of the chief troubles with this country."

"It seems a peculiar thing to me that Mr. Jagel should try to bring that out now so many years after Congress declared the song the national anthem and after the people had considered it as such so many years before that," said Mrs. Robert, who shied away from legal

By Robert C. Albright

Senate Democratic and Republican leaders agreed at the White house last night to abandon all efforts for neutrality legislation at this session of Congress but to make the Administration bill the first order of business next session.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull maintained the need of neutrality action until the end. They reluctantly accepted the bipartisan leadership decision only after painting a pessimistic picture of the international situation and making their position clear.

Net effect of the unusual three-hour conference is that Congress is now free to adjourn, possibly in two or three weeks, without further consideration of the blockaded neutrality bill.

Leaders in Joint Statement

Both Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senate Minority Leader McNary accepted full responsibility in a joint statement, and a separate White House statement made clear the views of the President and Secretary Hull.

"The President and the Secretary of State," said the White House statement, "maintained the definite position that failure by the Senate to take action now would weaken the leadership of the United States in exercising its potent influence in the cause of preserving peace among other nations in the event of a new crisis in Europe between now and next January."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said the consensus on the part of those Senators present was that no action on neutrality legislation can be obtained in the Senate at the present session, and that a majority of the Senate would concur in that view.

First Matter Next Year

Both the White House and Barkley statements were released by Stephen Early, Secretary to the President, by prearrangement with the conferees.

Senator Minority Leader McNary concurred in Barkley's announced view.

Early said Barkley and McNary agreed "that a majority of the Senate would consider neutrality legislation at the beginning of the next session."

On leaving the White House, McNary said the decision was "perfect" with him, and Senator Borah, (Republican), of Idaho, nodded

The condemned man watched the executioner wind up, make some fancy flourishes with the big sword, and then swing swiftly at the victim's head. But the victim felt no pain.

"I thought you were such an expert executioner," taunted the victim. "If you're going to cut my head off, why don't you do it?"

"Just try," said the executioner, "to shake your head!"

Tourists from inland who visit Washington are push-overs for the seafood so abundant here. Some of them even eat it for breakfast during their sojourn.

One of the Capital's most picturesque sections is the waterfront, where they can eat on a balcony overlooking the fish wharves.

* * * *

They even like the smell. Below the balcony hover small Negro boys, ready to scramble for pennies, nickels and dimes tossed down by lordly Congressmen and tourists to the hard pavement. To encourage generosity the lads sing gay songs, but with lugubriously serious expressions on their faces, as they watch for the flash of a coin. . . . The more rugged individualists get the most pennies.

House Passes Cotton Minimum Bale Bill

Senate Boils At Hint Hatch Bill Is Blocked

Wiley Charges Farm Workers Already Are Campaigning for 1940

By the United Press.

The usually staid Senate became a temporary "No Man's Land" of the 1940 White House campaign yesterday when Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, charged that the Administration high command has ordered Federal farm workers to start campaigning for a Democratic President.

The same high command, he declared, is attempting to block the Hatch bill which, as approved by the Senate, would prevent all but policy making Federal officials from taking part in political campaigns or conventions. The measure, emasculated by the House Judiciary Committee, comes up for action in that chamber tomorrow.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and (Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, an ardent New Dealer, took wrathy exception to the stocky Senator's charges. When Wiley read an unidentified communication saying that agricultural adjustment workers were being compelled by their superiors to attend "political picnics," Minton leaped to his feet.

Tempers Explode

"If the Senator knows of any picnic being held on the public pay roll it is his duty to tell us who is responsible for it," he cried.

"I've been too busy attending to the picnic in the Senate," Wiley retorted.

"Do you think this has been a picnic?" Barkley interrupted.

"It's a picnic, and sometimes a farce, when we spend money like drunken sailors," Wiley replied.

Frayed tempers exploded and for several minutes the chamber resembled anything but the "club of gentlemen." The shelling became so intense at the one point that Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, reminded his colleagues that they were violating Senate rules by not addressing each other properly.

Barkley Hits Lobbying

Then he plunged into the scrap. Wiley had challenged Democrats to go down "to the big boss and ask him to put pressure on to get the Hatch bill passed," and openly accused the "well-oiled machine of the high command" of trying to block it. Clark interrupted to say that in 1931 every Republican postmaster was warned he would be fired if he didn't get out and work for Herbert Hoover.

"That may or may not be true," Wiley said angrily." However, I say: 'A plague on both your houses.' Let's clean them both and keep them clean . . ."

"I agree with that!" exclaimed Senator Lundeen, (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Barkley declared that the Senate had done its duty when it passed the Hatch bill. He added he hoped and "feels sure that the House will pass it." At the same time he questioned propriety of some Senators, whom he did not name, in going over to the House to "lobby for it."

Refugee Group To Hear Reports On Migration Plan

London, July 18.—The full intergovernmental committee on political refugees will open a two-day meeting in London tomorrow to hear a report on six months of efforts to find means of resettling and refinancing abroad Germany's unwanted Jews.

Meanwhile, it was learned that a group of American and British Jews has established an international foundation to negotiate with the German government for the orderly exodus of refugees.

Once the board of trade approves the application of the foundation for a license, it was believed the German government would establish a trust fund in which the wealth of the emigrating Jews would be concentrated for use in financing their settlement abroad.

McCarran, Pittman Back Pike for U. S. Attorney

By the Associated Press

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said yesterday he and Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, had indorsed Miles N. Pike, of Reno, for the appointment as United States Attorney for Nevada.

He said he and Pittman signed a joint letter to the Justice Department requesting consideration of Pike's name and asking that an appointment be made "as expeditiously as possible." Agreement on Pike followed Senate rejection, at McCarran's request, of the nomination of William S. Boyle.

Reich Bars Adults From Heligoland

Berlin, July 18.—Germans more than 15 years old were barred today from visiting Heligoland, the fortified island that guards Bremen and Hamburg.

Two months ago foreigners were banned, but at that time newspapers stated that Germans could continue to pass their holidays on the island. Today's order is interpreted as meaning the government is working overtime modernizing and rebuilding the fortifications destroyed under the Versailles Treaty.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Popularity Virtually Unchanged; Majority Against Third Term, However

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 18.—Despite the squabbles in Congress over the Administration's monetary and war embargo policies, President Roosevelt's popularity with the rank and file of voters throughout the country showed only a slight drop during the past four weeks in the American Institute's sixty-fifth monthly survey on the President's standing with the nation's voters.

GEORGE GALLUP

After more than six years in office, Roosevelt is approved as President by 57.7 per cent of the major party voters, against 58.1 per cent last month. The present reading of the popularity barometer is higher than it was at the time of the Congressional elections last November, when the President was approved by 54.4 per cent, but lower than the President's election majority of 1936, which was 62.5 per cent.

With the Democratic nominating convention less than a year away Roosevelt's personal prestige with the voters is thus nearly as great as it ever was. This does not mean, however, that public sentiment favors him for a third term. The present popularity test is merely a measurement of the number of people who approve of him as President at this point in his second term.

Previous Institute surveys have revealed that a large number of voters who think he is doing a good job as President today say, nevertheless, that they would not vote for him for a third term. Whereas 57.7 per cent of voters approve of him as President at this time, only about 40 per cent say they would vote for him if he ran again.

The two Democratic strongholds at the present time are the South and the Far West. For several years past President Roosevelt has been nearly as popular in the Rocky Mountains area and along the Pacific Coast as in the traditionally solid Democratic South. The Administration's continuous popularity in the Far West raises the question whether this area will henceforth be known as the "solid West." The fate of the Democratic Party in the next election will provide an answer. Already, however, an Institute survey has found that a large majority of California voters —60 per cent—would like to see the Democrats win in 1940.

Following is President Roosevelt's popularity by sections.

	Approve of F.D.R.	Disap.
New England	51%	49%
Middle Atlantic	57	43
East Central	55	45
West Central	57	43
South	65	35
Far West	63	37

Morgenthau Praises 2 Billion Spending-Lending Program

Real Advance Toward Creating Jobs, Stimulating Industry and Balancing Of Budget, Secretary Tells Congress

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday told the Senate Banking Committee that the President's $2,800,000,000 spending-lending program would stimulate industry, put jobless back to work and contribute toward budget-balancing.

"The principle embodied in the bill," Morgenthau said, "constitutes a real advance toward the goal of bringing our governmental expenditures within our receipts."

He had scarcely finished his testimony before he faced a round of critical questioning.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, took issue with the witness' assertion that the loans would not add to the public debt, contending that Government guarantees behind the bond issues would augment the debt until they were liquidated. Adams pointed to the bill's provision for Treasury assumption of losses incurred.

"I'm in general sympathy with the program," said Adams, "but I don't see why we should seek to evade the facts."

Debt Increase Denied

Retorting that "we're not seeking to evade facts," Morgenthau argued that the bonds would be carried out of earnings from the proposed self-liquidating projects and would not increase the debt.

Questioned by Joseph B. Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and President J. J. Pelley of the Association of American Railroads was the provision for $500,000,000 for Government building, purchase and leasing to the railroads of rail equipment.

Eastman proposed that the bill be modified to permit RFC purchase of equipment only on railroad specifications and commitments for use. Eastman opposed the Government entering the railroad business "permanently" and thought the provision "dangerously broad."

Pelley said he was sympathetic with the purposes of the bill, but thought "the easy way is to put the money in reach of the railroads and let them come and get it and buy their own equipment."

Taft Challenges Toll Roads

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, challenged claims that proposed toll roads would pay for themselves, citing testimony by Public Roads Commissioner MacDonald questioning self-liquidating possibilities.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, said toll roads would be projected only in localities where the traffic would bear it.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, interjected that he would support the bill because it would serve for the time being to "keep afloat" our economy, but he thought in the long run it would be "futile and ineffective."

"Then why are you supporting it?" snapped Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia.

Tobey Questions Limit

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, asked if the program, "like Tennyson's brook, would go on forever, ad infinitum, down through the centuries, with no end in sight except to repeal this legislation."

"That's correct," said Morgenthau. "I approve it because each year we will submit a report to Congress and any year Congress isn't satisfied it can stop it that year."

Public Roads Commissioner MacDonald meanwhile advised the House Banking Committee that toll road costs were based upon a charge of 3½ per cent for the average automobile. He said truck and car owners in congested areas would pay the heavy toll but super-highways for long-distance travel might not immediately pay for themselves.

Housing Project Empty, Applicants 'Too Prosperous'

New York, July 18 (AP).—The maximum income permitted for tenants of the new Federal Red Hook and Queensbridge housing projects here is so low that even most families on relief are making too much to qualify, the chairman of the New York City Housing Authority asserted today.

Alfred Rheinstein, the chairman, said new Government regulations fixed $1,399 as the top annual income for a family of seven to live in the low-cost apartments, and that as a result his office was having trouble finding enough tenants.

Thousands of slum dwellers have applied for the apartments and been turned down because they were too "prosperous," he added.

Commons Lord Over Them, British Peers Complain

Special Dispatch to The Post

London, July 18.—Great Britain's peers are complaining about periodic "unemployment" and overwork, when they sit as members of the House of Lords.

According to the Peers, the Commons, which originates most legislation, spends most of the parliamentary session talking about it, while the Lords languish for lack of work. Then the Commons swamps the upper house in midsummer with weight ymeasures.

Toward the end of the session, the Peers complain, they frequently are forced to dine at the House and work on into the night to cope with the legislative jam. They meet ordinarily about 4 p. m.

Public Favors Dismissal of WPA Strikers

74% in Gallup Poll For Eviction; Reliefers Evenly Divided

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., July 18.—Virtually complete returns from a special survey of public sentiment on the WPA strike issue indicate that a majority of American voters approve the action of Works Progress Administrator F. C. Harrington in removing strikers from the WPA rolls.

Voters in all income levels throughout the country were asked this question:

"The head of the WPA says WPA workers who go on strike will be dropped from the WPA after five days on strike. Do you approve or disapprove of this action?"

The results were:
Approve 74%
Disapprove 26

Approximately one voter in every ten (9 per cent) expressed no opinion.

Even among WPA workers questioned in the survey there was sharp disagreement over the action of WPA officials. Half of those reached in the survey (50 per cent) said they approved the dismissal of strikers, while the other half disapproved.

In explaining reasons for their attitude, voters who approve the firing of WPA strikers say, chiefly, that WPA is a "form of charity" and the workers should be "glad of what they get." On the other hand, voters who disapprove the dismissals argue that "all workers should have the right to strike" and that the WPA "doesn't give them enough money anyway."

President Lauds RFC, Takes Dig At Past Critics

By the Associated Press

In a letter praising the "financial efficiency" of the RFC, President Roosevelt took a dig yesterday at those he said made "ghoulish statements" from 1933 to 1936 that the agency was broke.

His comment was contained in a reply to a lettter from Jessie H. Jones, who submitted his resignation as RFC chairman to become Federal loan administrator. Jones had informed Mr. Roosevelt that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had "sound assets sufficient to pay all of its debts and return to the Treasury the entire capital stock invested in it, with something in addition."

Mr. Roosevelt wrote Jones that this statement reminded him that in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936 a few people in the executive branch of the Government, more in Congress and many civilians and newspapers were announcing that the RFC "was broke and that the Government would not get back more than 50 cents on the dollar."

Stranger Offers To Help Rep. Risk Flee WPA Pickets

Refuge for himself and family from picketing former WPA workers and from the "unpleasantness" of being hanged and burned in effigy was offered Representative Risk (Republican), of Rhode Island, by a total stranger yesterday.

The stranger, a constituent, disclosed in a letter that his wife would be away all summer and suggested Risk and his family live with him, "incognito." Risk's wife and two small children went to the home of friends after pickets marched for three days in front of their house in Saylesville in protest against longer WPA hours.

Risk described himself as "one of WPA's stanchest friends" who had always voted for "top appropriations." Representative Sandager (Republican), Rhode Island, said his constituents could "show their resentment at the polls" if they didn't like the way he voted.

On Capitol Hill

REP. COFFEE

Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday was elected chairman of the House liberal bloc for the remainder of this session of Congress.

The bloc was formed by Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, who lost his seat in the last election along with approximately 25 other members of the bloc. Coffee has been one of the leaders in attempting to strengthen the bloc.

Coffee, a native of Washington State but a graduate of Yale, is serving his second term in the House. Previously he served as secretary for two years, to former Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington.

Action on the antilynching bill if Congress remains in protracted session was suggested by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, when he urged House members yesterday to sign a pending petition to discharge the House Judiciary Committee from consideration of the measure and bring it to a vote.

The bill, reintroduced at the opening of the present session by Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, and Fish is similar to the one passed by the House in the last Congress only to die in a filibuster conducted by Southern Senators. The discharge petition needs about 40 more signatures to become operative.

With Congress nearing adjournment, approval of legislation designed to refund Ohio for $1,338,000 in social security funds, appeared to be doomed yesterday.

Social security aid to the State was suspended last year following an investigation into charges that the funds were being used for political purposes. The State claims it had to spend $1,338,000 which should have been supplied by the Federal Government.

A conference was held between members of the Ohio Congressional delegation, headed by Senator Donahey, and Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer Monday night, but it was indicated that no agreement was reached.

Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee, said yesterday after a White House call that the committee probably would give legislative right of way to legislation to cushion Philippine industry against import taxes being imposed incident to independence for the islands.

Sabath said a rule probably would be granted also on a bill to authorize a $277,000,000 set of new locks for the Panama Canal.

U. S. to Rival Entire World In Air Power, Says Hester

Civil Air Chief Bases His Prediction on Recent Strides in Aircraft Production; Sees Other Nations at Their Peak Now

Civil Aeronautics Administrator Clinton M. Hester predicted last night that America will have a greater airplane productive capacity within five years than all the rest of the world combined and added that as this comes about "Hitler and everyone like him will hesitate to challenge the American way of thought."

The CAA official based his prediction on increases in airline operations and private flying in past months and the fact that conditions abroad already have strained plane production well beyond normal economic needs. His speech, delivered before the Parks Air College at St. Louis, was made public here.

"It is not the existence of fighting planes on the line that determines the fate of nations," he said. "Note the history of Europe since Munich.

"It was the knowledge that Germany could replace those fine airplanes at a rate faster than all the rest of Europe combined.

"Other nations have now, through heroic self-sacrifice, through ignoring almost every other need of the national economy, built up their productive capacity to a point competitive with Germany's—and Hitler hesitates."

Meanwhile, Congress ground out more legislation designed to make the United States and the whole Western Hemisphere safe against attack.

The House Foreign Relations Committee approved legislation authorizing American Government arsenals to construct warships, anti-aircraft guns and other munitions at cost for Latin-American republics. The measure is designed to encourage South and Central American nations to come to the United States for war materials rather than go to European shipyards and munitions plants which can underbid American manufacturers.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, acting chief of staff, testified in support of the measure behind closed doors yesterday. Unanimous support for a revised measure, eliminating authority to disclose secret equipment, followed.

A House bill calling for major improvement of the fighting efficiency of the battleships Tennessee, California, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia, at a total cost of $8,650,000, was amended before passage by the Senate to include authorization for the Navy to acquire two ships from the Maritime Commission and convert them for naval use, at a cost of $2,500,000.

Any person who advises any member of the Army or Navy to disobey orders, laws or regulations or who publishes or distributes books or pamphlets containing such advice will be guilty of a felony under a bill passed and sent to the House.

The Senate also passed a bill authorizing purchase of additional land at Army posts. Amendments sent it back to the House for further action.

Stamps Will Portray Noted Americans

Longfellow, Sousa And Dr. Reed Among Those Who Were Chosen

James Fenimore Cooper, Cyrus H. McCormick, Booker T. Washington and Ralph Waldo Emerson soon will be pictured on United States postage stamps along with more than a score of other Americans in a special series of stamps commemorating the Nation's famous men of the sciences and arts, Postmaster General Farley announced last night.

The Postoffice Department conducted several polls before the selections were made, and a flurry was caused as the philatelic clubs throughout the country made nominations, along with the nominations coming from many educational institutions and private citizens.

Judgment of Nation

"The list of Americans to be thus signally honored on the postage of their country represents the sound judgment of the Nation at large," the Department stated. The list:

Authors: Ralph Waldo Emerson, Samuel L. Clemens, Washington Irving, Louisa May Alcott and and James Fenimore Cooper.

Painters: James A. McNeill Whistler, Daniel Chester French, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Gilbert Charles Stuart and Frederic Remington.

Poets: Henry W. Longfellow, James Whitcomb Riley, Walt Whitman, John Greenleaf Whittier and James Russell Lowell.

Educators: Horace Mann, Charles W. Elliot, Booker T. Washington, Frances E. Willard and Mark Hopkins.

Inventors Honored

Inventors: Alexander Graham Bell, Eli Whitney, Samuel F. B. Morse, Elias Howe and Cyrus H. McCormick.

Composers: John Philip Sousa, Edward A. MacDowell, Stephen Collins Foster, Victor Herbert and Ethelbert Nevin.

Scientists: Luther Burbank, Dr. Crawford W. Long, Dr. Walter Reed, John James Audubon and Jane Addams.

Tentative plans are that each set of five stamps will be issued in denominations of 1-cent, 1½-cent, 2-cent, 3-cent and 5-cent. The first of the stamps will probably appear early in 1940, although one of the groups may appear in this calendar year.

Hunt for Identity of Body Found in River Turns to Ft. Belvoir; Man Missing There

Clews with which Charles County, Md., authorities have been attempting to identify the body of the elderly man found last Wednesday in the Potomac River near Marshall Hall. The hat, purchased in Alexandria, and bearing the name "Barton" on the headband, was found floating near the body. A watch, stopped at 8:45; shoes, billfold, penknife and key are included

Charles County, Md., authorities late yesterday turned toward Fort Belvoir, Va., to identify the elderly man in the dark gray suit whose body was found last Wednesday in the Potomac River near Marshall Hall.

A call earlier in the day gave Sheriff Robert V. Cooksey hope. The call, received by Alexandria police "from someone at Fort Belvoir," indicated that a man, employed by the WPA at the Fort, had been missing since last Tuesday.

Otherwise, the day passed uneventfully, as far as gains in the case were concerned. The undertaking establishment of Huntt & Ryons at Waldorf, where the body of the man is kept, said they would hold the funeral services today if someone does not come by and make an identification. Attempts in this direction have been numerous, even since the week-end when seven relatives of James A. Leonhardt, of Great Falls, Va., "identified" the body as that of Leonhardt—who shortly turned up alive.

The case wore itself out at Marshall Hall. There, William H. Cook, a part-time carpenter at the resort, told The Post that he was not sure that he had seen the victim, as had been reported. He helped get the body from the river last Wednesday, after it had been discovered by two swimmers, but he could not say definitely that he ever had seen the man before. On Monday night, Sheriff Cooksey took a waitress from the resort to view the body, but she could not remember ever having seen the man.

Further, the sheriff said it was improbable that any clew could ever be had from the victim's eyeglasses, which were taken Monday to a Baltimore optometrist for possible identification. The optometrist said he would have to search through 15,000 records.

The sheriff said that Maryland State investigators have not been called into the case by either himself or the State's attorney.

Roosevelt Silent on McNutt

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt turned aside yesterday a question whether he had ever informed anyone that he would positively run for a third term and wanted Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, for a running mate.

A reporter remarked at a press conference that a syndicated writer had said he had such information. The President replied by asking whether it would be fair to label that as a newspaper story.

Asked whether McNutt wouud be permitted to fulfill a speaking engagement at a national convention of young Democrats in Pittsburgh next month, the President said the questioner would have to ask McNutt.

He said he had no plans to address the convention himself.

Bay State House Kills Ban on Married Women

Boston, July 18 (AP).—The Massajected Monday a bitterly debated proposal to bar married women from State jobs. The measure has been a fiery issue in the State for nearly two years. The test came on an amendment designed to circumvent an advisory opinion of the State supreme court that the proposal was unconstitutional.

Filmland Wife Kills Self After Nudist Party

Self-Slain Actress' Daughter Also a Suicide, Says Husband

By International News Service.

Hollywood, July 18.—Dawn Hope Noel, 19-year-old daughter of Adele Blood, famous Broadway actress who killed herself three years ago, today was found shot to death in her North Hollywood home.

Herbert James Noel, her bandleader husband, told police Mrs. Noel took her own life after they had engaged in an argument.

Dawn, he declared, had resented his action in censuring an unidentified person over the telephone for "actions" at a nudist colony party the couple had attended at Roscie, Calif., over the week-end.

"Didn't Like Things That Went On"

"She remonstrated with me for my telephone conversation," the band leader told police. "When I refused to stop she dashed into her bedroom and shot herself."

Investigators said they learned that both Noel and his wife had been overwrought after their return from the nudist party. They added that the band leader refused to elaborate on his statement concerning the "bawling out," except to say of the "nudist party:"

"I just didn't like some things that went on there."

Found Mother's Body

It was Dawn Hope who found the body of her suicide mother in the bedroom of their Harrison, N. Y., home, a bullet wound in her head, three years ago. The death was classified as suicide by police.

Adele Blood, the mother, had been billed as "the most beautiful blonde on the American stage." She appeared in "Everywoman," "Anna Christie" and other Broadway successes.

2 Indiana Counties Found to Be Most Typical American

By the Associated Press

St. Joseph and Marshall counties, Indianafi were designated by the Census Bureau yesterday as the two most typical American counties.

Because they are typical, a force of about 160 Government canvassers will invade them August 15—in a test census—and ask their residents the questions which will be put to the rest of the country in the decennial population census next spring.

Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, said the two counties were chosen because they comprised a "representative urban and rural area of the country," and because together they presented a "good cross section of industry, agriculture, trade and the professions."

Marshall County is predominantly rural, but St. Joseph County contains the cities of South Bend and Mishawaka. The latter's 29,000 citizens wre said to typify small town residents.

Political Curb Bill Is Redrafted

By the Associated Press

Senator Hatch and Representative Dempsey, New Mexico Democrats, disclosed yesterday they had rewritten the former's bill curtailing political activities of Government employes in order to "eliminate confusion" and gain support for the Senate-approved measure.

Dempsey said he would offer the substitute in the House Thursday, when the bill will be called up for debate.

The revision would forbid any official in the executive branch of the Government, with a few exceptions, to use his official authority to influence an election.

Officials Weigh Ban on Filling U. S. Vacancies

Plan Considered for Economy; Roosevelt May Write Agencies

The Administration virtually has decided, as an economy move, to discontinue filling vacancies occurring in Government jobs wherever this can be done without impairing functions, informed sources said yesterday.

Details of the plan, however, have not been worked out, particularly with respect to exceptions which will be made to the rule.

President Roosevelt announced at his press conference yesterday that a letter will be sent to heads of Government departments and agencies calling upon them to economize.

May Not Fill Vacancies

The letter presumably will be a follow-up to Budget Director Harold D. Smith's efforts to effect savings contemplated under the President's two departmental reorganization plans.

Savings have been estimated at between $16,000,000 and $21,000,000. In addition, agencies in the works, security and lending groups must scrape together funds to pay the salaries of the administrators and their staffs. Congress appropriated no money for this purpose.

It is practically certain, informed quarters indicated, that administrative officials will be told not to fill vacancies occurring through resignation, death, or other causes unless necessary in order to carry on an essential Government function.

Like Action Two Years Ago

The President indicated the letter would follow, at least to some extent, the general outlines of a letter sent to administrative officials two years ago directing them to cut expenditures up to 10 per cent.

The President revealed his economy plans when asked by a newspaperman to comment on proposals by Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, and Representative Martin, Massachusetts, House minority leader, for a 10 per cent cut in appropriations for Government outlays other than fixed charges.

He remarked that cuts could be made in some places without curtailing essential functions, but not in others. Those advocating a 10 per cent cut, he declared, should have the courage to be specific.

Concerned Over Deficit

The President is reported to have told some members of Congress he is concerned over the rapidly mounting Government debt, which repeated heavy deficits have caused to soar well beyond $40,000,000,000.

What the President is attempting to do, it is said, is to avoid spending all the $13,161,000,000 appropriated by this Congress, a peacetime record.

The situation in each Government bureau, however, the President pointed out, is different. The Bureau of Standards and the Bureau of Mines, he remarked, are in a different category from Army aviation. A reduction in activity of the latter would mean a cut in the number of Army planes and hence a blow at national defense plans.

No Blanket Reduction

The letter which will go out to department and agency heads, the President explained, will not call for a blanket percentage cut.

Instead the problem is being attacked through special requirements, coupled with more effectively centralized controls.

Plans to stop filling of vacancies in Government jobs recall the latter days of the Hoover Administration and the early days of the first Roosevelt term. The 1932 legislative appropriation act forbade filling of vacancies as well as promotions. The famous Roosevelt economy act continued this policy. Government pay cuts were put into effect. But the whole thing expired in 1935 and since has been forgotten.

U. S. Investigates Hot Oil Running

what slower method of getting into new oil horizons.

Operators who take the long view of petroleum production control a field's output at a point where maximum recovery can be expected. Wells opened wide, a practice followed by hot oil runners seeking immediate profits, dissipate their gas pressure and lower production expectancy by natural flow.

Law-abiding producers want to comply with proration allowables because they can recover more oil through each well they drill, and it costs big money to drill oil wells.

Gas Pressure Dissipated

If one operator in a field violates production regulations, he dissipates gas pressure which supplies wells belonging to other operators in that field, and also drains the oil from parts of the field not covered by his leases.

That is why legitimate producers have welcomed the Federal investigation. What Rowland can uncover may be the answer to the shop talk of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 worth of hot oil run in Louisiana. And, it's a safe bet that any information legitimate producers have on illegal runs will be made available to Rowland.

Long Slaying Probe Asked

Detroit, July 18 (AP).—Gerald L. K. Smith, national chairman of the "Committee of One Million" and former associate of the late Huey P. Long, in a statement tonight urged Attorney General Murphy to investigate the "conspiracy behind the assassination" of Long.

Smith described Long as "the New Deal's worst enemy" and charged that events which have resulted in indictments against Louisiana officials followed the breakup of the Long organization as perpetuated briefly by his lieutenants.

Neutrality Fight Abandoned Till Next Year As Parley Tells Roosevelt He Must Wait

smilingly in agreement when asked the same question.

McNary said he looked for adjournment by August 5. He said there was no discussion at the conference of the pending $2,800,000,000 spending lending bill or its prospects of passage.

Secretary of State Hull unsmilingly left in the van of the Senators and did not try to conceal his disappointment at the decision to abandon the neutrality fight for the session.

Asked his opinion, he told reporters.

"We have plenty of trouble to look for both in Europe and in Asia."

Leaders Feared Filibuster

Early, who sat through the conference, said Senate leaders felt they were faced with the prospect of a prolonged debate "or filibuster, if you wish to call it that" and would prefer to go home now and risk the chance of a new crisis in Europe.

The conferees were divided on likelihood of a war crisis developing in Europe before Congress returns, Early said.

The President and Secretary Hull, on the basis of information they have received, thought a new crisis is a possibility and reiterated their belief that if the war-time arms embargo could be wiped off the statute book the security of this Nation would be strengthened and an outbreak of general war would be made less likely.

"But that seems to be a legislative impossibility," added Early. "So there you are."

Present at the conference, which was arranged by Majority Leader Barkley, were Senator McNary, his assistant, Senator Austin, of Vermont, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, all bespeaking the Senate Republican unit stand for postponement of neutrality action.

Besides Barkley, representing the Democratic leadership were Vice President Garner and Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which last week voted 12 to 11 to delay any neutrality action until next session.

The President and Secretary of State were waiting for the two-party Senate leadership when they arrived at 8:30 p. m. For three hours they debated the legislative impasse on neutrality, each member of the group participating.

Neither Side Budges

At 11:30 p. m., Early left the main entrance of the mansion with a sheaf of notes in his hand and the conferees followed. Early made plain that "neither side budged" in their stands for and against the immediate desirability of the legislation, concurring only in the view that no action could be had without prolonged debate and that postponement until next session is the only alternative.

Early likewise made clear that the Senate leaders of both parties, and not the President and Hull, accepted responsibility for his decision. He said sine die adjournment of Congress was not discussed, and no mention was made in either statement of a special session of Congress in event of an international crisis. Barkley later said the possibility of a special session was discussed, without any decision.

Lagging behind other conferees in the President's study, Vice President Garner and Senator Barkley were the last to leave the White House. The grinning Garner, reputed to have had much to do with last night's decision, was asked when Congres would go home.

"Pretty soon," he replied.

Barkley conditioned his reply to the same question on the length of time necessary for consideration of the pending lending bill. The Senate leader said he though adjournment is possible in two or three weeks providing the lending bill does not encounter protracted discussion.

The decision, reached only after a three-hour struggle, was said to have followed an opening statement by the President in which he explained his responsibility for conduct of foreign relations.

He was said to have reiterated in the long ensuing discussion his belief that repeal of the neutrality act's arms embargo would operate to deter any war-provoking thrust by an aggressor power. Secretary Hull joined him in contending for immediate action.

Austin Favors Objectives

Presenting the Republican viewpoint, McNary and Austin are understood to have argued that, regardless of the merits of the legislation, war in Europe is not inevitable at any early date and the "wise" course would be to defer action.

Visiting at the Capitol earlier yesterday, Joseph Davies, United States Ambassador to Belgium, home on leave of absence, conferred with several Democratic leaders, and expressed a pessimistic view on the prospects of continued peace in Europe. In a statement to the press, he said he believed repear of the arms embargo and return to international law would do much to obviate outbreak of war in Europe.

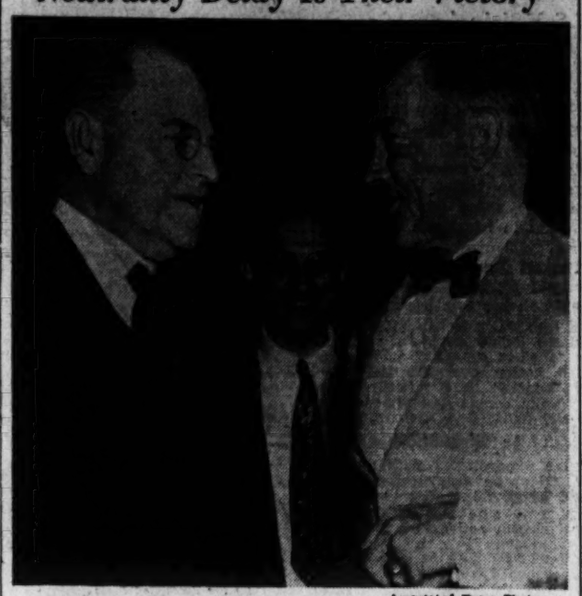

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, meantime moved in the Senate yesterday for abrogation of the 1911 treaty of amity and commerce with Japan to clear the way for negotiation of a new treaty protecting American interests.

Vandenberg in a resolution asked the Senate to give Japan the six months' notice required. The resolution further would ask the United States Government to call back into session the Conference of Brussels, of 1937, to determine whether Japan has been violating the Nine-Power Pact and the appropriate course to pursue.

Barkley Still Hopeful

The Foreign Relations Committee now has before it two bills to embargo shipment of materials to be used in the war against China but isolationists protested this would violate the 1911 treaty. Secretary Hull has been asked for his opinion. The committee meets today but neither the proposed Japanese embargo nor the neutrality issue is on the formal agenda.

No Sabotage, U. S. Verdict in Sarabia Crash

War Department, CAA Concur That Rag in Engine Was Accidental

Rumors that evidence of sabotage had been found in the plane which carried Francisco Sarabia, renowned Mexican flier, to his death in the Potomac River June 7 were declared unfounded yesterday in a statement issued simultaneously by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the War Department.

At the same time Luis Quintanilla, Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, revealed that the War Department and CAA had invited Mexico to send its own aviation experts to Washington to review findings of the American investigation. The embassy forwarded the invitation to the Mexican state department.

Investigations conducted by Federal agencies, officials said after a five-hour conference, have failed to disclose "any indication whatsoever of any evidence of sabotage."

Early reports, which remained uncontradicted, said a cleaning rag had been found in the air scoop intake feeding the carburetor and it was indicated that more than one cloth had been discovered. Investigators refused to make public at this time the number of rags located in the plane's engine.

The probe of the accident by the Civil Aeronautics Authority was understood to have been completed, but the Army's investigation was still in process last night. The completed CAA report on the case was being withheld pending completion of the Army report, it was said.

In their simultaneous statement, the two agencies declared, "It is hoped that these reports will be available within a few days."

Sarabia's death, which occurred soon after he had broken the nonstop flying record from Mexico City to New York, aroused rumors of sabotage in Mexico, but the formal investigation was said to have proved that the rag could not have been "fixed" to stop the carburetor at the crucial time.

Investigators emphasized it would have been impossible for the motor to have produced enough power to take the plane off the ground if the cloth had been placed in the intake while the aircraft was on the field.

French, U. S. Veterans Recall Days of Comradery-in-Arms

Merry meetings on the banks of the Seine 21 years ago were recalled by comrades-in-arms yesterday at the French Embassy, when 18 French veterans of the World War and the American Legion national guard of honor were received by Count de Saint Quentin, the French Ambassador.

Glasses were raised by Americans and French together in mutual praise of past acts of bravery and in toasts to continuing friendship. The visitors, all combat veterans and members of the Legion d'Honneur, were concluding a two-day visit to Washington after participating in "French week" and the July 14 celebrations at the New York World's Fair.

Georges Rivollet, secretary-general of the French Federation of Veterans Associations, and former minister of pensions in the French cabinet, declared, "our visit has been a manifestation of Franco-American friendship without ceasing, and we are very happy to see that the friendship of our comrades, the American Legion, for us is still as great as our friendship for them."

The group laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier yesterday morning and visited Mount Vernon. National Pilgrimage Officer Lieut. Horace Lineburg was host for the legion.

A letter of greeting to President Roosevelt from the Conseil General of the department of L'Allier was handed to Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, secretary to the President, by Rene Boyer, conseiller general of the town of Moulins, in L'Allier.

Japanese Fear They Must Act On Sakhalin

'Prestige Involved' in Island Dispute, Spokesman Asserts

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 18.—Reliable Japanese informants said tonight Japan considers her Sakhalin Island dispute with Soviet Russia a "matter directly involving the prestige of the Japanese government" and that, after tomorrow's deadline, "the Japanese government may be forced to take serious measures."

It was explained that the dispute involves petroleum wells which supply the Japanese navy and that, therefore, it is in a different category from the border clashes which have taken place between Soviet and Japanese forces along the boundaries of Manchukuo and Korea.

The Japanese Kwantung army in Manchukuo is semi-independent, it was explained, and may be considered as carrying on its own conflict with Russia in the border clashes.

Sakhalin, however, is a concern of "imperial headquarters in Tokyo."

The U. S. S. R. yesterday rejected Japanese demands concerning the concessions because it was in "ultimatum form."

Confer on Air Raids

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 19 (U.P.) High officials conferred today on the situation created by Soviet Russia's air raids on railway cities in Manchukuo and a report was circulated that a vigorous diplomatic protest may be made in Moscow.

While no official would say so it was evident there was fear that Japan's semi-independent Kwantung army, which controls Manchukuo, might take matters into its own hands and bomb Russia's military bases in Habarovsk and Blagovestchensk.

Such an act, officials feared, might precipitate widespread hostilities.

The five key ministers of the cabinet discussed the situation last night.

The situation was believed in danger of breaking into general warfare if the Japanese forces in Manchukuo make any move which Moscow could interpret as "aggression."

Officials here believe Moscow is concerned genuinely lest the Anglo-Japanese conversations here result in another "Munich" agreement in which Britain virtually would recognize Japan's conquest of China, and would prefer to let the border conflicts spread.

It is this belief that has caused the war minister to order the Kwantung army to avoid any "aggravation" of the border fighting.

Danzig Peace Rumors Spread; Suspected as Nazi Propaganda

German Demands Unaltered, Spokesman Says; Poles Reiterate Defiance; Berlin, London, Warsaw Deny Negotiations

By the Associated Press.

London, July 18.—Expressions of optimism about Danzig came from many parts of Europe today and informed observers here expressed belief that moves toward negotiations on the future of the Free City on the Baltic would be made soon.

Whether the first overtures would come from Germany, Poland, Britain or some neutral quarter was not indicated. Official denials in London, Berlin and Warsaw that negotiations were under way were generally accepted.

Rising financial markets reflected the slackened tension.

A German government spokesman said in Berlin the official belief there was that the Danzig question was "steering in the direction of a peaceable solution," and he added: "We are very optimistic."

Up to Reich, Say Poles

In reply to a question whether "solution" could mean anything short of the Free City's return to Germany, the Nazi spokesman said "our position on this question and our intentions are so well known that further restatement is unnecessary."

Adolf Hitler has declared that Nazi-dominated Danzig must be returned "home to the Reich."

Polish official circles reiterated that any gesture toward negotiation must come from Berlin.

Circles close to the Warsaw foreign office declared that any attempt to "violate the existing political and legal status of Danzig" would meet with "decisive action on the part of the Polish government."

Competent observers of the German political scene expressed belief Hitler still is convinced that Britain will not fight to keep Danzig out of the Reich.

[The Post's special correspondent in Paris said informed circles today dismissed "sensational peace rumors" as merely the latest episode in the "war of nerves" engineered by the Nazis.

[British and Polish official quarters suggested the reports were Nazi propaganda intended to confuse the issue, and perhaps to sow distrust between Warsaw on the one hand, and London and Paris on the other.

[The reference in Berlin dispatches to the fact that Nazi quarters expressed "optimism" as to the possibility of a "peaceful solution" of the Danzig issue, recalls, according to The Post's London correspondent, that last summer, Berlin officially was similarly optimistic as to the possibility of a similar solution, but on the supposition that Britain would not fight for Czecho-Slovakia.]

In other British quarters, it was regarded as ominous that all the hopeful talk came two weeks before Parliament's scheduled recess for the summer.

These quarters—doubtful that Chamberlain has discarded his so-called appeasement policy altogether—recalled there was similar optimistic talk before the parliamentary recess last July. And, they say, look what happened.

In Danzig itself an influential Nazi declared that "blustering and threats on the part of England" would not swerve Free City Nazis from their determination to unite with Germany.

This coincided with publication of an editorial by the Danzig newspaper Vorposten which declared settlement of the "Danzig and Corridor problems by negotiation is impossible at the moment."

Tyrol Germans Determined To Keep Homes

Beauty of Land Has Engendered Patriotism Akin to Religion

By Richard C. Hottelet
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Brenner Pass, German-Italian Frontier, July 18.—We sat at a table in front of the quaint old inn and gazed off toward the sharp peaks of South Tyrol from which Italy seeks to oust its German minority.

My companion, the aging innkeeper, sucked on his long, wooden pipestem, then soberly said:

"For us the question is simple. We will stay. I will not leave the house that has been in my family for hundreds of years."

He tapped my shoulder with his pipestem and put his left hand over his heart.

"We will wait for what the future brings," he said. "Active resistance will not help us, but we will not leave our homes."

Wrought iron sign creaked in the breeze overhead. I had seen similar signs with German-origin names swinging outside steep-roofed and gaily-painted buildings, testifying to the Germanic character of the South Tyrol, during a week's tour along the Italian border area.

The innkeeper talked with me for more than an hour over glasses of light red Tyrolean wine. The taverns are forbidden to sell beer.

"Have Been Loyal Citizens"

"We have done nothing wrong," he said. "We have been loyal citizens. Our sons and grandsons fought in Abyssinia and Spain. As a reward they were told that they would be given a farm in Africa—if they married an Italian woman."

A little waitress in a gaily colored peasant dress came to the table and bent her braided head close to my host's ear.

"The Italians are coming," she whispered.

Our conversation shifted to the weather while the Italian guests stopped and went inside. After they had left, the innkeeper tugged fiercely at his mustache and proudly declared:

"The Italians tried for 20 years to make Italians out of us and our children, but they failed. At home we still speak only German. They even have forbidden German schools. All signs are in Italian.

"You in Berlin don't know what it means to struggle to preserve your traditions."

I heard the same words from all the peasants I spoke with. Material considerations play little or no part in this feeling. Except for the green valley of Eisach and Etsch tumbling down from the Alpine divide, the soil is rocky and unfertile.

Most of the inhabitants are woodcutters or small farmers with a single goat or cow. Their existence is a round of unceasing toil. It is the breath-taking beauty of their land that has engendered patriotism akin to religion in these people.

Riding hundreds of kilometers among the Dolomites whose irregular granite towers jut perpendicularly 3,000 and 4,000 yards into the clouds, then dipping into soft, fertile, lake-specked valleys, one easily understands their reverence.

Only in towns did I find a willingness to leave. And then it was only from fear that the latest measures were but a prelude to stricter measures on the part of the government.

The Italian attitude is uncompromising. I was told repeatedly by Italians that the only solution they would agree to is emigration. Typical of this attitude is this legend painted in large letters on the side of houses on the Italian side of Brenner Pass:

"Our borders: We will not discuss them. We will defend them."

'On Borrowed Time' Is Picture of Unique Design

Stellar Cast Provides Engrossing Entertainment; Auditions Promise a De Luxe 'Going Native;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS A FANTASTIC, but strangely fascinating, story that Washington theatergoers will see when "On Borrowed Time" is disclosed for the first time locally on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning Friday.

Eerie, at times a little lugubrious and finally radiantly inspirational, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Paul Osborn, which, in turn, was a dramatization of the Lawrence Edward Watkin novel, roams far afield from the "boy-meets-girl" motif. It deals largely with intangibles, in this instance made tangible by the presence in the village of one Mr. Brink, a mysterious stranger. Mr. Brink holds in his power the destiny of those whose span of life has been run. He is a gentle man, kindly and persuasive, but yet, somehow, ominous. By a device that is spun from pure fantasy, Julian Northrup, "Gramps," and his beloved grandson, Pud, whose parents have accompanied Mr. Brink on a fatal journey, trap the stranger in the branches of an apple tree from which there is no escape until Gramps pronounces the magic open sesame. This he refuses to do until Pud is made safe from the disturbing threats of an acquisitive aunt, who has her eye, first, on the lad's inherited fortune and, secondly, on his future well-being.

BELL

There is, of course, something the savor of "Death Takes a Holiday" in "On Borrowed Time," although the two plays are not comparable beyond the presence of an identical underlying theme.

Oddly enough, as I have intimated, "On Borrowed Time" is engrossing entertainment. This is due primarily to the fact that its principal figures—with the exception of Mr. Brink—are a familiar, earthy lot. Gramps is a profane, [illegible]-bitten old backslider with an overpowering love for his grandson. Pud is a carbon copy of the old man, in miniature, and the rest are about the types that might be discovered in any small hamlet anywhere in these United States.

Is Ideally Cast

A great deal of the forcefulness and the recurrent humor of the piece rests in the manner of its playing by an especially well-chosen and adept cast. There is no present intention, an hour after Tuesday afternoon's preview screening, to set down here a detailed review of the performances that add up to the unique charm of "On Borrowed Time." That will come on Saturday morning after the picture's opening at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday. It should be indicated, however, that superlatively fine portrayals of their roles may be expected of Lionel Barrymore and Master Bobs Watson, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkle, Eily Malyon—in as distasteful a part as you would care to see—Henry Travers, Grant Mitchell and Nat Pendleton. There are times when you will want to punch some of these good people right on the nose, but, in the end, Mr. Brink, in connivance with Gramps, brings everything out as it should be.

"On Borrowed Time" is not like any other picture of recent vintage. It is all the more worth seeing on that account.

"Show Boat," combining the romance and drama of Edna Ferber's novel, the lingering melody of Jerome Kern's score and the spirited action of Oscar Hammerstein's "book," will be the screen attraction at the Mount Vernon Auto Theater, beginning today and continuing through the remainder of the current week. Irene Dunne and Allan Jones have the costellar roles in this memorable picture, with Helen Morgan and Paul Robeson adding their voices to a splendid singing cast and ensemble.

From Haskell Coffin, jr., comes word, under date of July 17, that Elaine Perry, daughter of Antoinette Perry, celebrated New York stage director, will appear tonight and balance of the week in a role of importance in the Mountain Theater's production of "Post Road," at Braddock Heights, Md.

This, it leaks out, will be Miss Perry's professional stage debut, although her distinguished mother will permit no further announcement than the bare fact, lest Elaine be handicapped by the same sort of inordinate "three-sheeting" with which she herself was confronted upon the occasion of her own debut.

Mr. Coffin goes on to say that this first season of the Mountain Theater bids fair to make the Braddock Heights enterprise nationally known as the "freshest and most talented group of New York actors to be found anywhere."

The South has won its battle against the North to have the world premiere of "Gone With the Wind" in Atlanta, Ga., instead of New York City. Producer David O. Selznick announced Monday night that the premiere of the long-discussed film version of the Margaret Mitchell novel will be held in Atlanta during the fall, exact date not yet decided upon.

They were still at those auditions for "Going Native," the annual, all-local revue to be staged next month at Loew's Capitol Theater late last night. It is reported that more than 500 aspirants for stage honors, their families and friends packed the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel on Monday night, when the auditions were begun. Starting at 7:30 p. m., Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Producer Gene Ford finally called it a day in the early hours of Tuesday morning with a score sheet showing that 110 resident performers had been given an opportunity to strut their stuff. Gene Ford was so elated that he immediately began proclaiming that the seventh "Going Native" will be the best of the lot. There is a familiar sound to that one.

Dennis King, to be guest star at the Oney Theater next week in "Petticoat Fever," arrived at the Washington Airport yesterday afternoon at 2 and proceeded at once to Mr. Cochran's Maryland retreat and got busy with rehearsals. Mr. King was doubly honored when his plane zoomed in. He was met by Kitty Carlisle, star of this week's "Tonight or Never"—and a brilliant star, too—in addition to Panjandrum Cochran. Both being singing stars, with grand opera achievements to their credit, Miss Carlisle and Mr. King, it seems, are old friends.

Harry Krivett, well-known producer, has been named to supervise New York rehearsals and production activities of "Irene," to be presented on the stage at Loew's Capitol the week of July 28. Jane Winton will appear in the title part, with Ann Heath in the ingenue role. More of this—much more—later.

Thought-for-the-Day Note

"Nothing but sunshine makes a desert."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

(Otto Brower tells me he's complimented that whenever Darryl Zanuck has an expedition, packed with danger, he always thinks of him first.—H. H.)

By Otto Brower.

Writing a column for you, Hedda, brings up a surge of memories for me.

It was just 11 years ago—remember?—when I directed you in a short subject. That was the first time I'd ever handled a picture solo. You did such a good job of acting, Hedda, that Paramount gave me a contract as a director. I recall that you forsook your usual finery for gingham in that one, but you were glamorous just the same. No, sir, clothes don't make the lady.

You asked about the most exciting film I've ever directed. Well, I've shot westerns with Gary Cooper, Jack Holt, Ken Maynard and others. I've gone skiing after shots in the Alps and burned under a blazing sun while thousands of Legionnaires fought on the Yuma sand dunes.

But I didn't know what thrills were until I traveled to Africa to expose 100,000 feet of background material for "Stanley and Livingstone," which stars Spencer Tracy. No, Hedda, no lions chewed off my ears, no head hunters sought me out for a trophy.

We followed the same route that Stanley took on his epic trek in 1871 to find Livingstone, the Scotch missionary whom Africa had swallowed up six years before. There wasn't one of us whose heart didn't pound faster as we ground film on the identical spots where the great explorer fought off attacks by savages, escaped from raging grass fires and almost died of jungle fevers.

Stanley, if you remember your history, was a New York reporter. Just 70 years ago he was given the toughest assignment ever handed a reporter. "Find Livingstone!" barked James Gordon Bennett, publisher. Livingstone was "Somewhere in Central Africa," a land that had been little explored in that day.

Twenty-seven of us came from Hollywood. We added 300 native porters in Nairobi. Traveled in a fleet of 30 trucks, cut our own roads, built bridges. Pitched camp under the stars, posted sentries to warn us of grass fires or stampeding herds of wild animals.

Besides being innoculated against jungle diseases, we were guided by Osa Johnson, famous explorer, and Al Kline, a white hunter who knows the pitfalls of the wilds. And in case water holes were dry—and some of them were—we carried emergency tanks.

Before we became Africanwise we tried using interpreters. We would round up a few hundred Masai or Kikiyu, which was a job in itself, and I would give my instruction to an African who would translate them into Swahili, which is the French of the continent. The chieftains then would retranslate them into their own tongues.

Since I was balmy, the interpreters would change my orders. So I resorted to pantomime. If I wanted them to dance, I'd dance myself. One of the boys snapped a picture of me doing that and believe me, Hedda, I'm comic.

The African climax comes when thousands of tribesmen, thinking that Stanley and his men are slavers, come swarming down over a hill to attack the little safari. After months of work, we rounded up 8,000 natives for what I believe is the biggest mob scene ever shown in pictures.

Carefully I lined them up behind the hill, out of camera range, told them they were to come racing down the mountainside the moment I fired a rifle shot. Well, the fellows couldn't wait and piled down on us. That monkey business went on for three days. We were ready for strait-jackets when we finally got the [illegible]

"So Nova won't fight my Tony Galento in Philly?" Joe Jacobs states at the Paradise. "Well, if he doesn't, I'll bring Schmeling back here to fight Tony—and I hope Tony kills 'im." . . . "Here's the full story: Before McNutt went to the Philippines, Roosevelt promised to take care of him, when he'd return. He arranged to see F. D. Thursday noon. A few hours earlier, Swanson died. McNutt wanted the job of Secy. of the Navy, but the President convinced him it wouldn't be fair to the other 'charming dozen' if McNutt received Cabinet status." . . . "I was going to spend my five-week vacation from 'Leave It to Me' by going home to Frisco, to see my sister," Bill Gaxton reveals. "Look, I had the railroad tickets all bought—and it was tough getting 'em, too. So what happened? So Saturday night my sister arrived in N. Y.—for her vacation." . . . "An amazing story in the writing business, as far as milking one idea is concerned, soon will be fulfilled," a publisher informs at the Intl. Casino. "Samson Raphaelson had a story idea. He wrote the play, 'Skylark,' in which Gertrude Lawrence has been appearing. Then he wrote it as a magazine story, and the Sat. Eve. Post published it. A few days ago it was published as a book. Raphaelson has reserved the film rights, and a movie company will screen it. The author then will have it used for radio and television."

"Well, Brenda saw that girl in a night club a few days ago, asked to meet her—and now they're friends." . . . "You know our maid, Mary?" Larry Hart reminisces at La Conga. "When Josephine Baker, wearing jewels and a Schiaparelli gown, came to a party at my house, she told Mary: 'Donne-moi une tasse de cafe noir, s'il vous plait.' Mary snapped back at her: 'Lissun, sistuh, y'all jes talk the way your mouf' is born'."

"You should have added that I was kidding, when you quoted me as saying I got $25 for playing the Gershwin Memorial concert," Oscar Levant corrects at The Famous Door. "Incidentally, I wore this watch when I played. Gershwin gave it to me seven years ago, when we both played his music at the Lewisohn Stadium concert."

6 A. M.: "and you're still undecided? . . . Well, I'll settle it, dear. I'm going downtown, and arrange passage today . . . Where to? . . . To London and Paris and Norway and Moscow and Athens . . . Yes, Moscow . . . We'll go to Moscow—and see what happens if we try to paint the town red."

Makeup Expert Gives Ladies Some Advice

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Wizard Talks to the 'Woman in Street'

By Jack Dawn.
Written for United Press.

Hollywood, July 18.

Dear Fred: So you want a column aimed at the ladies? You want me to try and convince them that some makeup, worn on the street, should appear only beneath the big top of a circus, and in the capacity of a performer? Those were your words, not mine, although I do feel that nine women out of every ten could use her makeup to better advantage.

There is hardly a woman alive who hasn't at least one good feature which, if treated properly, would serve to outweigh or diminish her bad ones.

Let's pretend we have before us a young lady who has become confused by talk of facial planes, contours and other technical terms besetting the quest for beauty.

Mirror Tells Tale

We'll place her before a mirror, located where light is allowed to shine on her face, rather than in the glass. Then we'll leave her to sit and look at herself. When we return we find that she has decided that her nose is too long, her upper lip is too thin. On the credit side she has listed her eyes, which are large, gray blue, but a tiny bit protruding for real beauty.

We agree that her eyes are the feature to emphasize. First, we use a bit of eye-shadow to take the protruding appearance away. In blending eye-shadow over the lids we are careful to use an upward stroke at the edges, since the lines of youth go "up" against the downward sweep of age lines.

After applying the eye-shadow, the lashes are carefully brushed with mascara. I can't emphasize the word "carefully" too much in this instance. Nothing is more discouraging than seeing lashes gummy and sticky through the use of an overabundance of this substance. Each individual lash should be just as separate as before the make-up touched it.

Eyebrows vs. Nose

In the analysis of her face, our patient complained about a "too long" nose, yet in spite of this, her eyebrows have been plucked far apart, leaving a wide expanse of unbroken forehead adding to the length from the nose tip to the hairline. Since we can't take time to wait until the natural brows grow out once more, we pencil in the missing brows, thus cutting the line and seemingly shortening the nose.

The application of cheek rouge is an individual problem. It may be simplified by recalling one of the rules of choosing a dress. A stout woman should never choose a frock with horizontal stripes. A slim woman should never choose a frock with vertical stripes. That rules applied to cheek rouge as well. The woman with a round, full face should apply rouge in a vertical pattern to give length. The woman with a thin face should choose to apply rouge in a horizontal pattern to create the illusion of breadth.

Glen Echo Park

A new band opened in the Spanish Garden Ballroom, at Glen Echo Park this week. Carl Lorch and his famous swing orchestra took their "bow" before the throngs of dancers and jitterbugs.

Carl and his talented organization came up to the highest expectations of the dancers who have waited so long to enjoy Carl's tuneful melodies. Shirley Dean, exotic songstress, charmed the gay dancers with her lilting, dreamy voice, her beauty and her radiant personality. Carl and the lads are a handsome aggregation, too.

There are, it seemes, "57 varieties" of swing music, and after each tantalizing tune, the jitterbugs registered their approval in no uncertain terms. Between the dance numbers, Carl and his clever crew "brought down the house" with entertainment specialties.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, July 18.—Fred MacMurray proved conclusively in "Invitation to Happiness" that he is not just the garden variety of leading man. He played a prize fighter with Irene Dunne, and did so well, that now Paramount is going far afield to find a variety of character roles for him. Perhaps the most surprising evidence of this is the gangster part in "The Night of January 16th," the Ayn Rand play, which Paramount recently purchased from RKO.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hollywood has a special interest in this play, for Ayn Rand was working in the wardrobe at RKO when she wrote her unusual courtroom drama. She couldn't sell it here, but Al Woods produced it and it was a Broadway success a few years ago. The audience acts as jurors and since there is a little bit of ham in the best of us, it went over big.

On Friday, Frances and Samuel Goldwyn train out for New York and the opening of "They Shall Have Music." Mind you, it isn't the ordinary type of premiere, but an event sponsored by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia. As you probably have guessed, it's all for sweet charity, the proceeds to go to two music schools, where the talents of poor children are given a chance to develop. Mrs. Roosevelt and New York's mayor, who is on the board of one of the schools, will dine first with the Goldwyns. This one seems to be a particularly worthy charity, for it is heartbreaking when poor parents are deprived of giving their gifted children the advantages they deserve.

One of Nicholas Schenck's pleasant duties, while here, was to get an advance peep at "Gone With the Wind." He looked at the picture with Jock Whitney and afterward both agreed that it should be road showed. The history of roadshowing in recent years has not been too successful, but with the whole world wanting to see the most publicized movie ever made, the very wise Mr. Schenck believes one way to get money out of this expensive production is to charge top prices. The premiere will be in December in Atlanta, with a trainful of Hollywood celebrities visiting the Southern city, the locale of the Civil War drama.

Chatter in Hollywood: Don't be surprised to read in the newspapers, in a few days, that Jackie Coogan and his blonde wife, Betty Grable, have parted. She denied they had separated, to this writer, the last time there was a rift in the lute, although Jackie had already left their home. This time, it isn't even necessary to ask her, for Jackie told friends, at Grace Hayes' lodge, that he and Betty had quarreled and he didn't believe a reconciliation was possible. He was at Earl Carroll's show a few nights ago stagging it, and, night before, was at the Grace Hayes' lodge, with Peggy Carroll, and he acted very blue.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joan Bennett and Brian Aherne seem to be keeping lots of dates these evenings; Lynn Koehler, the Chicago beauty, making merry at Slapsie Maxie's with B. P. Schulberg; Bob Ritchie is being very consistent in his devotion to June Gale, if seven nights the past week is an indication; Glenda Farrell's 14-eyar-old Tommy has joined his mother in Connecticut, where she is in summer stock; Norma Shearer, with David Lewis at the preview of "Each Dawn I Die," tells me she will have two days in New York to shop and go to the theaters before she sails for Cannes with the Charles Boyers; the dancing Hartmans and Hartmans and Orrin Tucker's Orchestra went over with a bang at the opening of the Cocoanut Grove.

The Jules Steins hosted a party who applauded the burlesque on the bolero, as well as the catchy musical numbers. The Charles Correlis (Andy of "Amos 'n' Andy"), Edgar Bergen, the Walt Disneys, Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon were their guests. Proceeds of the evening went to crippled children, and from the crowded house it is apparent the little folk had big returns; the Edward G. Robinsons leave for New York and Europe tomorrow; Edmund Goulding, whose talents are many, has composed and sold a rhumba song; Eddie Albert flies twice a week to San Francisco to see his secret sorrow in a show up there; Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur are vacationing in Del Monte, near enough to San Francisco for Helen Hayes, the star of their show, to spend week-ends with them; Rosalind Russell's studio battles won, she heads north to rest; the Gary Coopers leave for New York, now that the "Beau Geste" preview is over.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Adult No Pupil, D. C. Rules; Must Pay $107

Wilson Student Loses Plea for Free Tuition; Father Taxed Here

The definition of "pupil"—whether, for example, that term might be applied to a 50-year-old learner as well as a child—figures in an opinion handed down yesterday whose immediate effect is a $107.72 crimp in the pocketbook of Charles M. Proctor, jr.

Answering an inquiry which the Commissioners made on April 29, Comptroller General Fred H. Brown advised them, in effect, that a man of 21 no longer can be classed as a "pupil" and is not entitled to free tuition at Wilson Teachers College if he lives outside the District.

Four Others Affected

The senior Proctor, who figures in the case because he pays taxes here though he lives in Bethesda, Md., last night expressed his disappointment but did not indicate he would carry the fight into court.

Brown's opinion, which will be adopted by the District auditor though the comptroller general made it clear this is no formal ruling, is applicable not only to the case of Proctor but also to four other nonresidents heretofore exempted from tuition payments.

This is what happened:

In 1935 young Proctor, then a resident of Washington, was graduated from high school. The following autumn he enrolled at Wilson Teachers College, a municipal institution under the Board of Education. Tuition was free, since he lived here.

Last summer the youth reached his twenty-first birthday—and that's where the complications began. Having moved to Bethesda with his family, the younger Proctor resumed his studies at Wilson on the assumption that he still would not have to pay tuition, since his father continued to be employed in the District.

(By act of Congress, nonresidents enjoy the District's public school privileges without cost provided one of the parents is employed or pays taxes here.)

Early this year Proctor junior moved back into the District—the father remaining in Bethesda—but a bill was sent to the son covering the half-year tuition period during which he lived in Maryland. The future teacher, or his father, paid the bill, then later asked for a refund of the $107.72.

"Bills were sent to other students who were over 21 and nonresidents," he said last night, "but they had influence and didn't pay. I was the goat."

Adult's Residence Criterion

"While it is true," said Brown, "there is no express limitation in the statute here involved as to the age of pupils, it must be assumed the Congress enacted the law with the knowledge of the fundamental principles that a father is obligated to maintain and educate his minor children and that their legal domicile ordinarily follows his.

". . . When an adult attends a teachers' college, or other public school in the District of Columbia, the inquiry as to whether he should be required to pay tuition charges is to be answered by ascertaining whether he (the said adult) pays taxes or resides in the District of Columbia, rather than whether this father does."

This opinion is at variance with that of Corporation Counsel Seal who, it was revealed yesterday, held last April that the age of a nonresident "pupil" is irrelevant if one or both parents work in the District.

"To say that a nonresident adult is entitled to free tuition by reason of the fact that his nonresident father pays taxes in the District," commented the Comptroller General, "would seem to lead to the somewhat unreasonable result that an adult living in Maryland would be entitled to free tuition in the District of Columbia because his father resides in the District of Columbia."

The younger Proctor, who is out of the city this summer, is not likely to return to Wilson Teachers College to complete his education as a result of the opinion, his father declared.

Girl Saved in Leap Off Highway Span

one home, so she drove back toward Alexandria, this time with the Sisks ahead of her taxi. When she dismissed the cab at the Virginia end of the bridge and started to walk back, her brother-in-law drove back to the District end of the bridge, parked the car and started to walk toward her. He saw her jump over the guard rail at about the middle of the span.

Meantime, Alexandria police had been notified of the sinister telegrams and Detective Russal A. Haws and Private George W. Embrey had located Mrs. Sisk's stepfather at the Sisk home. With him they sped toward the airport. After a wait they spotted the girl walking toward the center of the bridge. They drove up and called to her just as she jumped.

Once in the water, Mrs. Sisk struggled and called for help, and did not resist Parker's rescue. After police failed in efforts to hoist the pair from the water, two unidentified truck drivers made their way to an abutment and brought them to dry land.

Mrs. Sisk was treated at Emergency Hospital and later taken to Gallinger for observation.

Her rescuer, it was learned later, has been on sick leave from his desk since July 10, suffering from severe stomach disorders. When he got back to the bridge, by that time surging with 300 spectators and with traffic tied up on either side for 300 yards, he found that police had banished his wife and car from the span. Chiding police and spectators for not going to the girl's aid before he arrived, instead of devoting their attention to keeping traffic clear, Parker began a shivering search on foot for his wife, walking back and forth among the cars.

To cap the climax he was roundly scolded by a policeman for violating the pedestrian control ordinance, as he walked across the bridge to search for his wife and car.

Jury Dooms Desert Slayer To Death in Gas Chamber

automobile salesman. Still pending against him is a charge of murdering Ellis M. Koury, another salesman.

On the witness stand, Burgunder blamed the slayings on a companion whom he refused to identify because of a "code of criminals" he said he learned while serving 26 months in a Washington State reformatory for a Seattle drug store holdup.

The friend, Burgunder testified, shot Peterson and Koury as they lay bound because Peterson recognized him.

Burgunder said he lured the salesmen to the desert so he could take their car and go to Tennessee. There he planned a battle to overcome a temptation to gamble, which he blamed for ruining his life.

His mother said she was to blame for his mental condition the day of the slaughter, having chided him in a letter without knowning he was brooding over gambling losses.

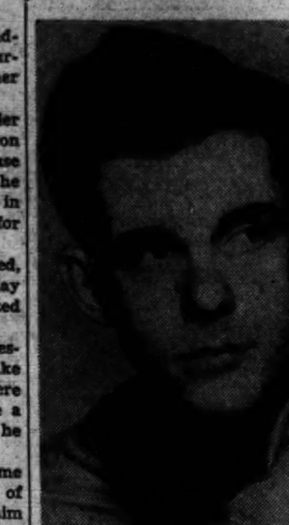

Burgunder's defense ended with a dramatic plea by his father, who spared neither himself nor his son. He described himself as a "neglectful" and "ignorant" parent and his son as "a boy born into this world with a defective brain."

New Trial to Be Asked

The father asked not for acquittal, but for a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, declaring he did not want his son returned to society "and with that brain jeopardize the lives of others."

"His mother and I ask no sympathy," Burgunder told the jury. "There is no verdict that you can render in this case that can help us. The State of Arizona is going to have his life, either quickly or prolonged."

Defense Attorney C. T. McKinney said he would ask a new trial and appeal the judgment to the State Supreme Court.

Funeral Tomorrow for Junge, White House Concert Manager

Dies 3 Days After 81st Birthday at Middlehope-on-Hudson

Funeral services for Henry Junge, German-born concert manager who arranged musical entertainment for six Presidents and their guests, will be held tomorrow in Brooklyn, N. Y. Burial will be in Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Junge died Sunday at his summer home at Middlehope-on-Hudson, N. Y., three days after his eighty-first birthday.

Mrs. William Howard Taft was the first White House hostess to secure artists for one of her musicales through Mr. Junge, who at that time was a secretary with the Steinway piano firm.

Through succeeding Administrations, he became an increasingly familiar White House figure, appearing frequently for conferences with the First Ladies and listening attentively at every musicale.

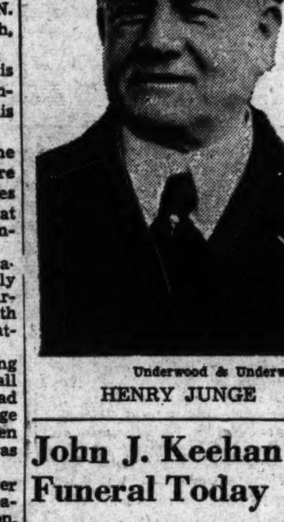

At a press conference last spring Mrs. Roosevelt explained that all of the hundreds of artists who had offered to sing before King George VI and Queen Elizabeth had been referred to Mr. Junge, who was arbiter over the program.

Mr. Junge lived at the Mayflower Hotel during the White House "season." He is survived by one son, Reginald Junge, and a niece, Dorothy Junge. His wife and an older son died several years ago.

Born in Celle, kingdom of Hanover, Germany, Mr. Junge emigrated as a youth to the United States. He was connected with Steinway and Sons for more than half a century.

Sheriff Goes Fishing, Hooks Outlaw Russell

Oklahoma Fugitive Wanted for Slaying And 3 Kidnapings

By International News Service.

Ozark, Ark., July 18.—Jack C. Russell, 39-year-old fugitive Oklahoma convict, wanted for a brutal murder and three kidnapings since his escape last Tuesday, was recaptured without resistance today by county sheriff posing as a fisherman.

Known as the "Singing Cowboy" bandit, Russell had been sought throughout the Middle West since he was partially identified as the desperado who kidnaped, tortured and killed William Scott Hamilton, of Arkansas City, Kans.

Sheriff Champ Crawford of Franklin County and Constable Richard Hill, tipped that a suspicious character had driven into a tourist camp on Mulberry Creek, 18 miles north of Ozark, disguised themselves as fishermen.

The stratagem worked perfectly. "Shucks, it was easy," the sheriff remarked. This was his story of the capture:

"Hill and I started fishing below the camp and started to work upstream to where our man was camped. We sighted the car parked near the edge of Mulberry Creek and I noticed the gas tank was leaking. The car has Iowa license plates.

"I called to Russell and told him the tank was leaking. Shucks, we had him fooled completely. He walked over to the car and as he was about to move it, I pulled my gun on him. It was no trouble at all."

The sheriff said Russell admitted his identity readily, also that he had kidnaped R. E. Brown, McAlester, Okla., photographer, and had made him drive to Pittsburg, Kans., where young Hamilton was kidnaped. He denied killing Hamilton.

Russell admitted he had been in Kansas City Sunday and that he had stolen a police captain's automobile there.

Russell also was identified as the man who kidnaped Bug Egholm in Kenosha, Wis., last week and forced Egholm to drive with him to Elgin, Ill.

It was at Kenosha that Hamilton's abandoned car was found some time after the discovery of his nearly nude body by a roadside at Ringwood, Ill.

Sheriff Crawford, however, did not find Russell the desperate, "stir-crazy" man-killer he was thought to be.

"When we went after him I was ready for a battle, the sheriff said, "but the guy wasn't tough. I guess we covered him so quick it took all the desperado out of him."

Russell still was carrying the pistol he took from a guard at the McAlester prison while he was being taken to a dentist on the plea he needed a tooth treated.

A Federal warrant was issued in Chicago for Russell's removal to Chicago for trial for the kidnaping and killing of Hamilton.

A Case In Point

The curtailment which the Juvenile Court faces in its budget for the current year is just another example of actual hardship caused District institutions by the remote control which Congress exercises over the city. Although the reduction in the amount appropriated for the court falls short of last year's allowance by only $880, this will result in a much greater loss of efficiency than would appear to be the case, as previous grants have been inadequate.

Judge Fay Bentley has pointed out that each adult probation officer already handles what is generally considered to be eight times a normal case load. Furthermore, the court more than pays for itself by saving the District or private charities large sums in cases of non-support.

This is, however, beside the main point. The Juvenile Court should be run properly for the good of the city and its inhabitants. The administration of justice cannot, after all, be measured in terms of figures. And Congress, as has been repeatedly pointed out, is not familiar enough with this situation to see that a small cut in an appropriation may cripple the work of an agency that is vital to the welfare of the community.

Not A Lost Cause

The postponement of action on the Kennedy bill until the next session of Congress should not be written down as a collapse of the District reorganization movement. Only the most optimistic sponsors of this reform anticipated its consummation during the preadjournment rush of the present session. Citizens who take a long-range view of the problem have no reason to be discouraged.

If the community does its part, modernization of the District government will have a much better chance of success in 1940 than it had in 1939. Heretofore this much-desired reform has been more hope than expectation. No group, either in the local government or in Congress, had really come to grips with the pactical problem until the Kennedy bill took shape some weeks ago.

It is natural in these circumstances that sharp differences of opinion should have arisen. That does not mean no progress has been made. The case for some sort of reorganization has been greatly strengthened. In fact, the issue is no longer whether the local government should be overhauled, but rather what new type of municipal regime should take its place.

The subcommittee handling Mr. Kennedy's bill did not delay action because of opposition to the idea of reorganizing the local government. On the contrary, there seems to be agreement among its members that some rather sweeping changes should be made. Each member has agreed to put into writing his views as to what the new setup should be, with the object of taking up the question once more next January.

That attitude is a natural reaction to the recent crisis through which the District passed. No doubt members of the subcommittee realize more keenly than before that Washington cannot hope for efficient government under the present cumbersome arrangement. Mr. Kennedy, in particular, has worked diligently to relieve members of Congress of their onerous responsibility as city councilmen. Postponement of action on the bill must be a keen disappointment for him. But he is of the courageous type of legislator who may be expected to carry on the fight until definite action is taken.

Moreover, the District Commissioners have been instructed to submit a detailed study of the Kennedy bill to the subcommittee no later than December 1. Indications are that their report will be sharply critical. An alternative bill may be offered. But at least that should have the effect of bringing to a head the controversy between local officials and the Griffenhagen experts responsible for the plan embodied in the Kennedy bill.

The Commissioners' so-called "kitchen cabinet" has challenged the proposed charter from two viewpoints. It believes that the document contains legal loopholes which might involve the District in difficulties, and it fears that the commission-city manager system would not work out satisfactorily in this voteless community. Both points call for thoughtful review of the bill. The presumption that the policy-making body will be appointed rather than elected makes it particularly desirable to scrutinize its relationship to the community and to the proposed District administrator.

A heavy responsibility now rests upon this local group to bring forth a constructive reorganization plan, whether or not it chooses to build upon the framework of the Kennedy bill. Its obligation cannot be met by any vague proposals or negative criticism. The community will expect from it a plan no less comprehensive than that worked out by the Griffenhagen experts. Any lack of positive action at the District Building now would leave the Commissioners without a vestige of leadership in the reorganization movement.

Diagnosis And Cure

The preliminary report of the Temporary National Economic Committee, made public this week, is entitled an "Investigation of Concentration of Economic Power."

The wording inevitably recalls that at the outset the T. N. E. C. was popularly known as the anti-monopoly probe. Exception was taken to this. It was asserted that the committee was following no preconceived plan of action, and had in mind only "a dispassionate survey of economic facts to discover, if possible . . . what will best serve the public interest as a whole." Therefore it seemed improper to call the committee anti-anything.

It seems, however, that the early newspaper designation was, as often happens, essentially accurate. The current report is very largely based on the assumption that much of our present economic maladjustment is rooted in the growth of big business and the decline in competition. The committee's opinion is "that the sooner the widespread existence of monopolistic practices in commerce is recognized and acknowledged, the sooner the country can get down to the business of determining what to do about it."

One possibility, of course, is that essentially there is nothing to be done about it. An argument which may be supported with much logic is that a big country, developed along big lines, inevitably demands big business. Admittedly the shadow side of this is loss of opportunity for the individual citizen to be master of his destiny. But in decrying that change, the evidence of which is all too apparent, the committee does not make clear that it can be helped.

The specific suggestions of the committee, however, are modest, and made with that persuasive objectivity which has characterized the T. N. E. C. throughout. From the social viewpoint there can be no criticism of changes in patent law designed to encourage wider exploitation of new inventions. Amendment of the Clayton act to make mergers of competing corporations more difficult is also well argued. And there seems little reason for outcry against the interesting proposal that violation of the antitrust laws should be treated "as a kind of tort against the national economy and the general public interest, for which an appropriate civil action may be brought by the United States."

It is the argument of the T. N. E. C. that "the antitrust laws must be regarded primarily as an economic instrument and not as a moral tract." With this purpose all who are not selfishly interested in the further growth of corporate power will be in sympathy.

Nevertheless it would underestimate the problem to assume that the trend toward concentration is wholly, or even primarily, a matter of business avarice. The forces which give rise to mass production in this country are not going to be eliminated by the antitrust laws alone, no matter how rigorously enforced. It might be well for the T. N. E. C. to remember that while legislation can always stop the economic clock it is another matter to gear it down successfully to the timing of a more simple and primitive era.

Justice For Tenants

Some rather appalling evidence of injustice in the handling of landlord-tenant cases in the Municipal Court has been brought to public attention by a committee of the Washington Housing Association. Because of an enormous increase in suits to collect rent, the investigators found, a single judge hears more than 150 cases in "barely a half hour." Hearing of these cases, the report says, "has degenerated into a mere roll call."

Another startling fact brought out by the committee is that "an average of less than seven defendants a month, out of all the 4,000 tenants sued every month, have obtained a trial in these cases." The committee concluded that there must be some reason why so few tenants undertake to defend themselves against suits of this character. And it had no difficulty in finding that reason. A tenant is denied a trial unless he files a formal affidavit of defense. Since few can afford to hire an attorney to prepare such an affidavit, judgment is entered against them by default.

The committee found, too, that in practically all cases tenants are required to pay court costs to avoid eviction. There are indications that some landlords also take the liberty of collecting, under the guise of court costs, more than the actual fees due.

All of these abuses, the committee believes, can be corrected simply by the adoption of a new set of rules applying to landlord-tenant cases. In proposing such a set of rules the committee has drawn heavily upon the experience of the local Small Claims Court, now operating with a remarkable degree of success.

The suggested rules would reduce the costs of landlord-tenant suits, and safeguard tenants against premature suits and against excessive charges. They would simplify procedure, assure the judge sufficient time to give each case proper attention, permit the court to withhold judgment under certain conditions and provide statistics to keep the public informed of the work done by that proposed branch of the court. Tenants could offer their defense to suits in an informal manner without the aid of a lawyer and without legal pleadings.

The distinguished membership of the committee and the careful work it has done should give assurance of thoughtful consideration of its proposed rules by judges of the court. Drastic changes in the present situation are clearly called for, and if they can not be effected by modification of the court's rules, quick resort to legislation will be in order.

The White House Parley

In inviting Republican Senate leaders to a White House conference on the neutrality issue, President Roosevelt followed a procedure which has everything to recommend it.

The President's views on this subject are well known. He and Secretary Hull have taken the position that the continuation of the present mandatory embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war to belligerents encourages aggressor nations. It thus increases the dangers of war in Europe and, in the long run, the possibility of our own involvement. It must be assumed that his point of view is grounded on information, some of it highly confidential, in possession of the Department of State and other Government agencies.

It is desirable that members of the opposition who have been critical of the Administration's foreign policy should be given every opportunity to be apprised of the reasons for that policy and the data supporting it. So the exchange of views at the White House last night was entirely on the constructive side.

No greater tragedy could befall the Nation than to have vital questions of foreign policy made the football of politics. In these critical times, every patriotic consideration demands that partisanship stop at the water's edge. And, while there has always been and always will be honest differences of opinion as to the position the United States should take in world affairs, those who seek to make political capital of foreign policy deserve a rebuke from the voters.

Republicans in the Senate have a grave responsibility facing them. In the House, the division on such a vital question as the continuation of the present arms embargo showed all but a few Republicans taking a position hostile to the views of the Administration. This stand has naturally given rise to the suspicion that political considerations were, in part at least, responsible for the final vote.

The Senate Republicans are in a position to correct that unfortunate impression. Some of them are known to favor the retention of the present embargo. Others are on record as in favor of placing arms, ammunition and implements of war in the same category with food, cotton, copper and other articles perhaps as important to nations at war as are arms and munitions.

Last night's parley at the White House should help remove some of the misconceptions that may have arisen between the President and a powerful element in the Senate which has been critical of his foreign policy. At least he had an opportunity to lay his cards on the table in full view of the opposition. It is incumbent on the opposition to examine the President's case without partisanship and with the national interest as the sole consideration.

There are a number of persons who never get next to themselves—and we don't blame 'em.

Arkansas Diamonds

From the Commentator

Diamonds of a quality equal, and possibly even superior, to the South African stones are being found in the top soil on a farm near the town of Murfreesboro, Pike County, Arkansas. The soil is merely plowed up and the diamonds are actually just picked from the turned earth.

Probably not one person in a hundred has heard that there are such things as genuine American diamonds. Yet it was back in 1906 that "Diamond Jim" Huddleston picked up the first diamonds on this farm. The news soon spread and a diamond rush began into southwest Arkansas that paralleled, on a small scale, the Klondike gold rush. The town of Kimberley sprang up overnight.

The mining companies have withheld from publication the figures showing complete production. The State geologist of Arkansas estimated that 40,000 diamonds weighing a total of 12,000 carats have been taken out of the workings. Some of the stones have been large. One found in 1917 weighed 17.86 carats, one of 29.25 carats was found in 1921, and the largest of all, 40.23 carats, was found in 1924.

The reason no one has heard about the diamonds is the difficulty of convincing the public that such a thing as an American diamond exists.

Therefore jewelers in the United States will go on selling these stones at a lower price than is possible with the African or Brazilian diamonds, saying nothing of the source of supply.

Back to Crime?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of July 9 you published a full page article under the caption: "Protective Fingerprinting Would Spotlight Criminals in Our Midst." The article goes into great length and depth as to the great good to be derived from a universal compulsory fingerprinting system.

A few cases of former prisoners going wrong on a new job is given. A few instances are cited tending to show the citizen where and how certain "rackets" could be abolished under a compulsory universal fingerprinting system. The overzealous promoters and advocates of this distasteful system of fingerprinting, as is their custom, only portray and give us one side of what would actually happen if such a thing became law. It is a well-known fact that, given work, liberty and something to live for, 90 per cent of human beings will live a normal, contented, happy life.

Denied the opportunity of work and the right to live normal lives, this same percentage of human beings will turn to some form of crime. Under the last Administration, 75 per cent of our citizens, in various ways, were denied honorable work and the normal life that goes with contentment.

It is not surprising, then, that prior to 1932, millions of people in the United States had occasion to resort to crime, even if it went no further than their mental thinking.

Our present Administration proved that alarming, distasteful condition could be corrected by providing jobs and work for citizens. Many of these unfortunate citizens who had to steal or resort to crime in order to eat, during the depression, have since found jobs, have learned that our Government is interested in them and have made honorable citizens.

Now, these overzealous compulsory fingerprinting advocates would make it necessary that every person seeking a job be fingerprinted, thus assuring him that he will not find a job and inviting him back to crime.

It's all well and good to have a system of fingerprinting for certain responsible jobs of our Government and other agencies, but to advocate a law that will put millions out of work and turn men back into crime should have the stern disapproval of every thinking man on earth.

Anti-Alien Bills In Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Dies Committee is neglecting its duty in failing to investigate un-American activities in Congress.

I refer to the 60 so-called anti-alien bills which are now pending in Congress in various stages, some dangerously near to passage. These bills involve a suppression of American rights and liberties which, if advocated by a labor organization or by some political leader not liked by Congress, would arouse a storm of protests like that aroused by the lawlessness of the Lindbergh kidnaping. The papers would be full of it; patriots would be shouting at every street corner; and the American Revolution would be fought again to save the country from such tyranny.

But Congress itself is now encroaching on the freedom of the people, and there is no noise, no protest. Bills which threaten constitutional rights are passed without a word of debate; newspapers pay no attention, and the few men and women who are aware of the danger cannot gain any attention for their warnings, since the people, the very ones who are being injured, trust Congress to protect them from injury. This is why the peril is so great, why the un-Americanism is so perfidious, because it is being perpetrated by those who are sworn to defend us from peril, to guard our American principles.

But these bills, say those who advocate them, are directed against aliens, not against American citizens. They merely shield our own citizens from contamination by foreign ideologies and foreign traitors. This is no justification.

In the first place, aliens are potential citizens, like our fathers or grandfathers. Registering them, fingerprinting them, limiting their thought and speech, barring them altogether, as these bills propose, these are no ways to make them into loyal Americans. These are ways to encourage the subversive influence Congress supposedly means to discourage.

In the second place, it is not only aliens who will be affected by these bills. The Dempsey bill, which provides for the deportation of any alien who advocates "any changes in the American form of Government," will curb the expression of opinion by organizations which may be composed of both citizens and aliens, and therefore citizens will be curbed. Labor unions, especially, will be restricted, since unions by economic necessity must organize both American and alien workers. Under such a law, unions could not even advocate the child labor amendment, without risking deportation of their alien members for favoring a change in the American Government.

The McCormack rider to the Walter espionage bill, although grouped with these anti-alien bills, is not in fact directed any more at aliens than it is at native Americans. This rider makes it a felony for anyone "knowingly and willfully to advocate the overthrow of the Government by violence and force." Of course, no one wants to encourage violent overthrow of the Government, but this legislation is not necessary, for such a purpose; there is adequate legislation already.

And this law is so loosely worded that it can be interpreted to prohibit perfectly legal manifestations of protest. Undoubtedly, the present WPA strikers would all be arrested under this law, and if a jury were inclined to decide that any particular strike was an attempt to undo the existing order, then those strikers could be jailed wholesale, the union broken, and the workers literally enslaved, because they would not be able to exercise their right to leave their jobs in order to bargain for better conditions.

The Hobbs bill is more strictly confined to aliens, but the principle of it must offend every true American man or woman. It proposes to put into concentration camps indefinitely any aliens who have been ordered deported but who cannot obtain passports to their own countries. In these times, it is likely that many could not obtain passports, and the picture of barbed-wire surrounded huddles of homeless immigrants becomes appallingly close and real. These camps are the emblems of fascism, as surely as the swastika and the fasces. We cannot have them stamped across our country, unless the shadow of the swastika approaches too.

The Women's Trade Union League of the District of Columbia opposes these bills absolutely.

ELIZABETH LYLE,
Corresponding Secretary, Washington Committee, National Women's Trade Union League.
Washington, July 17.

Relief

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: History shows that when the people rebel against oppressive government, the rebellion is successful, the country emerges as a democracy. But when a government rebels against the people and the rebellion is successful, the country emerges in nazi-fascism.

When our Congress passed the 130-hour WPA act, our Government revolted against the people. This coolie-wage act is a first open fascistic assault against the American people in general. There are no words to express the grievous injustices it has created not only to WPA workers, but to the 11,000,000 unemployed as well as to all organized and unorganized labor. There is no such a fool as not to be able to see that the bill had been sponsored and engineered in Rome and Berlin. If any Congressman feels that an injustice has been done him with this letter, kindly refer him to me. I am not a "reliefer." JACK JOHNSON.
Washington, July 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is very simple for our Congressmen and Senators, to eliminate the WPA projects. This is because they want to discredit President Roosevelt; and at the same time rid themselves of the New Deal.

It was very difficult for them to find a method, of how to pass the tax bill, so as to make sure that they would be able to exempt themselves. They, who have smaller incomes and get their vacations from now until January 3 with pay, can not see that they are creating a worse depression than we had in Mr. Hoover's Administration.

The WPA employes could not make ends meet when they received full time employment. Now they will not even have rent for the very alleys in which they live at the present time. That is not the fault of the ruling class. They have to look out for themselves.

ANNIE COHEN.
Washington, July 15.

Democratic Litter

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Foreign observers say truthfully that this is a land of startling contrasts. They are thrilled with the stately magnificence of our public buildings, the beauty of our parks, despite the unsightly litter which an irresponsible public leaves in its wake.

If they follow the current news they may well gasp at the unsightly litter which some of our legislators leave behind them, and declare privately that democracy, according to our definition, is indeed a costly and questionable luxury, and that no European nation could afford such a brand. This is a land where the unparalleled generosity of philanthropists and patrons of the arts is often rewarded by a breath-taking irreverence and heedlessness which actually savors of spiritual vandalism.

We are not inherently more selfish than our forebears, but we give more expression to that ugly trait.

If it is true that we shall be called to account for every idle word and deed, there is a severe indictment in store for the struiter (this expression is borrowed from a well-known journalist), as well as for his admirers who egged him on with their impertinent and unseemly applause.

They are neither a credit to their party nor to the electorate who sent them to Congress, nor to the country which is so unfortunate as to acknowledge them as citizens.

M. DE JERSEY.

The Post Impressionist

Gagging The Gags

YOU CAN'T say "hell," you can't say "damn," you can't make jokes about politicians or preachers, dictators or doctors. You can sing a song, but not any song.

Radio has no specific rules of censorship, save bans on the obvious odiums of obscenity and slander. For the rest, the restrictions are made up as the program continuities are submitted to the "editors." The "don'ts," if properly and completely assembled, would fill to flowing a grim-sized rule-book.

The real reason radio lacks a definite "don't" list issued on printed page is that the Federal Communications Commission, which governs radio networks and stations through its power to license and control operation, is not empowered by law to censor. The FCC consequently lets the programs prance out over the ozone as they wish—but:

If a program causes complaint the station carrying it faces the threat of having its license revoked. A half-dozen stations have lost their licenses in a half-dozen years. And, in the mean, a radio station today is valued at roughly $1,000,000.

Further, with the FCC tossing the steaming chestnut of censorship to the station and network operators, the latter must make rules that aren't apparent restrictions that aren't official, but exist.

Fred Allen, who presides over one of the more popular comedy programs, couldn't say, "My grandfather died a noble death; he was trampled on a Minsky runway." That is considered eloquently vulgar. The same Allen, who alone of all radio clowns contributes appreciably to the material used on his programs, has run afoul the censorship shears at N. B. C. more often than all the other comedians combined. It is, more or less, a weekly experience for Allen to have his copy cut at rehearsals for his Wednesday evening show; and for all sorts of reasons.

Shortly after the Orson Welles Martian mirage, Allen bobbed up with a satire on it. N. B. C. sternly forbade, lest the listeners hop out of their hides again. Allen also repeatedly tried to sneak in a crack about Arturo Toscanini during the maestro's first semester on N. B. C., and got balked. The network feared Toscanini might resent being joked about.

Phil Baker, another comic, wasn't permitted by C. B. S. to make a gag about the Supreme Court Justices' ages, nor about John L. Lewis. The networks clip all direct comic references to Hitler and Mussolini. Neither of them, according to radio, is a laughing matter.

Songs from the Broadway revue, "Hellzapoppin," played on N. B. C. can't have their origin mentioned, because the word is verboten. In the matter of lyrics to popular musical pieces, radio frequently bowdlerizes them; a current case is the new set of words fitted into "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." Usually slow to sense shaded meanings, radiomen two weeks ago hurriedly either banned or radically changed lyrics of the popular "Hold Tight." They had learned the lyrics carried a scorchingly hot message couched in the patois of Harlem's "Congo." "Hold Tight" had been sung innocently and unrestrainedly for three months before the censors chopped.

They never chopped nor learned what, in Harlemese, "Flat-Foot Floogie with the Floy-Floy" and its attendant phrases meant.

Abe Lincoln had a salty good humor, a measure of which has been mouthed-to-mouthed down to the present. Yet no Lincoln yarns, however leavened, may be recounted on the air. Radio considers them incompatible with the "dignity" with which it strives to surround the Emancipator. George Washington gets the same hands-off dust-off.

Whereas it could be expected radio would countenance no levity about the President, none is permitted at the expense of ex-Presidents, either. The gag (how feeble), "He's so dopey he still thanks Hoover is President," has been scissored from scripts regularly. No cracks nor puns about the New Deal are tolerated; nor about the Republican, Socialist and Communist parties; nor about Father Coughlin, Al Smith, Florello La-Guardia, the late Huey Long, the Presidential "purge" of last summer. A quick one about "Maine and Vermont" will get by, however.

N. B. C. not long ago refused permission to the Rudy Vallee program to present a brief dramatization in which a medico contemplated killing an enemy upon whom he was operating. In the sketch the doctor conquered the impulse, even though his patient had previously swiped his wife, but the ban was irrevocable nevertheless. Perhaps N. B. C. was unwilling to admit any doctor would have considered murdering a man; in any event the network was afraid the sketch would offend.

Every complaining listener is heeded. A "hundred pounds of beef" (trade term for 100 letters of complaint) can and does make the rules of radio.

ALBERT SCHARPER, JR.

Washington, Maryland!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In as much as the controversy between the Congress and the District of Columbia concerning allocation of funds has continued for many years and will undoubtedly go on, why would it not be worth-while to advocate, not a temporary solution, but a permanent one?

This would be to give the District roughly, north of Pennsylvania avenue to the Potomac, with a loop about the Capitol and adjoining buildings, back to Maryland, to become Washington, Md., while the part south of Pennsylvania avenue would remain Washington, D. C. This would solve a lot of continuing difficulties, and a precedent has been set by the return of Alexandria to Virginia. I do not understand that in that growing town there is any insistent demand to return to the control of the House and Senate District committees as a board of aldermen.

I think that the discussion of this question in your editorial columns might well arouse a good deal of interest. JOHN R. M. TAYLOR.

Embargo Dispute

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Point At Issue

THE CURRENT argument over neutrality legislation is about as substantial as a bagful of cotton candy. It contains about a half teaspoonful of merit. The rest is personal pique, personal prestige, partisanship, lawyers' speciousness and hot weather.

There are real, sincerely and tenaciously held, differences of opinion about American foreign policy, but the threads connecting them with the present argument are long, slender and tangled. The practical question at the moment is whether or not to repeal the embargo on the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war.

This embargo is not now in effect. It becomes effective against nations at war when, and if, the President finds that a war exists. (He didn't choose to find that Germany, Italy or Soviet Russia were engaged in the war in Spain, and he hasn't chosen yet to recognize the Sino-Japanese conflict as a war.)

The Administration argues that the repeal of the embargo would be a deterrent to war in Europe. Administration sources go so far as to hint that the balance between war and peace in Europe rests with our arms embargo. This notion is scouted by persons who are as fully qualified to make an expert guess as are the experts who are loyally supporting the President and Secretary Hull in this legislative fight.

U. S. Seeking To Play Dangerous Game

THE EMBARGO applies only to a limited number of manufactured articles. Nothing in the law prevents the British and the French, who have the money, from continuing to use the United States as a source of supply for everything we have except a small number of articles which are classed as arms, ammunition and implements of war. The Germans and Italians know that. Unquestionably they also know that public opinion in the United States is overwhelmingly against the "aggressor" nations.

If repealing our arms embargo is a deterrent to war, obviously it is a slight deterrent compared with any one of a number of things that may happen in Europe—the consummation of a tight Anglo-Soviet alliance, for example.

The President's purpose in wanting to see the arms embargo repealed is not, of course, neutrality. He long ago abandoned neutrality in the European struggle. That is why the tempered language of Secretary Hull's statement of last Friday could not conceal that several of his arguments are self-contradictory.

The Roosevelt Administration is playing the balance of power game, with the sincere hope of so stacking the cards against Germany and Italy that they will not start a war—and also, with the sincere hope of keeping us out of the war if it occurs. This is a dangerous policy—it is hard to back one side until the going becomes hard and then back away. It is especially dangerous when, in order to whip up support for such a policy, our political leaders engage in a campaign to inflame popular opinion against one group of nations. Opinion thus aroused may get out of hand and nullify a calculated effort to help one side without actually going to war.

President's Policy Distrusted By Some

THE PRESIDENT'S European policy is distrusted by a considerable section of American opinion and a considerable section of Congress. But the arms embargo repeal is a poor issue to fight over. The dividing line between arms, ammunition and implements of war on the one side, and other materials, is arbitrary. If we are likely to be drawn into war by exporting machine guns and airplanes, we are just as likely to be drawn in by exporting copper and trucks. The so-called "isolationists" are not advocating a complete embargo, and, in fact, are not now urging that the embargo be extended to cover any additional commodities.

From a practical viewpoint, the "isolationists" have nothing to gain from opposing repeal of the arms embargo. They have much to lose, including the confidence of many who share their general idea that we should "keep out of Europe." For their position on this issue does not reflect any reasoned, comprehensive plan. Like the Administration, they magnify the importance of the specific point of controversy. In the long run, the Administration probably will win this fight—not so much because of arguments it musters for repealing the arms embargo but because the arguments against repealing it are flimsy. In the event of a war in Europe the pressure to repeal the embargo will grow—and it's a fair guess that airplanes, at least, will promptly be exempted.

What Might Happen If War Breaks Out

SUPPOSE THAT the embargo is not repealed now, and that a war breaks out in Europe. Those who stood against repeal will be open to the charge, probably politically effective, of helping to bring on the catastrophe.

Suppose that the embargo is repealed now. Then if the war breaks out anyway, the isolationists will not be subject to blame. They will be freed of an incubus which might otherwise hamper them in their efforts to keep our troops on this side of the Atlantic.

2 Famed Musicians Here Tonight

Kurtz to Direct at Watergate; Crawford, Barytone, to Sing

Two celebrated musicians with widely different backgrounds, the guest conductor and guest artist of tonight's Sunset Symphony," met yesterday for the first time in Washington and discovered they had almost identical views about programs.

Both will make their first appearances on the Watergate barge tonight, although the conductor, Efrem Kurtz, has been a frequent visitor to Washington with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo since 1933. Robert Crawford, Alaska-born barytone, appeared in recitals here in 1934 and 1937.

Kurtz, tall and lanky, dark-haired and friendly, arrived yesterday from New York, where he has been conducting open-air concerts in the Lewisohn Stadium. "I have chosen two numbers that I don't think have ever been heard in Washington before," he said. "I think audiences get tired of always hearing Beethoven and Brahms."

Both Like Rare Works

The two new works will be "Canzonetta," by Sibelius, for strings alone, which Kurtz gave its first New York performance at the stadium last week, and the rarely-played Schubert Symphony No. 3, of which only the second and third movements, Allegro and Minuet, will be heard tonight.

Crawford, the "flying baritone" from Princeton University, with a football player's massive chest and a movie actor's profile, believes in singing "things that all other barytones don't sing." Besides the familiar "Toreador Song," from Bizet's opera "Carmen," he has brought along three modern American works, two of which he had to orchestrate himself.

These are "The Buzzard Song," from George Gershwin's opera "Porgy and Bess," for which the only existing orchestration is in the full operatic score, and "Caliban in the Coal Mines," a poem by Louis Untermeyer set to music by Lewis Raymond. This has never been sung with orchestra before, according to Crawford, although "The Buzzard Song" was sung at Lewisohn Stadium last week by Todd Duncan, the original "Porgy" of the first operatic performance.

Crawford's other unusual offering will be the soliloquy, "This Thing I Do," from Hageman's opera, "Caponsacchi," which had its first performance last year by the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York.

Crawford started out in life as a newsboy in Alaska, where he delivered the Fairbanks News-Miner by dog-sled. But it was walking in the bunch-grass of the Alaskan swamps that first made him want to take up flying, he said yesterday in his room at the Raleigh Hotel.

Now he flies his own plane and five years ago taught his wife to do the same. But yesterday's bad weather induced them to come down by car, praying all the way for better luck tonight.

When Kurtz picks up Dr. Hans Kindler's baton tonight he will be taking the place of an old friend. The conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra met Kurtz when the Ballet Russe first came to Washington and more recently the two crossed the Atlantic together on the liner New Amsterdam.

Likes Watergate Site

"My wife played deck-tennis with him all the way over," said Kurtz yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel, "but he was too good for me." It was after a performance of the Ballet Russe in Paris last year, Kurtz explained, that Dr. Kindler asked him to conduct the Watergate concert.

Kurtz was enthusiastic about the Watergate as a concert site. "I was very struck by last Sunday's concert, which I heard over the radio," he said. "I think the water probably helps the acoustics."

Other numbers on tonight's program will be the Berlioz "Symphony Fantastique" and the overture to Wagner's opera, "The Flying Dutchman." Kurtz also will conduct Sunday's concert, when the principal work will be Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, the "Pathetique."

Squalus Unhurt By Second Plunge

Portsmouth, N. H., July 18 (AP).—The submarine Squalus sank almost on an even keel without breaking open her hatches, it was found today by two divers who defied death in a maze of wires to reach the submersible for the first time since she broke away from salvage pontoons last Thursday.

The divers, Henry Frye, of Washington, and Lieut. J. K. Morrison, prospective skipper of the new submarine Sea Lion, went down 240 feet for the report.

Victim Is Promoted

The Senate yesterday passed legislation promoting posthumously to the grade of lieutenant, junior grade, the late Ensign Joseph H. Patterson, who lost his life in the Squalus disaster two months ago.

18 Playgrounds To Be Opened Here are expected to require two days, clearing those requisitioned on Monday for duty today.

The WPA supervisors will be assigned to various of the ten grounds on the "must" list, as they report to the commission today. Since the recreation programs to be carried out at the different grounds require different types of supervision, Barrett said the exact order of opening the play centers must follow the order in which the various supervisors report for duty.

Interviews with prospective supervisors will continue today and by tomorrow it is anticipated the WPA will have received requests for the services of approximately 30 supervisors, sufficient to staff the grounds on whose opening the commission is now concentrating.

Equipment Now Available

Equipment is now available for a well-rounded program at the 30 playgrounds he hopes to have in service within a week, Barrett said, and orders have been placed for additional sand boxes, handicraft materials, building blocks and sports goods.

Commissioner Hazen's suggestion for giving the children themselves a share in responsibility for play supervision was heartily indorsed yesterday by Barrett.

"There is no doubt that is a real field for service—especially in safety patrol work on the streets adjoining playgrounds," he said. "And the youngsters who do these jobs get valuable leadership experience and training in citizenship."

Recruiting of junior volunteer leaders will be in the hands of the various playground directors, Barrett indicated, while his office "gives every possible encouragement."

Additional Personnel Given

Simultaneous with opening of school playgrounds this week, nine regular playgrounds will be given additional personnel to aid them in offering programs which will keep children out of traffic lanes, it was announced.

At least one extra supervisor, Barrett said, will be sent to each of the following fields: Lincoln, Stanton, Gallinger and Franklin Parks; Burroughs, Rosedale and Garfield Playgrounds and Randall and Banneker Recreation Centers.

Ex-Worker Takes Poison on Call at Navy Department

Nine years of idleness and knowledge that he was losing his sight led Robert L. Allen, 70, to take poison in a corridor at the Navy Department yesterday, according to police. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital, but was dead on arrival.

Retired from the Navy Department, the aged man had been visiting former fellow employes. He told several, according to Sergt. Fred Rawlinson, homicide squad, that his sight was failing and that he felt "just above the earth." He paid a premium on insurance while he was at the building.

He had moved recently from Arlington to make his home with a son, Thomas Allen, at 38 Franklin street northeast.

Legality of Anthem Is Attacked aspects of the singer's charge until she had had time for "study."

Jagel, whose vocal range has won him top rank among the world's tenors, said he couldn't sing the "Star-Spangled Banner," and he didn't think anyone else could.

Know People Who Can

Col. Key-Smith and Mrs. Robert said they thought they could, or, rather, they knew people who could scale the notes of the piece more than acceptably.

Mrs. Robert's reply was that in her travels she has heard the anthem given some "remarkable renditions." "If they learn the words and make up their minds to sing it, they can sing it all right," she said.

Col. Key-Smith had some historical evidence to back her up. He recalled the music had been rewritten in a lower key.

"Anyone can sing it," he said.

Low Tune, High Notes

Jagel's petition will state, his attorney said, that "The Star-Spangled Banner" is a low tune with too many high notes. He called the words of Francis Scott Key "vindictive" and "unpoetic" and wedded to an ancient barroom ballad with a difficult range of one and one-fifth octaves. Not even a tenor can be at home on a range like that, insisted the tenor.

Old stuff, was Col. Key-Smith's reply to this phase of the singer's attack. In effect, said the colonel, they'll do it every time. He was referring to the song's enemies who, in his lifetime, he has come to know as legion.

"The argument that the 'Star-Spangled Banner' can't be sung or the argument that its words are too militaristic are both very old," he said. "There should be no difficulty about the singing, and, as for the martial spirit of the words, they're not that at all.

Church Song More Martial

"When Francis Scott Key in 1814 wrote the first verse of the song he was asking the most natural question in the world—'Oh say can you see?' He merely wanted to know if Baltimore had fallen to the British.

"What's militaristic about that?"

Col. Key-Smith cited as examples of songs he considered vastly more martial than the "Star-Spangled Banner," the French National Anthem and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"The song, as a whole, merely depicts a very wonderful victory of America in the War of 1812," Col. Key-Smith continued. "Why, the last verse in an appeal to God for peace. Now, what could be militaristic about that?"

As for the legality of the song's anthem status, Col. Key-Smith cited its elevation to that station by "acclamation of" the American people more than 100 years before Congress acted. He recalled, also, that President Theodore Roosevelt in the first years of the century issued an executive order making the "Star-Spangled Banner" the national anthem for all military purposes.

Col. Key-Smith remembered, also, that Admiral Dewey had once told him of supplying Prince Henry of Prussia with band music for the song. The prince had entertained Dewey aboard ship at Manila and had played, as the American anthem, "Hail Columbia."

for unprotected girls in anything smattering of high life."

He added that he didn't recall giving Willo a letter of introduction to Grover Whalen, and didn't recall that he'd met her.

Willo spent most of the day sightseeing at the Aquarium, the Battery, Greenwich Village and the George Washington Bridge.

"I haven't seen anything harmful," she said.

As for the Governor—"He's all right," she said firmly, adding she didn't expect him to view the world the way she sees it.

Recall Fies Prepared

Detroit, July 18 (AP).—John B. Corliss, jr., former Republican member of the Legislature, announced today he would begin circulation of petitions for recall of Gov. Dickinson.

"I am making no specific charges against the Governor because the law does not require specific charges," Corliss said. "The charges are general and are based on the Governor's recent sounding off . . ."

"I've known John for a long time," Dickinson told reporters who informed him of the recall movement, "and I'll sign his petition myself. I never was anxious to be Governor.

"Well, it'll be interesting anyway—and I've got a farm to go to."

The Governor and Corliss are Republicans.

Occult Experts

FREDDY LIEB, who covered baseball for a quarter of a century and retired a few years ago, has written a book called "Sight Unseen," dealing with occult matters, in which he confides that he often consults a spook named Mark Antony through the medium of an ouija board. This revelation will be of peculiar interest to members of his late large public in New York who used to follow him through mazes of percentage figures to arrive at predictions on the pennant contests in the major leagues and on the World's Series after-shows. It will be even more interesting to Mr. Jack Randolph, a journalist who was working on the copy desk of the Richmond Times-Dispatch in the autumn of 1936, when Mr. Lieb offered to bet even money on Alf Landon against Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mr. Randolph had been saving a Liberty Leaguer all summer of that year and was expecting to take him for a wager at something like 8 to 5 when his Liberty Leaguer suddenly took fright, refusing to be drawn into any sort of bet whatever.

In this sad situation your correspondent generously offered to give Mr. Randolph a piece of Mr. Lieb, who was then about to drive south to his home in St. Petersburg, Fla., passing through Richmond on the way.

Richmond Crowd Blocked Courthouse

MR. LIEB agreed to meet Mr. Randolph on the courthouse steps in Richmond on a certain day, but just when everything seemed to be arranged beyond the possibility of mishap Mr. Randolph confided his secret to a few friends, and the word spread through Richmond like the whooping cough through a kindergarten. The result was that on the day Mr. Lieb passed through Richmond the crowd was so great that he could not approach within three blocks of the courthouse.

Your correspondent got $25 worth of Mr. Lieb at even money, just pour le sport, and thought no more about it until this book came out recently. It is a very peculiar book, just to begin with, because Mr. Lieb says that he was prompted to write it by a belief which had been gnawing at him for years that there must be some more enjoyable system of life than those systems which are followed by most members of the human race.

THIS, COMING from a man who was a baseball writer for 25 years, is indeed peculiar, for it is commonly agreed that baseball writers have the most enjoyable life of all. They go South with the clubs in the spring and play golf or swim from about 10 in the morning until about 6 in the evening, when one member of each group, who has been delegated for that day's duty, goes into the hotel with his notes on the practice, sore arms, releases and so forth and passes the stuff around to his colleagues, who then work about 30 minutes preparing their living, human document for the wire.

Later the baseball writers ride home with the athletes, covering their exhibitions on the way, and at mid-April they settle down to a routine of daily ball games and journeys on first-class trains to the various cities of the major leagues, in which they live at the best hotels on rich meats and heavy gravies. Nevertheless, Mr. Lieb voluntarily abandoned this life to retire to St. Petersburg and try to imagine one even better.

But it is his admission that the ouija board and the spook named Mark Antony helped him arrive at his predictions which will cause most discussion and possibly, among his colleagues who have continued in the baseball business, some resentment. For the business of experting the baseball races and World's Series contests has been a solemn affair for many years, and even Mr. Lieb himself, when he was engaged in making predictions, always gave his customers an impressive show of careful calculation.

Art Of Experting Given Serious Blow

HE WOULD PUT down long lists of figures running into four decimals and divide the runs batted in by the pitchers' strikeout records and multiply the result by the bases on balls and add a small sprig of something he called the psychological factor.

In one 10-year stretch he picked 17 out of the 20 pennant winners in the two major leagues, including the Yankees the year after they had finished seventh with Babe Ruth in the dog house. And he was right in 18 out of 25 World Series, being fouled in one of his errors when the Chicago Black Sox threw the series to the Reds.

Obviously, if the ouija board was giving him his selections all this time or most of the time, Mr. Lieb's statistics were a blind and his clients wasted many manhours of study. But, more serious, is the blow to the prestige of the art of experting baseball, and it would seem that Mr. Lieb would have been more sporting if he had kept his trade secret to himself.

In 1936 he insisted that he picked Mr. Landon by the ear-to-the-ground method, but in view of his admission now it is impossible to stifle a doubt. It is equally difficult to stifle a thought that the editors of the late Literary Digest consulted the same authority in arriving at the same result.

Trouble In Eden

Intrigues In The Middle East

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

AT A TIME when we have one eye on Danzig and the other on the Far East, it is easy to forget that the British Empire has other responsibilities which cannot be ignored, and one of these is the situation in the Middle East, which is in a strategic sense the bridge between Britain's problems in Europe and those in the Pacific.

Within the last month the international whispering gallery has been busy with a minor mystery. Khalid al Hud, described as an emissary of King Ibu Saud of Arabia, was received in audience by Adolf Hitler, and subsequently went on to Rome to pay his respects to Signor Mussolini. What was his business? Who exactly was he? Did he officially represent King Ibu Saud?

When questioned, the Saudi Arabian Legation, various government departments and other centers of information all professed complete ignorance. A day or two after the visit to Berchtesgaden the Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, a Nazi organ whose booming tones are reserved for very special occasions, came out with a full account of the significance the German government attributed to the visit. What, if any significance the Saudi Arabian government attaches to them is still unknown. This incident suggests the immense importance attached by Germany, Italy, France, and more especially Great Britain, to any development likely to affect the strategical situation in this all-important area.

IF YOU TAKE a map and draw a line eastwards from Istanbul (Constantinople) to Samarkuand, then southwards from Samarkuand through Herat and Muscat to Aden, thence northwards up the Red Sea to Cairo and back to Istanbul, you enclose an area of roughly 250,000 square miles.

This is the Middle East, the traditional site of the Garden of Eden, the birthplace of Christianity and Islam, the home of the oldest civilizations known to archeologists. It is the land bridge between Europe and Asia, and as such has always had an immense strategic importance, whether to the Empire of Alexander the Great, or the British Empire of today.

To give the barest outline of the revolution which has taken place in the Middle East since, and largely as the result of, the War of 1914-18 would take a good sized volume. It must suffice to say that since the collapse of the Ottoman empire, which in pre-war days ruled over Turkey, Syria, Palestine and Mespotamia, and exercised a shadowy sovereignty over Egypt and Arabia, half a dozen strong modern states have come into being, all of whom are fully alive to their strategic importance, and who require handling with the utmost discretion. Nearly all of them have adopted Western technique, especially with regard to transport and mechanized armies, but all of them are vehemently opposed to Western control.

THE STRATEGIC importance of the Middle East from the British point of view can be summed up as sea communications, air communications and oil.

Ever since the opening of the Suez Canal, the Red Sea has been a vital link in our sea communications with India, the Far East and Australasia. At its northern end are two gulfs on either side of the Sinai Peninsula. At the head of the Western gulf lies Suez, in the hands of Egypt, now an independent state in alliance with Great Britain, and pledged to assist her in the defense of the Suez Canal.

At the head of the Eastern Gulf lies Aquaba, annexed in 1925 to Transjordan, an emirate under British protection. In the event of Suez becoming for any reason unusable, Aquaba could be developed as a harbor and linked by road to Palestine and Syria. The present status of Aquaba is a sore point between us and King Ibn Saud. The Eastern shores of the Red Sea are largely in the hands of Ibn Saud, ruler of the puritanical Wahabis, who since the war have mopped up most of their rivals in the Arabian Peninsula, notably the Kingdom of the Hedjaz, the holy land of the Moslems, with the sacred cities of Mecca and Medina.

IBN SAUD is by far the greatest of the Arab kings and the maintenance of friendly relations with him is of vital importance to Great Britain, not only for strategical reasons, but because the British Empire contains 100,000,000 Moslems. At the southern end of the Red Sea our position is less secure. On the western shores of the Straits of Bab-el-Manoeb lies the Italian province of Eritrea, with a fortified port at Assab. On the opposite shore lies the Yemen, whose ruler is in alliance with Italy.

It is true that we have a fortified base and fueling station at Aden, and exercise control of the whole of the southern coast of Arabia. It is also true that under the Anglo-Italian agreement both parties agreed to respect the status quo in the Red Sea, not to try and obtain any political privileges in Saudi Arabia and the Yemen, respectively, and to refrain from impairing each others interests by propaganda. But if Italy's disregard of this last undertaking is any measure of her respect for the other two, it would be unwise to regard this treaty as a sheet anchor.

ROUNDING the southeastern corner of Arabia we come to the Persian Gulf, a region of considerable importance to the naval control of the Indian Ocean, and of even greater importance to the air communications of the empire.

Ever since the opening of this country is has been a maxim of British policy never to allow any rival western power to establish bases in the Persian Gulf.

On its eastern shores lies the Kingdom of Iran, which, under the rule of Riza Khan Paslevi, has been transformed into a modern state in friendly relations with its neighbors (Iran, Turkey, Afghanistan and Russia) and capable of maintaining its integrity against all comers.

Our relations with Iran are polite, but not intimate. After long drawn out negotiations the Iranian government agreed in 1933 to renew the concessions of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. for 60 years, but attempts to secure permission for Imperial Airways to use the Iranian coast as a section of the route to India failed completely. It was therefore decided to utilize the eastern coast of Arabia, three-quarters of which is governed by principalities under British protection, the remaining being in the hands of King Ibu Saud.

At the present time air communications with India (and thence with Australasia and the Far East) pass through Gwidar in Baluchistan to Dibai and Bahrein in eastern Arabia, and thence via Iraq to Palestine and the Mediterranean.

AT THE HEAD of the Persian Gulf lies Iraq, since 1932 an independent state in alliance with Great Britain. Iraq (late Mesopotamia, is astride the shortest route between Britain and India, and is the focal point of communication on the middle east whether by road, railway or air. Besides being the civil and military air depot for the whole middle east, Iraq is by far the greatest source of oil under the control of Great Britain and her probable allies. The major interest in the Iraq Petroleum Co. is British, whilst the Khaneqin Company operating in former Persian territories is a subsidiary of the Anglo-Iranian Co. From Kirkuk in northern Iraq, a double pipe line runs to Haditha on the Euphrates, and then bifurcates, the French line branching off to Tripoli in Syria, and the British through Transjordan to Haifa in Palestine.

Syria and Palestine. These sensitive spots in the Arab world, the scene of so much misunderstanding and strife, are the vulnerable points of France and Britain's strategical position in the Middle East. Strategical considerations are by no means everything, but it is against this background that we must consider the recent decisions of the British government with regard to what Bernard Shaw has called "The Twice Promised Land."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Dear Grover Whalen:

As the attendance at the World's Fair is not up to expectations, I thought maybe you would welcome some suggestions from an old World's Fair expert. There is something lacking, Grover, and I think it is the circus, county fair and Coney Island touch. The fair needs lions, tigers, comedians, a chute the chutes, a couple of loop the loops and a general whoopla-and-who-cares atmosphere. There is too much emphasis on the wonders of science and too little on the wonders of mass picnicking.

Trying to make a Nationwide appeal out of Trylon and Perisphere was a mistake, as very few people ever heard of 'em, anyhow and if it ain't too late I would fire this team and get Abbott and Costello, Oleson and Johnson or somebody the average man knows. Another mistake has been to allow the impression to get out that the amusement area was only a stepchild and would have to worry along as best as it could. It is great to find out how lightning is made and what goes on in the intestinal tract, Grover, but it is not much fun even with music.

Not that I would detract from the scientific and engineering wonders. I think it is grand to see forked lightning produced a la carte and all that, but you should also add some demonstrations that would clear up mysteries closer to the average man's heart.

How about a demonstration showing what makes a straw hat roll so far on an even keel after it has been blown off a head and how it can be weighted so it will go around in circles? Why not an exhibit showing what goes into lunchroom humburgers and how far science can go into changing it into something edible?

Have you ever thought of an exhibit showing a dentist having a tooth drilled by a patient or a surgeon having his tonsils removed by a perfect stranger?

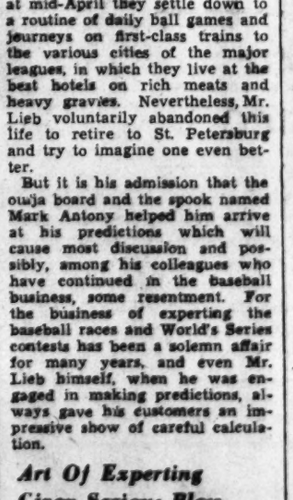

But most of all, Grover, make the amusement area an amusement area and start a campaign to cut the atmosphere of dignity down 50 per cent. And lay off inviting all those pompous dignitaries to the fair with special ceremonies. Invite Dizzy Dean, Bobby Clark, Jimmy Durante, the Marx Brothers, Brenda Frazier, Walt Disney, Johnstown, Tony Galento and others with a public appeal. And how about a roller skating hall and some old-fashioned cane racks and somebody like Little Egypt? Are you asleep?

Yours as ever,
ELMER TWICHELL.

Portrait Of A Wonder Man

Carl Fisher, the man who transformed Miami Beach from a swamp to a Florida paradise, is dead. The story of Fisher and Miami Beach is so incredible it is impossible to write a convincing story of it. His amazing work there hinged on an incident. Fisher was at some other point awaiting the delivery of a motorboat. John Levy, now Mayor of Miami Beach, was then a motorboat agent and was to deliver the boat. John got the boat as far as Miami and suggested that Fisher come there and do some fishing on it. Fisher was sold on Florida from the moment of his arrival, and within a short time was building Miami Beach. It was his dream of a super-resort at Montauk Point that later took most of his millions.

Incidentally Fisher made his first big pile by selling the Prestolite Company for a fortune. Remember those prestolite tanks in the early days of automobiling? They contained the gas which lit the headlights. The tanks were carried on the underside of the running board. You had to open the doors of the headlight, get down on your knees with a key and turn on the gas . . . and then run buckety-buckety back to the front of the car and touch a match to the gas jet. Oh, boy!

World's Fair Offers Nursery Planning Tips

Has Flexible Crib, Large Trestle Table, Good Lighting

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE HEAR A lot of twaddle about nurseries and rooms for small children. If a person has lots of time and money, it's all very well to go in for fancy notions. But when life is real and life is earnest, we might take a tip in nursery planning from a miniature model we saw at the World's Fair.

A room of medium size it was with facilities for two little children, or one small child and one older. The crib was cleverly designed so it could be lengthened as the child grows older (manufacturers of nursery furniture please note!). The studio couch was a regulation model which could be a double size if desired.

Quite an innovation in planning was the use of a large trestle table placed at right angles to the windows with chairs on either side and a good light dropped from the ceiling over it. Here is an ideal place to play with blocks, crayon sets or little trains—or later for study. Directly back of it is a bookcase cabinet to hold toys or school books and supplies. A chest of drawers provides storage space for clothes, and there you are with a sturdy useful room that could literally be used from crib-to-college.

We must add, however, a paragraph about some of the new nursery furniture put out by a leading American manufacturer. There are small tables and chairs that lock together so a child can't "fool" and push things around.

Religious Mother Wishes Daughter to Become a Nun; Latter Feels No "Inward Call;" Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My mother has set her heart on my becoming a nun. She is my only parent and extremely religious. But I do not feel the inward call to enter the religious life. I try to get this feeling; I pray for it earnestly and sometimes I think I have it, but in a little while it wears off, although I have no absolute dislike of becoming a nun.

I am aware that I have been a great expense to my mother, in spite of having won a scholarship once. But my conscience tells me that a nun's life wouldn't suit me. God may yet give me the spirit, for which, I assure you, I am continually praying. But then, He may not. And in that case, don't you think I ought to look around for another vocation?

My mother does not want me to go into business and I don't know anything much about money matters, but don't you think there may be something I can find to do? I don't like to ask her to support me while I look for another job and I don't want to make her unhappy. I don't know whether to (a) become a nun and no longer burden my mother, or (b) satisfy my own wishes by doing something else. Perhaps I could get married and not need a job. Please advise me. C. S.

Authoritative Opinion

DEAR C. S.: It is my privilege to know, sufficiently well to call friend, an outstanding member of the Catholic clergy in Washington; outstanding not so much in the sense of worldly recognition and publicized achievement, as for his extraordinary fund of practical wisdom, irresistibly dynamic spiritual character and the joyous selflessness with which he ministers—with infinite tenderness and almost miraculous success—to the needs of those who bring their problems to him for solution.

I have invited this man's opinion with regard to your supposed dilemma and I am pleased to report that it corroborates my own. Speaking from a background of special, complete knowledge of the demands and purposes of the religious way of life—plus an understanding of human nature both intuitive and seasoned—this man said, without a moment's hesitation, that you would be altogether wise in resisting your mother's ill-advised pressure, since you feel as you do.

He pointed out that the religious way of life is never an easy one, even for those who recognize it as their only acceptable vocation; and mentioned the probationary period for the novice as existing for the purpose of enabling any who have emotionally—yet in all sincerity—mistaken their calling, to reconsider their intent in time to avoid a mis-spent, unnecessarily unhappy life.

He said, moreover, that if you were to be honest with such spiritual advisers as you would need to consult, in taking steps to become a nun, that you would not be admitted to any order. That is to say, such persons would recognize, in your faltering dubiety, every reason for advising you against such a course. He suggests, in all kindliness, that you listen to the dictates of your own conscience in this matter—to the extent of being guided by your own preferences, rather than by your mother's zealous insistence.

Your mother, he remarks, stands in greater need of prayerful guidance than do you. He suggests that she needs the advice of a spiritual consultant; and the latter, he feels sure, would "tell her to leave her daughter alone." It is plain to see that your mother is trying to do what so many misguided parents try to do—namely, work out certain frustrations of their own by employing a child's life as the medium through which to live their own lives over again, according to a different pattern.

It may be that your mother is emotionally immature and has always been greatly afraid of life. She may feel that there is security to be found in a nunnery such as does not exist elsewhere on earth, in any different set of circumstances. But what she fears and feels and hopes may not rightfully be visited on you. What her experience has been yours need not be; and, indeed, could not be.

Not only do you have a right to deny your mother's wish, in this instance; but it appears that you are obliged, in very spiritual integrity, to withhold that concession. Nor do you have any occasion to suffer a guilty conscience, in the matter of accepting support from her until you can stand on your own feet. In bringing you into the world she incurred the moral and social responsibility of caring for you, until you are implemented to support yourself. You cannot be held to blame, nor required to pay such penalty as she asks, if she has failed thus to equip you.

If your mother is determined to be more of a hindrance than a help, in the matter of intelligently planning your future, you will have to blaze a trail without her collaboration. So, if the business world appeals, go into it despite her disapproval and lugubrious warnings. As for your ignorance "about money matters," that can be remedied. Successful money management boils down, in the final analysis, to the consistent practice of spending less than you make. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman's Page.

Dark Blouse for Variety

For summer wardrobe doldrums try a trick or two with dark blouses and light skirts. Dark against white not only provides a study in color contrasts but makes for greater individuality and distinctiveness. The pretty Hollywood actress, Jane Wyman (above), uses this device to give variety to her costumes. She selects a navy blouse with white stripes, wide navy patent leather belt to wear with a gleaming white sharkskin skirt

Sour Cream Potato Salad Is Summer Dish Suggested

Favorite of Helen Sellers, Home Economist, Who Was Reared in Pennsylvania Tradition Of Cookery; It Gives Tang to Meal

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington are presented daily in this column.

A QUAINT custom of the Pennsylvania Dutch, is the one known as the "Seven Sweets and Seven Sours." The tradition is that the housewife set her table with exactly seven sweets and seven sours.

MISS SELLARS

Our guest editor today, Helen Sellars, Home Economist, Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, gives The Post food readers a recipe which may be used as the "sour" for the meal. Miss Sellars, comes from Pennsylvania, a State famous for its fine cooking. She was educated at Duke University, Durham, N. C., for one year, but transferred to Drexel Institute of Technology in Philadelphia, her home town, so she could get home economics work. Graduating from Drexel in June, 1938, she came to her present position.

Miss Sellars said, when asked for her favorite recipe, "One of my favorite recipes for summer is Sour Cream Potato Salad. The sour cream gives it a tang that is delicious." The following is the recipe for making Miss Sellars' favorite food.

Sour Cream Potato Salad

Cook 4 medium sized potatoes in the jackets. When cold, peel the potatoes and cut in small cubes. Combine 2 tablespoons each of vinegar, lemon juice, grated onion and chopped parsley, and 1 cup thick sour cream. Season with salt to taste and a dash of paprika. Add 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento, ½ cup chopped dill pickle, and ¼ cup chopped crisp bacon to the potatoes. Toss together with the sour cream mixture and chill. Serve on crisp lettuce. Serves 6.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Hollywood, July 18.

GIRL ABOUT HOLLYWOOD—West is East, all right. One of the first girls I met around the studios was Hildergarde Fillmore, beauty editor of a big magazine, and one of the old New York gang . . . And West is swell, too. Why, one of the Los Angeles papers has a society chatterer named Princess Conchita Pignatelli. The best Gotham ever did in this line was a Russian Baron Wrangell.

Driving along the "Strip," which divides Hollywood from Beverly Hills, the lights of the town lying below are still a glorious sight of nights. Hall recalls that a decade ago the gag was that at any moment they would suddenly spell "Clara Bow." Now he supposes they would spell "Hedy Lamarr." Same lights, different names that's the immortal cinema.

Great experiences with these "drive-in restaurants" here, famed Southern California institution. Just eat off trays in the car. I went up against a local specialty called a "nutberger" last night—sort of hamburger with nuts and many other frills. Very nice—but I had galloping nightmares later. Just an Eastern sissy, not gaited to the great West.

AND DRINKS! This town speaks with awe of one Hellbrew called the "Zombie," confected of various rums. It is the specialty of one Hollywood cafe, which will not serve a customer more than two. It is said to be a harmless-tasting tonic, but one which leaves the mind clear and parlyzes the legs. Not for Aunt Alice! She'll stick to buttermilk and play it safe.

ONE OF THE fantastic joys of Hollywood dressing is the variety of raiment seen at even the fanciest "premieres." I have seen name-famous stars in slacks and sweaters rubbing elbows with others in black satin and ermine, gents in black ties or polo shirts. I wish this first-night informality would spread to New York theaters!

Vacation Dilemma

I

My closet needs straightening, my clothes need repairing,
My life is all turned upside down;
I should like on vacation to do much overhauling,
If only I dared "stay in town."

II

If for once in my life I could go leisurely shopping,
And get organized fully at home,
The whole year ahead would seem pleasant and easy,
But my friends at the mouth all would foam.

III

I should like to file, clip and burn, sweep out junk and debris
From my life, did I not fear the pity
And the shrill-shrieked, incredulous "Oh's" and "Ah's" of my friends.
Because I have not "left the city."

IV

I should like very much to save some of my nickels
For creditors, rainy days, clothes in the fall,
And yet I am "queer" if I do not even borrow money,
And take to my heels to "escape from it all."

V

I should like to sit idly, take stock of where I am going,
Know each fleeting moment was wholly my own;
No schedule to meet, no person or place to be seeing;
But such "strange" behavior no one would condone.

VI

I should like some free day to discover around me
The beauty I've passed at too rapid a pace,
If I only had strength to withstand the exclaimings,
"You don't mean to say you have stayed in this place!"

VII

So I shall pack, stew and fidget, rush for trains and for taxis,
(Thus insure my social renown),
And live in a suitcase and welter in chaos,
So I can boastfully say, 'I have been out of town."

VIII

Then I shall return, tired, spent, broke and muddled,
Yet my viewpoint is "broadened," they say,
And at least I can hold my own loudly in chatter,
And can chip in with pride, "Now when I was away——"

Camera Art, Self-Taught

SO MANY thrilling scenes these summer days—landscapes, clouds, friends at play! How you would like to get them all with your camera. And you can—if you know in advance the simple answers to questions that may bob up.

What to do if the landscape "moves"—branches wave, grasses bend in the breeze? Open lens to F.8, give a faster shutter speed, 1-50 second.

How to get attractive flower shots? Avoid direct overhead sun. Take flowers in the early morning, toward dusk or on a hazy day.

What do do about the glaring light at the beach . . . on the water? Close lens to F.22, exposure 1-50 second.

How to get a "natural" shot of your picnic party? Don't let your friends look at the camera, snap them off guard if you can.

A gorgeous sky—but you're afraid you won't get the cloud formations? Cut your usual landscape exposure down to one-half or one-quarter. Effective aids, too, are sky filters, panchromatic film.

Simple to take good pictures, avoid duds! Our 40-page booklet, "Successful Amateur Photography," has dozens of tips on taking action and still-life pictures, landscapes, portraits indoors and out. Has pointers on lighting, exposures, composition, suggestions on choosing a camera.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Successful Amateur Photography," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Gay 90's Figure Needed for New Styles; Slim Waist and Natural Curve of Hips Are Emphasized; Exercise Is Needed

THIS FALL we're all going to look like the glamor girls of the Gay Nineties, with diminutive waists, sculptured hips, and bustles! And even though you are fully convinced now that you will never wear anything as unnecessary as a bustle, you will probably come around to it—or something like it!

The thing about these extra doodads on clothes is that they call for a firm underlying contour. It is a help to have this advance information about fall fashions. It gives you time to get your figure in shape. And if you are under the impression that you can go along and ignore the close tie-up between fashions and figures, you should visit some of the Fifth avenue figure salons. They have all worked out special exercises for the purpose of getting milady's silhouette in time for fall!

Slim in Middle

At one salon, they are copying the cat in a series of lithe line exercises which pull you out slim in the middle and give you a regal posture. There are any number of excellent stretchers but one of the most catlike is done on all fours:

Down on the floor on hands and knees! Now, step forward with the right hand and slowly raise the right foot up in back, straightening the leg and stretching luxuriously from tip to toe. Repeat with the left hand forward, the left foot raised in back. Take it slowly and stretchily—be as catty as possible!

At another salon they are "bumping" themselves off! An ingenious set of bumping exercises is directed at the amphora curve of the hip—a most important line in the fall fashions. Here's one of the best of these exercises:

Assume a half-sitting position on the floor, lying on the left side, with weight partially supported on the left forearm. The left leg should be turned out slightly to bring the weight to bear on the soft pad on the side of the hip. Flex the right leg with the foot up near the hips and place the right hand in back of the body. Now you're all set! Bump up and down 25 times on the soft cushion of fat on the outer side of the hip or thigh, as the case may be. Rest, change sides, and repeat.

Artificial Bustles Only

Since the idea back of all this is not to carry your own bustle, you will also like the following exercise to flatten the derriere:

Assume a half sitting position, this time with both hands out on the floor at the sides, the legs together and straight down on the floor. Using the hands and heels as levers, raise the hips slightly off the floor, and bring them down with a spank. Turn the hips slightly to one side, raise, and spank. The exercise is a combination of rolling and bumping. Perform gradually, first to one side, then to the other.

With exercises like those, you should have no difficulty in trimming your figure down to specifications. Then let them bring on their new fashions—you'll be ready for them!

Warm Baths Are Cooling

When the red line on the thermometer heads for the ceiling and the sultry summer sun beats down there's nothing like bathing to lower the temperature and raise the morale. Even though the mercury keeps on soaring the combination of soap and water makes for comfort, for the best way of keeping cool in summer is keeping clean.

A warm bath with a cool shower or rinse at the finish is preferable to a cold one. Cold water acts as a stimulant and once the initial chill subsides the final reaction is likely to be one of heat. Warm water, on the other hand, brings a cooling reaction. Although it first draws an increased amount of blood to the skin surface, the blood soon subsides to normal and a feeling of coolness results.

Legislators Forsake Desks to Meet Author

Mrs. Henry D. Flood Entertains at Mint Julep Party for Robert Kohler, Whose 'The Doctor's Murder Case' Is Just Off the Press

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

IT SEEMS TO TAKE an author to draw Congressional celebrities away from their desks these days. Late yesterday afternoon, they were all over the place at the mint julep party given by Mrs. Henry D. Flood for her nephew, Robert Portner Kohler, whose third novel, "The Doctor's Murder Case," is just off the press. The event, in fact, was to celebrate the publication, and so far as I could see there never was a merrier gathering in any mid-summer of Washington's history.

From 5:30 o'clock until dinner time, the Flood apartment at the Shoreham was filled with notables who came early and stayed late, not only enjoying the mint juleps but hoping for a chance to talk with the personable young author who never finishes one yarn until he has another in mind. Right now, when the doctor's mystery has just hit the boards, he has another book finished; and still another "working" in his mind.

Writing such a novel, he says, is not only a matter of beginning at the end and proceeding backward, but of making a file—with pink slips for the characters, blue slips for the clews and yellow slips for the time (I hope I'm not mixed up on my shades). Anyway, Mr. Portner will do most of his material-gathering outside Washington soon. He will be off in the next few days for St. Louis. "Where I'll go after that, I don't know yet," he said. "Just anywhere I park my typewriter is home."

Among those who drifted around to the Flood apartment to meet him yesterday were Senator Tom Connally, who will head for Texas the minute Congress adjourns; Senator George L. Radcliffe, Senator John G. Townsend, jr., Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Waverly Taylor, Ralph Snowden Hill, Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, Admiral Adolphus Staton, Mrs. Andrew S. Hickey, Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne and Pendleton Hogan, the author, who will be off the latter part of August for Bar Harbor, Me., to visit Dr. and Mrs. James F. Mitchell, who are summering there. Miss Eleanor Flood, who was trimly turned out in sky-blue crepe, assisted her mother during the afternoon and helped the guests to find the author of the moment.

Capital Sketchbook:

Still in the literary line—if you want to learn all about the American trade agreements program, you might dip into "The Way Forward," written by Francis Bowes Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State . . . The tome made its appearance yesterday . . . Along about January you'll have a chance to read Arthur Krock's profile on the New Deal, to be published under the title, "The Seven Crucial Years" . . . Anybody else writing a book? . . . Oh, yes, Miss Lucy M. Dean is doing one on the Victorian deb and her modern counterpart . . . And just to get in the mood for the historical part of it, she's digging away in the files at Queen's College, England, where the first women students were admitted back in the bicycle era . . .

Maharajah to Visit Here

They're still headed this way—foreign potentates and princes, to see the World's Fair and to look in on Washington before returning home. Latest ruler to arrive in New York is the 31-year-old Maharajah of Tripure, who came in on the Queen Mary on Monday and who has planned a trip to the Nation's Capital. Exactly when he is due here, nobody seems to know; but here are a few facts to salt away for future reference:

The Maharajah is ruler of an independent Indian state; has 1,000,000 subjects; is a seasoned big-game hunter; also an art patron, and the only living Indian potentate to be elected a fellow of the Royal Society of Literature of London.

Accompanying him is a retinue of ten men and women, including his sister, the Renee of Baria; a brother, Prince D. K. Dev Varman; a first cousin, Prince R. Dev. Varman; Lieut. Col. O. C. Pulley, of the Indian army, and several secretaries and servants.

Mrs. Hardy Page and Miss Ann Page will entertain in honor of the couple at dinner at the Army-Navy Country Club tomorrow evening, when the guests will include the families of the bride and bridegroom and the members of the wedding party.

The wedding will take place on Friday at the Fort Myer Chapel, with a reception afterward at the Army-Navy Country Club. Among the recent prenuptial parties was that given Monday evening by Mrs. Jessie Moon Holton, principal of the Holton Arms School of which Miss Nulsen is a graduate. Miss Nulsen also attended Sweet Briar College and returned to Holton-Arms school last season for a post-graduate course.

Ensign Elliott has just recently arrived in town from the West Coast where his ship, the U. S. S. West Virginia, is based. Following the wedding the couple will motor to Bremerton, Wash., where they will be stationed until October, and then will leave for their new station at Long Beach, Calif.

Miss Eva Gladys Smythe Wed To Lieut. Arthur L. Gustafson

Impressive Military Ceremony Is Held At Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, The Rev. R. Paul Schearrer Officiating

In an impressive military service, Miss Eva Gladys Smythe became the bride of Lieut. (j. g.) Arthur L. Gustafson, U. S. N., last night at the Takoma Park, Md., Presbyterian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Smythe.

White gladioli and palms banked the altar and the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer officiated. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white chantilly lace made on princess lines over taffeta. The long sleeves were puffed at the shoulder and the gown had a V neckline clipped with a cluster of orange blossoms. The skirt fell in a long circular train and her tulle veil was arranged in a cap effect with three bands of orange blossoms holding it on.

She carried a 10-year-old lace handkerchief given her by a friend. Her bouquet was of white roses and she wore a string of pearls that had been given her by the bridegroom, and on her wrist was a small gold watch, a wedding gift from her father.

Miss Frances Smythe, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her cornflower blue net frock was made on old-fashioned lines with short puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. The skirt was trimmed with bands of ruching and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and blue delphinium. She wore a matching wreath of flowers in her hair. Miss Margaret Collison, a bridesmaid, was dressed like the maid of honor, in yellow and carried a bouquet of shaded blue delphinium.

Sister Attends As Flower Girl

The remaining bridesmaids were Miss Mary Lou Doyle, of Norfolk, Va.; Miss Betty Jackson, Miss Mary Ann Scott, of Takoma Park, Md., and Miss Maurine Stuart. They were dressed alike in frocks of pink, blue, peach and green. The gowns were trimmed in velvet bows with long streamers down the front and they wore velvet bows in their hair. Their flowers were peach gladioli and they wore chains and lockets bearing the naval seal—gifts from the bride.

Dressed in a long, pale, pink net frock, Miss Betty Smythe, sister of the bride, attended as flower girl. Her gown had blue bows down the front and she carried a basket of rose petals. Hugh Smythe, brother of the bride, dressed in a white suit, was ring bearer.

William Gustafson, of Plaquenine, La., was best man and the ushers were Lieut. (junior grade) J. P. O'Connell, Lieut. (junior grade) C. W. Ware, Lieut. (junior grade) P. W. Garnett, and Ensign F. L. Dalton, all of the Navy.

A large reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Smythe, who received with the bridal party, had chosen a coronation blue chiffon gown for the occasion. Her corsage was of talisman roses and larkspur.

To Sail Soon For China

When the couple left for their wedding trip the bride wore a two-piece tailored suit of white congo cloth with white accessories.

Lieut. and Mrs. Gustafson will visit the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Hrs G. W. Gustafson, in Watertown, S. Dak., before going to the West Coast. They will sail August 5 from San Francisco for China, where Lieut. Gustafson will be stationed.

The bride, who attended Roosevelt High School, has been a student at the Sherwood School of Music in Chicago for two years.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Collett, jr., of Beaver, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snape, of Vineland, N. J., and Cadet Robert B. Keagy, of Norfolk, Va.

The bride is well known in Washington where she has made her home for the last six years with her aunt, Representative Mary T. Norton.

The Rev. Michael J. Ready performed the ceremony. The bride was gowned in a white lace ensemble made over satin. Her flowers were lilies of the valley and baby's breath.

Matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. G. U. M. Segmow, of Scarsdale, N. Y. She wore a hyacinth blue frock and carried a spray of pink and blue blossoms. John T. Cahill, of New York City, was best man.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents and, shortly afterward, the couple left on a wedding trip to Honolulu. After September 1, they will be at home in New York City, where Mr. Burke is an attorney in the reorganization of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The former Miss McDonagh attended St. Elizabeth's Academy and the College of New Rochelle. Mr. Burke is a graduate of Princeton University and Harvard Law School.

Mind Keenest at Typing, Miss Wurdemann Says

Noted Poet Claims She Pays Attention Better And Writes a Letter During Interview at Library Of Congress Where She Assists Her Husband

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Some people turn on the radio while they talk to you. Audrey Wurdemann doesn't do that. She writes a letter on the typewriter instead—It's the way she pay attention best, she says.

She wrote while we talked yesterday up on deck A of the Library of Congress, the office she shares as assistant to her husband, Joseph Auslander, who is the library's poetry consultant. They have just returned from California, where she presided in San Francisco at the mid-administration congress of the National League of American Pen Women, of which she is president, and where both did "missionary work" for the poetry room of the library.

The little office on the "hurricane deck" was piled high with books and papers and the accumulation of letters which they found waiting for them on their return.

Two Browning Manuscripts Given

Missionary work for the cause of poetry is not hard among the poets and other writers. Most of them are more than converts; they are zealots, who welcome with delight news of the progress being made in assembling rare books and manuscripts. From one of these, Louise Ward Watkins, of Pasadena, lecture chairman of the National League of American Pen Women and president of the Daughters of the Union, there have come to the Library of Congress as a result of the Auslanders' visit, two Elizabeth Barrett Browning manuscripts.

Mrs. Watkins has given them from her own collection. Mrs. Auslander says of her that she is one of the few women who really knows books. Many know what the books contain but they are seldom connoisseurs of rare volumes, she says. Mrs. Watkins learned her appreciation of books from her father who was associated with Henry E. Huntington and had a choice "gentleman's library" of his own.

From portrait by Michael Werboff.
AUDREY WURDEMANN

Mr. and Mrs. Auslander visited two octogenarians who had known Walt Whitman and had interesting manuscripts of the great American poet.

In connection with the Pen Women's congress, they were guests for a day at Jack London's ranch, the Valley of the Moon, where his widow, Charmian London, was hostess. After luncheon, they sat under the big trees on the lawn and visited the author's study. About 200 pen women were present.

Gertrude Atherton Is Guest Speaker

Margaret Atherton was guest speaker at the celebrities dinner, which was the chief social event of the congress. Among other honor guests were Mr. Auslander, Ruth Comfort Mitchell, poet and author; Mayor Angelo Rossi of San Francisco and Albert Bender the city's most beloved patron of arts. None was more distinguished than the league's president who, like her husband, is a noted poet and has the added distinction of being a Pulitzer prize winner.

Miss Marguerite Merigold, State president for the District, and Mrs. Mabel Pittle, executive secretary of the league, were other Washingtonians at the convention.

They visited the fair before their return and Mrs. Auslander, unaccustomed to San Francisco summers, was obliged to borrow a fur coat.

She and Mr. Auslander expect now to remain in Washington, except for the first week in August, when he will go to New York to lecture at Columbia University on contemporary poetry.

Mrs. Van Zandt Returns From New York Visit

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt, widely known woman's club lecturer, has returned from New York, where she attended the conference on the Union of the Democracies, held there over the week-end.

Mrs. Van Zandt became interested in the movement during a month spent in the West. There she found a number of groups had been formed for active support of the plan suggested by Clarence K. Streit, in his book, Union Now," that the 15 Atlantic democracies be federated. The meeting in New York was a convention of these units to discuss ways of promoting the idea.

Sees Change in West's Attitude

She considers the awakened interest in the West and Middle West an indication that people in those sections of the country are definitely departing from their isolationist stand.

The idea of the federation of the democracies undoubtedly has an emotional appeal, she says, but she believes it should be studied from a practical viewpoint to determine whether or not it is economically sound. She would have women's clubs discuss it and research organizations make an investigation of its economic and political aspects.

In Montclair, N. J., says Mrs. Van Zandt, a club has been formed in support of the plan, with three types of membership, one embracing those who only indorse the idea, another including those who will actively work for it and address meetings of other groups to explain it, and the third, contributing members.

Went to Learn All About It

Mrs. Van Zandt, practicing what she advocates for others, went to the New York meeting to learn all she could about the plan before passing judgement on it.

Her Western tour, which she took this time by train, was her sixteenth round trip to the Pacific Coast. She is now busy preparing for her lecture engagements in the fall. Her initial lecture of the season will be the first Tuesday in November at the opening meeting of the Washington Club. Beginning November 10, she will also hold a series of 10 Friday morning talks there on current events.

FUR EVENT
Offers 3 Essential Points of Interest to You . . .
FASHION...
QUALITY...
VALUE...

• FASHION . . . whether you pay $50 or $500, your Fur Coat must be Fashion-Right! And because we have daily access to the most authoritative fashion information we can assure you that any Coat you buy here will possess the Fashion-Rightness that belongs to the 1939-40 Winter Season!

• QUALITY . . . The price you pay for your Fur Coat is not the measure of its quality. Certain Furs are less expensive than others. The best of one kind may cost twenty-five times more than the best of another kind. For example our Merit Seal-dyed Coney at $99.00 is as fine a quality of its kind as a $2,500 Mink would be in the Mink family of Furs. Our custom of buying only from top-ranking Fur Manufacturers is your assurance of quality, whatever the price.

• VALUE . . . Over a period of many years we have established a standard of value in this Summer Fur Event that has often brought forth expressions of complete satisfaction, late in the winter season, by women who have bought their Furs here in mid-summer. That standard is more than maintained in the complete and beautiful collection now ready for your choosing.

Light Keepers To Mark 150 Years Service

Roosevelt Expected to Set Aside Week of Aug. 7 for Ceremonies

From Honolulu to Juneau, Alaska, Coast Guard units are sending in suggestions to their headquarters here for ceremonies marking the 150th anniversary of the lighthouse service. It is expected that within a few days President Roosevelt will issue a proclamation setting aside the entire week of August 7 for the purpose of commemorating the lighthouse division, which was organized in 1789 with Alexander Hamilton, first Secretary of the Treasury, as its chief.

Polls from Coast Guard offices in Chicago, Cleveland, Seattle, San Francisco, New Orleans, Jacksonville, Norfolk, New York, Boston and St. Louis will help to determine exactly what form the anniversary program will take.

Officials at the Coast Guard office at the Liberty Loan Building said yesterday that they are really "going to town" on the service's birthday. Booklets carrying the history of the lighthouse service and a list of the 29,000 lighthouses, lightships and buoys now in operation will be off the presses this week. Posters have already been printed and are ready for distribution.

Norfolk Light Fete

Most of the activities of the week of August 7 will center around Cape Henry Light at Norfolk, built in 1790. A squadron of Coast Guard boats will be on hand to take part in maneuvers and anniversary events will be broadcast on a national hook-up.

The service, built on a tradition of unceasing devotion to duty ever since Thomas Jefferson summarily dismissed a lighthouse keeper for falling asleep on the job, was merged with the Coast Guard under the Treasury Department by virtue of the reorganization plan effective July 1. Originally a Treasury agency it was placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce in 1903.

H. D. King, former commissioner of the Lighthouse Bureau, is now assistant to Coast Guard commandant, Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche. Capt. C. A. Park, former deputy commissioner, is a member of Admiral Waesche's staff.

With no decrease in personnel of the old bureau contemplated under the merging plan, employe elimination will take place only as deaths or retirements occur in the lighthouse service.

FBI Investigates Intimidation Plaint Of Sugar Workers

Charges that Louisiana sugar growers intimidated field hands who testified against them in cases under the sugar act of 1937, precipitated a Justice Department investigation yesterday.

The investigation was undertaken at the request of the Secretary of Agriculture, who transmitted to the Justice Department reports of Department of Agriculture agents who have taken testimony from white and colored field laborers working for Louisiana planters against whom complaints have been issued.

The sugar act of 1937 provides for Federal payments to planters, starting at 60 cents per 100 pounds of commercially recoverable sugar. To qualify for payment, however, the grower must (a) agree not to utilize child labor, and (b) pay a minimum wage fixed by the Secretary of Agriculture. Growers who receive payments for which they have not qualified are subject to no penalty except the return of the payments.

The complaints, which have been issued against 150 of the 12,000 Louisiana sugar growers, charge that the planters applied for and received payments for which they did not qualify.

Union Here Backs WPA Stoppage

The independent District Project Workers' Union yesterday supported the Workers' Alliance one-day Nation-wide WPA stoppage called for Thursday, but asserted nothing could be gained "if workers remaining out one day, weekly returned to work the next."

The independent union said it was supporting one-day stoppage because it "realizes the . . . action . . . was due to the pressure of the rank and file."

Gen. McDougal Promoted To Marines' High Command

Former Commander in Haiti and Nicaragua Made Major General

DOUGLAS C. McDOUGAL
Promoted to the Rank of Major General, U. S. M. C.

A descendant of Scotch Highlanders who has served with all branches of America's armed forces and commanded two Latin-American armies, was selected for high rank in the Marine Corps yesterday.

On recommendation of a board of naval officers, President Roosevelt approved the selection of Brig. Gen. Douglas C. McDougal for promotion to major general. The 63-year-old Marine, whose 40-odd years of service includes two wars and expeditionary duty in many lands, will fill the vacancy to result from retirement of Maj. Gen. Charles H. Lyman this fall.

Gen. McDougal, a noted shot and captain of the American International Rifle Team in 1928, was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1893, when he was 17 years old. Resigning the following year, he enlisted in the Navy when the Spanish-American War broke out. Soon promoted to ensign, he was under fire in an attack on shore batteries at Manzanillo, Cuba.

At close of the war, McDougal was appointed a cadet in the Revenue Cutter Service, predecessor of the Coast Guard, but resigned the next year to prepare for examinations for the Marine Corps. It was in the World War he served with the Army, being second in command of a Marine regiment assigned to duty with the A. E. F.

From 1921 to 1925, Gen. McDougal was chief of Gendarmerie d'Haiti and was highly commended for his services, receiving the Haitian Distinguished Service Medal. In March, 1929, he was named director in chief of the Guardia Nacional in Nicaragua. Brought back to the United States in 1931, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by the United States and the Medal of Distinction and Medal of Merit by Nicaragua.

Gen. McDougal served here from 1931 to 1935, being director of operations and training at Marine Corps Headquarters and later assistant commandant of the Corps. Named to command the Fleet Marine Force, he commanded the fighting arm of the Corps and the San Diego Base until two years ago, when he was assigned to command the base at Parris Island, S. C., his present assignment. His early service included participation in the Boxer operations in China and expeditionary duty at Vera Cruz in 1914; Haiti, 1915-16, and Santo Domingo the following year.

D. C. Income Tax Goes To President

House Passes Bill; Senate Votes 5-Day 60-Hour Week for Capital's Firemen

By James D. Secrest.

Only the signature of President Roosevelt was needed last night to give the National Capital its first local income tax after the House had adopted without debate the District revenue conference report.

Coincident with the final legislative action on the tax bill, however, the Senate unexpectedly passed a House bill to give District firemen a 5-day 60-hour week at an extra cost to taxpayers of more than $400,000.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, who had carefully balanced the 1940 budget on the basis of appropriations and anticipated revenue, was taken by surprise by the Senate action and admitted the city is likely to run into a $400,000 deficit.

The firemen's 5-day week bill was one of eleven District measures that passed the Senate under unanimous consent.

The District tax measure, the last important piece of major local legislation expected to be enacted into law this session, was approved by the House wits its collective tongue in its cheek.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who called up the conference report, assured the members they are not bound by the $6,000,000 authorization for future fiscal years.

The only hint of opposition faded after Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, a member of the sub-committee on District appropriations, was told by Nichols that the language of the authorization was changed so that there could be no mistake that it constituted an appropriation.

Court Test Expected

A court test of the income tax is expected when payments fall due next March because of its application only to persons domiciled in the Capital on the last day of the taxable year, or on December 31, 1939.

District tax officials anticipate many a headache in deciding just what constitutes a domicile in the voteless National Capital.

The present tax rate of 1 to 3 per cent is one of the lowest in the country, but its sponsors freely admit that the first year is only an experiment and that if the act is sustained in the courts that a boost in the rates may be expected.

The tax begins at the Federal base of $2,500 for married couples and $1,000 for single persons with $400 allowed for each dependent. Other deductions are similar to those allowed by the Federal law.

The 1 per cent applies to the first $5,000 of taxable income and the tax graduates upward at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent for each $5,000 increase in net income to a maximum of 3 per cent on $20,000 or more. The corporate income tax is a flat 5 per cent.

Other levies carried in the bill other than the income tax are merely amendments of present revenue acts. Higher taxes on public utilities, inheritances and estates, and a pro-rating of the personal property tax on motor vehicles are included.

Besides the $1,000,000 increase in the lump sum, the District gains another $100,000 from the Federal Government by obtaining a share of the fines and fees collected by the United States Court of Appeals and District Court.

Actually the new revenue bill does does not raise as much money as the taxes which it repeals or allows to lapse.

By repeal of the intangible personal property tax, which yielded $2,810,623 last year, and failure to renew the business privilege tax, which produced $1,884,773, the District loses $4,695,396.

Revenue Totals $4,240,000

The total new revenue raised by the tax bill, which continues the present $1.75 realty and personal property levy, is only $4,240,000 distributed as follows:

Lump-sum increase, $1,000,000.
Income tax (individual), $800,000.
Corporate tax, $2,200,000.
Court fines, $100,000.
Inheritance, $70,000.
Utilities, $50,000.
Motor vehicles, $20,000.

A provision making delinquent taxes imposed under the business privilege and intangible acts collectible will give the District an estimated additional $250,000 this year and next.

Among the 11 District bills passed by the Senate 7 have passed the House. One of the House measures, prohibiting the purchase of beer on credit by retailers, was amended, however, to expire on July 30, 1940.

Measures which now go to the White House, other than the five-day week for firemen, are:

Inclusion of Lafayette Park in the Shipstead act provisions limiting the height of buildings.

Authorization for the Commissioners to settle claims and suits instituted by the city.

Inclusion of the District in the co-operative fresh pursuit privilege which will enable Maryland and Virginia police to make arrests within the District.

Permission for District firemen to join the International Firefighters Association but continuation of the prohibition against striking.

Senate bills which go to the House propose:

A board of licensure to regulate the practice of professional engineering.

An amendment of the taxicab insurance act to bring mutual companies under regulation.

An exchange of small park tracts at the northern boundary of Piney Branch parkway.

Hull to Greet Baptist Group From Europe

British Delegation Are Embassy Guests; Leave D. C. Tomorrow

Nineteen British Baptists, part of a delegation of Europeans of that denomination stopping for several days en route to the Baptist World Alliance in Atlanta, Ga., yesterday got their first glimpse of their nation's embassy here.

Led by Dr. T. G. Dunning, of London, head of the youth work of the Baptist World Alliance, they were escorted on a tour of the embassy on Massachusetts avenue. While Sir Ronald Lindsay, the ambassador, was not available, and Lady Lindsay was out of the city, they were greeted by other officials. Jack Gates, postmaster of the United States Senate, helped arrange the tour.

Meet Hull Today

Guests of local Baptists until tomorrow, the delegates attended services last night at Mount Carmel Baptist Church and are scheduled to meet Secretary of State Hull this morning. Tonight at 6:30 p. m. they will be honor guests at a city-wide Baptist banquet at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest.

The entire party of 24, in addition to Dr. Dunning, includes the Rev. Z. Carles, president of the young people's committee of the Spanish Baptist Union, and the Rev. Samuel Vila, both of Spain; Miss Eleanor Santay, Burma; the Rev. Hugo Luck, Poland, and the Rev. A. Sundquist, Finland.

Wales was represented by Miss G. H. Gibbons, Mrs. M. E. Jones, the Rev. R. M. Jones and the Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Samuel and Miss Marie Tredegar. Scotland sent Miss H. B. McFadzean and Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Tennent.

The group, which plans to leave here tomorrow for Atlanta, will find many Washingtonians attending the convention, which is expected to draw some 50,000 Baptists from all over the world. The conclave runs from July 24 to 28.

William Fetler, head of the Baptist Church in Latvia, Mrs. Fetler and their 12 children will leave tomorrow for Atlanta to attend the world Congress of Baptists, making the trip in a second-hand bus purchased for that purpose. They arrived yesterday aboard the S. S. Pilsudski.

With 19 other inmates they will be heard by the Parole Board tomorrow at the reformatory.

Miss Gorcey Named 'Miss Popularity'

Nine hundred Interior Department empolyes aboard the Wilson Liner City of Washington picked 21-year-old blonde Lucille Gorcey, of the United States Housing Division, as "Miss Popularity, 1939," last night, on their annual moonlight cruise.

The cloudy night and the slight drizzle did not seem to dampen the spirits of the celebrants as the steamer plowed its way down the Potomac, stopping at Marshall Hall, Md.

Runners-up in the popularity contest were Louise Carr, 1735 Kilbourne place northwest, a stenographer in the Bureau of Reclamation, and Helen Cranston, Arlington, Va., a secretary in the National Park Service.

Miss Gorcey, who lives at 1406 Orren street northeast, was chosen from a field of 24 contestants. She has only been with the Housing Authority one month, having formerly worked for the Interstate Commerce Commission. Her home town is Pittsburgh. The three winners were awarded orchid bouquets.

Higher Gas Tax Proposal Gets Cold Shoulder

Neither Congress nor District officials were disturbed yesterday by a suggestion that the local gasoline tax be raised 2 cents and the revenue be turned over to Maryland and Virginia to pay for the use of their roads by Washington motorists.

The suggestion was made by Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the Maryland roads commission, who complained that Maryland gets no return from the use of its highways by District motorists due to the lower gasoline tax in the National Capital.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, a member of the House District Committee, said he had no idea of making such a proposal and suggested that Maryland reduce its own gas tax. The Whitman proposal also got the cold shoulder from Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland.

When Ethredge arrived, two men armed with knives and a third with a revolver forced him to give up his wallet. The money was enough; the liquor was ignored.

16 Librarians To Get Pay; '39 Raises Voided

6 District School Aides Will Be 'Docked' $450 for Increases

A decision yesterday by Comptroller General Fred H. Brown will bring good news and bad today to librarians in the District's public schools.

Unpaid since May 31 because of a fiscal snarl that Brown settled yesterday, 16 librarians will receive their held-up June checks, but six will find themselves "docked" a total of $460.

The $460 represents the aggregate amount of salary increases which the six received during the fiscal year ended June 30 and which, according to Brown, should not have been given because the average pay of school librarians during that lear was in excess of that of public librarians doing the same type of work.

District officials pointed out, however, that Brown's decision is not without its balm in that it not only releases the 16 salary checks, but also allows four school librarians who received salary increases in 1938 to keep them. The sum involved in this increase is $350.

Deduction of the $460 will be made in lump sums rather than by "easy installments."

The four who got pay boosts for 1938 were exempted from the "kickback" because the average pay of school librarians in that year was not above the average rate for public librarians.

In Washington, Dorothy Sanford Wilson, president of the League of Professional Women, of Portland, Oreg., will speak today at party headquarters, 144 B street northeast.

Robt. Lincoln Home Sold in Georgetown

Historical Mansion Was Built by Robert Laird, Scottish Immigrant, in 1800

The historic Georgetown home, where Robert Todd Lincoln, son of President Lincoln, spent the last nine years of his life, has been sold to Mrs. Helen Morgan Hamilton Woods, wife of Arthur Woods, former police commissioner of New York City, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Woods, the daughter of William Pierson Hamilton, is a granddaughter of the elder J. Pierpont Morgan and a niece of the present head of the Morgan fortune.

The 40-room mansion, at 3014 N street northwest, has been vacant since the death of Mrs. Robert Todd Lincoln two years ago. Ownership passed to her daughter, Mrs. Charles Isham, who died six months ago. Mrs. Isham, who lived nearby, never occupied the home.

Built in 1800

The center part of the dwelling, set in more than an acre of carefully landscaped land, was built in 1800 by John Laird, a Scotch immigrant who became an important tobacco exporter in Georgetown. The home came into the possession of Justice James Dunlop of the District Supreme Court, who married Laird's daughter.

By a curious circumstance, Judge Dunlop was deposed from the court for alleged Southern sympathies by President Lincoln.

Since then, three generations of the Dunlop family have lived in the home, beginning with William Laird Dunlop, sr., William Laird Dunlop, jr., who now lives at 3122 Thirty-eighth street northwest, and William Laird Dunlop 3d, of 1911 R street northwest.

Bought by Lincoln in 1917

The home was bought by the Civil War President's son in 1917, who lived in it until his death in July, 1926.

Filled with fine antiques, old silver and glass, the home and the high-walled gardens surrounding it have long been one of the showplaces of Georgetown. The garden contains a small stone marker set out by Alexander Beall, who plotted the town in 1751. It is the only original survey stone now remaining.

Dredge Worker Caught in Pump Suction, Killed

A unidentified dredge worker was killed last night when caught by the suction of the huge pumps lifting gravel from the Potomac for the new Gravelly Point Airport.

The accident was discovered when a suction pipe of the dredge Gulf Stream dropped part of a body with its load of silt. Work was halted immediately in the belief that the rest of the body was buried under the gravel already blown over the point.

Park police said the limbs had been in the water about three hours and theorized that a workman had either fallen into the water or had waded too close to the suction pump. Attempt will be made to check the 600 Gravelly Point workers today to obtain identity of the dead man.

Roosevelt to Ask Reorganization For D. C. in 1940

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that he still hoped to see Congress enact legislation for a reorganization of the District government. Such legislation was shelved Monday by a House District sub-committee.

The President said he planned to talk to the District Commissioners and work out a reorganization plan to submit to Congress next January.

Conroy (left), Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent, receives the Silver Star Cross with Oak Cluster for his gallantry and valor in action during the World War battle at Belleau Woods on the Chateau-Thierry Sector. Gen. Maxwell Murray, U. S. A., made presentation yesterday as Conroy's chief, J. Edgar Hoover, looked on. Wounded while fighting with the Fifth Regiment, U. S. Marines, Conroy was also awarded the Order of the Purple Heart

Fairs Supplant Quints as Lure To Vacationists

Once the favorite vacation attraction of District residents, the Dionne quintuplets are in a slump. The bouncing wards of the British Empire are being nosed out by the World's Fairs (both of them), as itinerary inquiries made by the town's vacation motorists at the American Automobile Association pile up at the rate of more than 300 a day.

"When is Billy Rose's aquacade open?" is one of the questions 15 overworked clerks are answering most often. The other one is, "How much does it cost to see everything at the fair?"

Strange Objectives

New York and New England are the destinations of most Washingtonians who are taking to the road. Those going West invariably ask something about the exposition at San Francisco.

Some of the local motorists want to know where they can hunt for semiprecious stones, where they can see Indians, where they can watch gold mines in operation, where they can take thte best pictures and where they can collect old books. A few of them ask where they can go to church along the route. More are interested in golf and mountain climbing.

Motorists from out of town, however, can think up even a bigger variety of questions—particularly if they're lost.

It's gotten so that the staff is never surprised when a tourist rushes into the office to announce that he can't remember where he's staying.

Lost—One Hotel

A few days ago a young lady bolted onto the scene to announce that she had come "down town" from her hotel and didn't know how to get back. That was at 11 o'clock in the morning. The club's amateur detectives, with practically no clews to work on, finally located her lodging at 7:30 in the evening. They did it by marking off an area on a map of the city and driving her up and down the streets within the area until she finally was able to identify the place where she had parked her suitcases.

The club is never surprised at anything. On another occasion they received a telegram asking them to have a car at Union Station to take a patient from there to St. Elizabeths Hospital. Not knowing exactly what kind of patient they were supposed to pick up, they took no chances. They sent two cars. One was a regular limousine and the other was a panel delivery truck, in case their client was a little on the violent side. Fortunately they were able to use the limousine.

Solar Cooker Can Be Manufactured Now, Says Abbot

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, told the Optimist Club at its luncheon meeting yesterday that it is practicable now to manufacture the apparatus he has invented to cook and to distill water with the sun-s rays.

He pointed out that the development of aluminum and vacuum tube manufacture now make it possible to obtain low-cost mirrors and use vacuum devices to prevent the seepage of heat.

He told the club of a party at which each guest baked gingerbread in the toy solar cooker he has built.

Citizens Fight Zone Change On Bowling

Protest Relaxation Involving New Alleys to Be Built Near Sixteenth

Officials of the Forest Hills Citizens Association and of the Northwest Citizens Council yesterday protested a change in zoning regulations designed to facilitate approval of bowling alley locations.

Appearing before the District Zoning Commission, Mrs. Leslie Wright, president of the citizens association, said approval of bowling alley sites should be left entirely to the citizens.

"They are better judges than the commission, which sit here in lofty seclusion," she said.

I Street Site Involved

Under the present regulations, bowling alleys may not be erected within 200 feet of residential property. The change would permit bowling alleys within the 200-foot limit provided approval was granted by both the zoning commission and Board of Zoning Adjustment.

Charles H. Tompkins, contractor, told the commission he contemplated building bowling alleys in the basement of a parking garage, now being constructed on I street, near Sixteenth street northwest.

The site is within 200 feet of residentially zoned Sixteenth street and, therefore, under present regulations, bowling alleys may not be constructed.

Multiple Dwellings Fought

Culver B. Chamberlain, representing the Northwest Citizens Council, said he was opposed to any change in the regulations which would make it "easier" to build bowling alleys near residential sections.

Joseph Sanders, chairman of the zoning committee of the Forest Hills Association, said rather than reduce the restricted area the commission should make it impossible to build bowling alleys within "much more" than 200 feet of a residential area.

Citizens of Southwest Washington requested the commission to approve a change from residential "A" to residential "A" restricted for all property within the area bounded on the east and north by Second street, on the west by Nichols avenue, and South Capitol street, and on the south by Cheaspeake street southwest. It was their purpose to prevent erection of multi-family dwellings, it was stated.

Capt. Callahan Named Chief Clerk of Police

Replaces Crawford Who Was Ousted; 11 Made Detective Sergeants

Capt. Harvey G. Callahan, First Precinct, yesterday was named chief clerk of the Metropolitan Department.

Promotion of 13 men, including the naming of 11 new detective sergeants, which resulted in a minor shake-up of Detective Bureau personnel, also was announced.

Callahan will fill the vacancy left by the dismissal of Howard E. Crawford, who was a civilian. Congress stipulated in the new appropriation bill that the job be filled by a policeman with the rank and pay of captain.

Lieut. Clarence Talley, First Precinct, was promoted to the rank of captain and Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett was raised to lieutenant to fill Talley's vacancy. Both Talley and Barrett will go to the Seventh Precinct.

Capt. Arthur E. Miller, Third Precinct, was transferred to the First Precinct, and Capt. John E. Bowers was shifted from the Seventh Precinct to the Third Precinct. Lieut. Benjamin Kuehling was sent to the First Precinct from the Seventh.

The new detective sergeants, who were named from the ranks of precinct detectives were Frank Ashley, C. C. Carver, H. H. Carper, John O. Curtis, K. H. Davis, J. E. Ennis, William G. Fawcett, Robert J. Maghan, W. D. Perry, Carl D. Schamp and E. E. Scott.

With the new men Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson bolstered the various headquarters squads and added new men to the First and Sixth detective districts.

Three men were removed from the Pickup Squad and their places were filled by new appointees. Fawcett was sent to the First Precinct, George Thornton to Eleventh Precinct and Schamp was placed on the Narcotic Squad. Carver, Ennis and Perry were named to the Pickup Squad.

Sergts. Earl Baker and Norman Hodkinson, Second and Seventh precincts, were both sent to the Clothing Squad, and Sergt. Dan H. Jones was transferred from the Twelfth Precinct to the Robbery Squad. Thornton will replace Sergt. Louis Wilson, who was sent to the Twelfth Precinct.

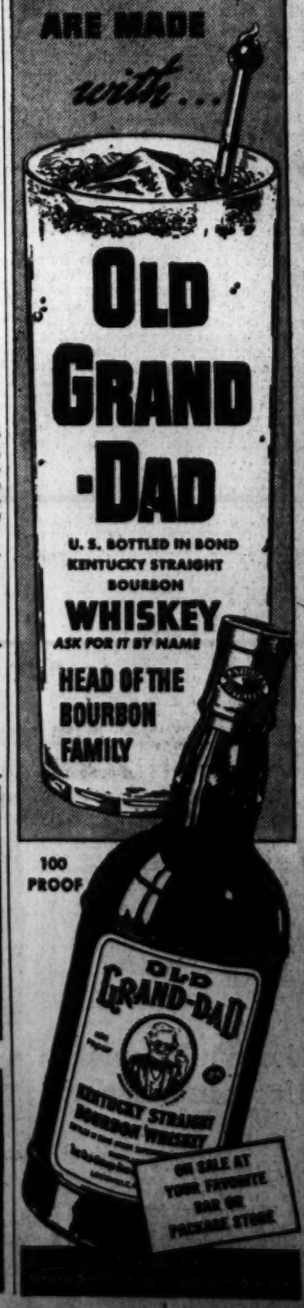

M. B. Moore was transferred to the Seventh Precinct and his vacancy at the Sixth Precinct will be filled by Sergt. Davis.

Comiskey, Chisox Owner, Dies of Heart Attack

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Time, which is supposed to heal all wounds, apparently is no mean hand at dispelling odors, either. We gather as much from the recent announcement from Detroit to the effect that a world's heavyweight championship bout will be fought there on September 20 between Joe Louis and Bob Pastor.

POVICH

When last observed in the same ring, Joe Louis and Bob Pastor were running a foot race in boxing gloves. Pastor won the race and lost the fight, what there was of it. That was three years ago, and Madison Square customers left the arena with their thumbs and forefingers tightly clasped to their nostrils and barely made it to the open air. The fight, as they refer to it on Forty-ninth street, was a stencheroo.

They didn't blame Louis, they scarcely could. He wanted to fight, but he couldn't catch Pastor who back-pedaled for ten rounds and stayed the limit. As a heavyweight, Pastor was a joke. He did stay the distance, but he apparently queered himself as a fistic figure. Any suggestion of another Louis-Pastor fight following that performance in the Garden would have landed the originator in the psycopathic ward. But that was three years ago. In two months they'll be fighting again. This time in Detroit. Pastor is getting a shot at the title at the time when there are a half dozen better challengers about. The first Louis fight, which seemed to doom Pastor to the fistic ash-heap, has boomeranged to his advantage. Why? Because he went the distance.

Detroit Is "Ripe" for Louis and Pastor

Nobody has stayed the limit against Louis since, with the exception of Tommy Farr and Max Schmeling in the 1937 bout in which the Brown Bomber was the victim of a startling knockout. The men who could go the distance against Louis have become something of fistic curios. And that fact has been Pastor's meal-ticket in the intervening years. Campaigning in the hinterlands, Pastor has made a decent living as the man who avoided being knocked out by Louis.

But Promoter Mike Jacobs could not summon the colossal gall to rematch Louis and Pastor in New York. Even New Yorkers who have stormed Jacobs' fight plants for some of the worst fiascos in prize ring history, wouldn't go for another Louis-Pastor battle. But the odor of their last affair lost some of its thickness when it reached the Midwest, apparently, because they are staging one again at Detroit at $27.50 tops —at that Detroit is about the only metropolis in the Nation which would go for another Louis-Pastor bout. The automobile city is peculiarly adapted to that particular fight. It happens to be the home town of the champion, who hasn't fought at home since winning the title. And it is the only city where Pastor is now being favorably received.

A year ago at Detroit, the town was mildly excited about another Negro heavyweight named Roscoe Toles. Joe Louis, who had virtually turned his back on the home folks, moved to Chicago when he began to climb the fistic ladder, was nongrata in Detroit, and folks there envisioned Toles as a man who could lick Louis. When along came Pastor, who knocked out Toles in a Detroit arena, and affections were transferred from Toles to Pastor. A Louis-Pastor fight at Detroit was in demand, and who is Mike Jacobs to overlook that fact?

Just Another Soft Spot for the Bomber

For Louis, it represents merely another soft touch. The Negro will merely stop off there of an evening in September, knock out Pastor and collect a 40 per cent share of what should be a sizable gate. That he will knock out Pastor is fairly obvious. This time he should catch the New Yorker. The Joe Louis of 1939 is a far better fighter than the young over-anxious Louis of 1936. He knows how to get his man. This time Pastor will not outrun him. At some point, Louis will catch Pastor and all that will remain of the bout will be the referee's count of 10. Meanwhile the two top challengers, the fellows who best deserve a chance at the title, will be fighting at Philadelphia. They are Lou Nova and Tony Galento. The winner of that battle will be matched with Louis next September and unless Nova stops Galento or whips him decisively, he will have no business in the ring with Louis. He may have no business in the ring with Louis under any circumstances.

But if Galento is the winner, the 1940 fistic feature will again pit Louis against the man he knocked out last month in four rounds. And that bout is apt to be another epic. This time, the press and the potential customers will take Galento seriously. Louis will be the favorite to win, of course, and he will probably knock out Galento again. But as long as Tony can swing that ponderous left fist, there will always be the feeling that a new champion is within one punch of being crowned.

Donald Sets Rookie Mark Of 11 in Row

Pitches 9-0 Shutout In Opener; Murphy, Hildebrand Combine Efforts to Win, 4-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 18.—Atley Donald, the New York Yankees' undefeated right-hander, pitched a new American League record onto the books today when he shut out the Browns, 9-0, on three hits in the first game of a doubleheader.

It was the 26-year-old recruit's eleventh straight victory. The best previous performance by a first-year man was that of Harry Krause, who won ten straight for the Philadelphia Athletics back in 1908.

For a while it appeared that Veteran Oral Hildebrand would go his young teammate one better by hurling no-hit ball in the nightcap. But Billy Sullivan clipped the former Brownie for a double that drove in a run in the seventh, and in the ninth Joe Grace singled and George McQuinn clouted a homer.

That was the signal for Manager Joe McCarthy to wave Hildebrand to the showers and bring Fireman Johnny Murphy in from the bull pen. The fireman did his job, putting out the next three men in order, and the Yanks won the game by 4-3 to sweep the bargain bill.

A second-inning home run by Joe Gordon, his fifteenth of the year, started Donald on his way to victory. The Yanks got one more run in that frame, another in the fifth; three more in the seventh, when Joe DiMaggio delivered one of his two doubles; two in the eighth, and another in the ninth. Of the three hits Donald allowed—he walked only one man and struck out five—McQuinn's double was the only one that went for extra bases.

Fourth-inning home runs by George Selkirk and Babe Dahlgren featured the second game, in which DiMaggio's single drove in the first Yankee score. Hildebrand held the Browns hitless until two were out in the seventh.

Cards Rout Carl Hubbell, Beat Giants, 5-3; Whitehead Hurt

Shortstop, Playing in Place of Lou Chiozza, Hit on Knee by Joe Moore's Throw in Seventh

By the Associated Press

New York, July 18.—Carl Hubbell made a surprise appearance as the Giants' starting pitcher today. He did effective work in spots, but the St. Louis Cardinals got to him for enough hits to win the ball game, 5-3, and pull even with the Terrymen in a tie for third place.

It was the veteran southpaw's first start since June 4, when he had to be relieved in the first inning. This time he lasted until the seventh, when he was lifted for a pinch-hitter. By then the Cards had scored four runs on nine hits, one a home run by Terry Moore, and the Hub was charged with his fifth defeat against only two victories.

He has pitched but one complete game all season, on May 14, when he beat the Phillies.

Moore, in addition to his four-bagger, drove in another run with a single in the seventh. Pepper Martin hit one for the circuit in the ninth off Relief Pitcher Jim Lynn.

Five double plays and some neat relief pitching by Bob Weiland were the defensive highlights for the Cards.

Burgess Whitehead, playing shortstop for the Giants in place of Lou Chiozza, who is lost for the rest of the season with a broken leg, was injured, but not seriously, in the seventh inning. Joe Moore's throw from the outfield after Terry Moore had singled to left struck Whitehead on the right leg, near the knee. He fell to the ground, but after a few minutes was able to limp back to his position.

Chiozza's Leg Broken Twice

By the Associated Press

New York, July 18.—Dr. Carl R. Palmer, the New York Giants' team physician, reported today that Infielder Lou Chiozza, who broke his left leg in a crash with Teammate Joe Moore yesterday, suffered a fracture of the fibula in two places and a comminuted fracture of the tibia. The latter is an irregular break, with X-rays, taken today, showing a piece of bone broken loose.

Chiozza will be out for the rest of the season, but Dr. Palmer was of the opinion Lou's future as a ball player would not necessarily be impaired.

For today's game with the St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Bill Terry used the same lineup that finished yesterday after Chiozza's accident. He said he did not plan to bring up any minor league aid for the time being, at least, and would go along with the present line-up until Shortstop Bill Jurges serves out his suspension.

Gracyn Wheeler Upset in Tennis

Hamburg, July 18 (AP).—Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Margot Lumb, of England, two of the favorites in the women's singles in the international German tennis championships, were eliminated in upsets today.

Miss Wheeler was defeated by Fraulein Dietz-Hamel, of Germany, 4—6, 10—8, 6—3, and Miss Lumb lost to Miss A. Florian, of Yugoslavia, 0—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Derringer Walks First Batter After 49 2-3 Straight Innings

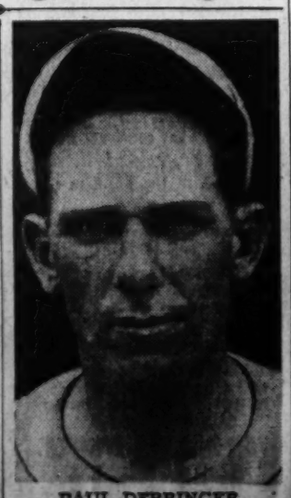

Christy Mathewson Set Major League Mark of 68 in 1913

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 18.—Paul Derringer, veteran Cincinnati pitcher, gave his first base on balls in 49⅔ consecutive innings today in the first inning of the Reds' National League baseball game with the Boston Bees.

Debs Garms, Bees outfielder and second man up, was the first batter Derringer has walked since June 14. The veteran Reds' hurler has only allowed a dozen walks this season. The big pitcher gave another base on balls later in the game to make this year's total 14.

The major league record for consecutive innings without a base on balls is 68, set by Christy Mathewson, of the New York Giants—June 19-July 18, 1913. G. Harris White, old-time Chicago hurler, holds the American League record of 65⅓ innings—from the sixth inning, August 15, to the first inning, September 13, 1907.

Texan Leads Trans-Miss Golf Tourney

King Turns in 69; Brownell, of D. C., Qualifies With 73

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 18. A handsome young Texan, black-haired Rufus King, drove to medal honors in the thirty-ninth annual trans-Mississippi golf tournament today with practically all the favorites in.

A smoking first nine gave the 23-year-old Wichita Falls youngster a 33, 36—69, one under par for the Broadmoor course that stretches its 6,602 yards against the mountains shouldering Pikes Peak

Two Tied at 70

King, who finished at Southern Methodist University this year, won the Grand American Trapshooting Handicap when he was only 14.

Deadlocked with 35, 35—37, even par, were big John Barnum, of Edinburgh, Tex., and Bob Babbish, of Detroit, who won the Western Amateur title last year.

But for most of the field of 243 par was as hard to reach as the top of Pikes Peak in a blizzard.

Brownell Got 73

Today's 63 low scores and defending Champion Ven Savage, Salt Lake City, will start five days of match play duels tomorrow.

The three former trans champions here, besides Savage, made sure of getting into the championship flight. Eddie Held, of Denver, shot 72; Don Schumacher, of Dallas, had 73, and John Dawson, veteran performer from Hollywood, 74.

Duke University's "happy trio" stuck together in moving into championship play. Two of them, Stewart (Skip) Alexander, of Durham, N. C., and Bob Brownell, of Washington, had 73s, and Hank Russell, of Coral Gables, Fla., 79.

Ferrell Injury Reprieves Early From Chattanooga

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, Mich., July 18.—The Nats' reserve catcher, Jake Early, was called back into service here today just as he was about to board a train for Chattanooga when Rick Ferrell, regular backstop, received a split fingernail on his right hand making a catch of a foul ball in the fourth inning of the Nats-Tigers game.

When the extent of Ferrell's injury was determined and it was certain he would be unable to play for more than a week, Edward B. Eynon, Nats' secretary, rushed to the telephone and arrested Early's Southern journey. Early was to go to Chattanooga to fill a gap caused by two injured catchers.

He returned to Briggs Stadium and was in uniform again before the game ended. A foul tip by Birdie Tebbets sent Ferrell out. Angelo Giuliani came in and finished the game.

Nats Chase Bridges, Defeat Tigers, 10-2

Krakauskas Gives Only Six Hits, Hits 3-Run Triple; Rick Ferrell Splits Finger on Foul Tip in Fourth

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, Mich., July 18.—Turning loose a six-run barrage in the third inning that drove Tommy Bridges from the mound, the Nats pitched camp here today and piled up 15 hits for a 10-to-2 victory over the Tigers in the first of their three-game series.

While his teammates put on that rare burst of championship playing form and made no errors, Joe Krakauskas pitched four innings of hitless ball, finally allowing the hapless Tigers six well-scattered hits. To top off his performance, Krakky stepped to the plate in the third with the bases loaded and slammed out a triple over Barney McCosky's head in centerfield, scoring Cecil Travis, Buddy Myer and Rick Ferrell.

Taft Wright, Washington right-fielder, did the unbelievable at bat by making it a perfect day with three doubles and two singles. Buddy Myer and George Case, with three hits each, helped to bring the situation tumbling down around the ears of four harried Detroit pitchers.

It wasn't a perfect day throughout for the Nats, however, for Catcher Rick Ferrell received a split finger from a foul tip in the fourth inning, had to retire from the game and probably will remain out of the line-up for at least 10 days.

After pushing two runs across in the second inning and giving a hint of what was coming, the Nats pitched in and gave Bridges a dismal time before driving him out in the fatal third.

Case, in his second appearance of the game at the plate, lined a single past Pinky Higgins, went to second when Sammy West rolled out to Charley Gehringer at second base, and sat there while Lewis took first after being hit on the shoulder by a pitched ball.

Wright ambled to the plate, calmly let a perfect strike go by and then smashed his second double off the rightfield screen, scoring Case, Lewis stopped at third.

Bridges was reeling, and when Travis' single scored Lewis and Wright he quietly folded his tent and relinquished his duties to Jim Walkup. Incidentally, Travis went to second on the attempt to catch Wright going in.

The Nats had just begun to boil, however, Walkup intentionally passed Myer. Vernon grounded out to Hank Greenberg at first, Myer and Travis moving around one.

Heart Attack Fatal to White Sox Owner

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Here's a typical shot of J. Louis Comiskey—checking his baseball program in his favorite box in Comiskey Park in Chicago—the spot from which he watched his White Sox club grow into the ranks of American League pennant contenders. He died yesterday in Eagle River, Wis., his summer home

Magnate Ill Frequently For 5 Years

Owner Contracted Severe Cold Week Ago; Abnormal Weight Hastens End

By the United Press.

Eagle River, Wis., July 18.—J. Louis Comiskey, who made a pennant contender of the stumbling Chicago White Sox Baseball Club he inherited from his famous father eight years ago, died of heart disease and a common cold late today at his summer retreat on Sand Lake.

The 54-year-old baseball magnate, frequently ill during the last five years, died in the oxygen tent in which his 375-pound frame had lain for more than 36 hours.

Death came at 4:20 p. m. (C. S. T.). The family was at his bedside.

Comiskey contracted a slight cold a week ago and it grew steadily worse. Dr. Russell A. Oldfield was summoned hurriedly yesterday morning and Comiskey was placed, unconscious, in the tent he had installed three years ago after a similar emergency. He never regained consciousness.

Family at Bedside

It was in this same summer home that his father, Charles A. Comiskey, the "Old Roman," died in 1931, passing along the $1,500,000 White Sox organization to the younger Comiskey, whom he personally had trained for the job.

Dr. Oldfield, who had attended Comiskey on previous trips to his summer estate 7½ miles from this resort town, said the magnate had been suffering from "left ventricular failure complicated by pulmonary oedema."

Comiskey's abnormal weight apparently hastened his end. In his youth he had been a fine athlete, but during his last year in college rapidly increasing weight forced him out of active participation in sports. At one time in recent years he weighed nearly 400 pounds.

At his bedside were Mrs. Comiskey, his daughters, Dorothy and Gracie Lou, and his son, Charles, who were vacationing at Eagle River when he was stricken.

Comiskey, once a ball player himself, inherited the club in 1931 that had broken his father's heart.

He made it pay and he made it win, but he never achieved his ambition of placing the Chicago White Sox in another world series. The so-called Black Sox World Series of 1919, which resulted in the lifetime suspension for several White Sox players accused of throwing the series to Cincinnati, broke down the White Sox and the "'Old Roman"—Charles A. Comiskey—who spent the rest of his years until 1931 trying to rebuild a championship team.

Good Third Baseman

Young Lou Comiskey grew up with baseball and never left it. Until abnormal weight forced him out of college baseball, he was a "crackin' good third baseman." Once on the sidelines, he became a glorified errand boy, a boy executive, and in his later years, one of the ablest magnates in baseball.

At the death of Comiskey, sr., the younger Comiskey was fully equipped to become controller of the $1,500,000 major league organization.

He pulled the stumbling White Sox from eighth place in 1931 to third place in 1936, largely through the impetus of one of the greatest deals in history, bringing Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons and George (Mule) Haas from the Philadelphia Athletics for a reported price of $150,000. Simmons later was sold to Detroit for a reported $75,000. Dykes, now the White Sox manager, has the team in third place.

Born in 1885

Comiskey was born in Dubuque, Iowa, August 12, 1885, where his father began his baseball career.

Odd jobs around his father's White Sox park qualified him for executive work, and in 1910 he became vice president and treasurer. Those were good years for the White Sox, but after the unparalleled World Series scandal of 1919—the Chicago club nearly broke up.

Then followed 15 years in which the Sox failed to move higher than fifth place. When the Old Roman died all his holdings, consisting chiefly of the White Sox, went over to the young Comiskey, who became president as well as treasurer.

He made Dykes the manager in 1933 and encouraged the peppery third baseman to do all the trading he could to rebuild. Dykes became one of the shrewdest dealers in baseball and with various cast-offs and bargain ball players moved the Sox into the first division in 1936.

Comiskey's Death Distinct Loss, Says Harridge

Kansas City, Mo., July 18 (AP).—William Harridge, president of the American League, said today the death of J. Louis Comiskey, president of the Chicago White Sox, was a "distinct loss' to the organization.

Commenting on the death while here to attend the American Association all-star game, Harridge said:

"Because of his ill-health, few of the baseball fans in Chicago had the opportunity or privilege of personally knowing Lou Comiskey. Those who enjoyed close contact with him admired him for his unfaltering loyalty to his ball club and to the city it represents.

"No one in baseball, perhaps, has met with more misfortunes, but he always took his bad luck with a smile. Lou Comiskey stood for what was best for baseball and his passing is a distinct loss to the American League.

"He has many friends who will cherish his memory along with that of his late father, Charles A. Comiskey."

Gil Hunt Upset by Bobby Low in Longwood Bowl Tennis

D. C. Player Gives Spotty Exhibition

Quist and Crawford, Australian Davis Cup Members, Win; Mako Also Scores

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., July 18.—Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., second-seeded domestic player in the men's division of the forty-seventh Longwood Bowl tennis tournament, ran into a spotty streak during his third round match against Bobby Low, of Los Angeles, today and was beaten in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3.

A couple of hours rest was all Adrian Quist and Jack Crawford, members of the threatening Australian Davis Cup forces, required to shake off the effects of a "bumpy" 24-hour transcontinental aerial flight today before making successful starts in the tournament.

Quist was called upon to play but one match to gain the quarter-final round with six American rivals, for he drew a first-round bye and then gained another bracket on a default.

Crawford Scores

Crawford, forced to start from the first round, where he drew a default, found himself sharing the same third-round bracket with Johnny Doeg, of Rumson, N. J., the former national singles titlist, after he romped through Phillip Jameson, of Worcester, for a 6—1, 6—0 victory.

His more famous teammate faced a more determined foeman in William Hardie, of Miami. Quist, who said he felt tired after his long "rather rough" plane trip, from Los Angeles, stroked his way to a 6—1, 6—3 triumph.

Due to faults and one upset, the seeded list shrank from ten to six during the day, but the only favorite who had a chance to enter the round of eight and flubbed it was Gilbert Hunt. He gave a ragged performance while bowing to Bobby Low.

Mako Advances

A bye, a default, and a 6—1, 6—0 win over August Ganzenmuller, burly New Yorker, moved top-seeded Gene Mako, the Davis Cup doubles player into the quarter-finals. The others who kept pace with him were Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla.; Dave Freeman, national junior titlist from Pasadena, Calif., and Larry Dee and Ronald Edwards, both of San Francisco.

After the singles action ended, Mako and Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., who gave high hopes of gaining the Davis Cup doubles assignment, shared the spotlight with Quist and Crawford, both of those outstanding pairs gaining the second round of the team competition in easy fashion.

Upsets Feature Clay Court Tennis

By the Associated Press

New York, July 18.—Three more of the dozen seeded players in the Eastern clay court tennis championships at Jackson Heights went to the sidelines today as Frank Guernsey, jr., of Orlando, Fla., and Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., were the victims of the first major upsets of the tournament and Young Jack Kramer, of Montebello, Calif., decided to default.

Guernsey, ranked second to Sidney B. Wood, the former Davis Cup star, went out in the fourth round before George Toley, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—3, while third seeded Kamrath lost in the same round to Charles Mattmann, of New York, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2. Kramer, No. 5 on the list, defaulted to Doug Imhoff, of Berkeley, Calif., because he was suffering from blisters on his racquet hand.

Wood licked Marvin Kantrowitz, of New York, 6—2, 7—5. Other results:

Results:

Guernsey defeated Downing, 6—8, 6—0, 6—2; Peacock defeated Hawley, 6—2, 3—6, 6—1; Hall defeated Grasing, 6—1, 6—3; Buxby defeated Everett, 6—1, 7—9, 6—2; Podesta defeated Steele, 7—5, 6—1; Fishbach defeated Bushman, 6—2, 6—2.

Young, McChesney Return Contracts To Redskins Club

Bill Young and Bob McChesney, guard and end respectively for the Washington Redskins, yesterday returned signed contracts to the offices of the local National Football League club.

Each will be seeing his third year of action for the 'Skins. Young joined the team after a brilliant college career at Alabama U., where he was a tackle. In his first year with the 'Skins, he was converted into a guard by Coach Ray Flaherty.

Rain Postpones Midget Races Until Tuesday

Delayed by rains which turned the new speedway into a dangerous, slippery mire, midget auto racing's debut, scheduled for last night, has been moved back until Tuesday night.

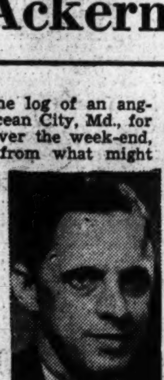

Promoter Jimmy Frattone held out hopes for a reprieve from the sullen skies until late yesterday, when he finally admitted defeat by the elements and abandoned hope of putting on races at the New York avenue-Bladensburg road northeast track until next week.

Several drivers were on hand for the race early, but left town when the condition of the track became certain. Frattone, who had predicted an attendance of 8,000, said all tickets purchased will be honored Tuesday night.

On Fishing

Continuing the log of an angler's trip off Ocean City, Md., for white marlin over the week-end, we get away from what might have been the day of any one of the many that are following this grand sport in ever increasing numbers, because we were the guests of Paul and Jack Townsend on the Jacpau III.

ACKERMAN

That word "guest," with varying times and conditions, can mean almost anything. On the Jacpau out for the big billfish it is not to be taken lightly—not as to the literal meaning now, for in that way it couldn't mean more by anyone; but in the fishing, where the guest fishes every rod until a marlin is boated.

Dolphin aren't counted. Neither are the big school tuna that hooked right will keep the perspiration running like sap in a maple in early spring. Joe Morrison knows this only too well, for just a short time back he was in the same position and had three really tough "babies" on and had to bring them up before he hooked and landed a marlin and Jack and Paul would take a turn.

Boats Sighted

A warm sun in a cloudless sky, a slight breeze and a barely perceptible ground-swell lay ahead, when at 6:45, with the sea buoy under her quarter, Paul gives Mate Bill Rodney a southeast course. A course, that in a bare 10 minutes was picking up one boat after another, fanned out over the horizon according to the degree of variation in the charter boat's compasses.

First it was Capt. Vic Lance up at his deckhouse controls, motioning with a hitch-hiker's thumb that he could well use the easy grace and speed of the Jacpau instead of the Torobill's honest 12 miles for the long trip out. Then Red Hall on his Cutty Sark, Jim Lombard on the Jim Dandie. One after another they came up over the bow, and just as quickly were lost over the stern.

Across the Jack Spot and the steamer lanes to the tide-rips before the outriggers were dropped and Capt. Bill Hatch had two perfect baits skipping astern.

Tuna Boated

A fresh westerly wind was kicking the tops off the seas at 9:30 when the first strike pulled the line out of the outrigger, and had almost layed again when that tuna was boated one hour and thirty minutes later.

Capt. Lev Raymond, miles inshore near Winter Quarter, had a marlin on at the same time, but it was not until 3:30 a fin came up on our starboard bait. Over-anxious, we snapped the line out in getting the rod, but it was at just the right time, for as we let the line tighten from the dropback to set the hook, there was no doubt about having one on. Not for long however, for the leader was only wrapped around the bill, and a good chance muffed.

We raised no more fish on the Jacpau the rest of the afternoon, but as we came up with Francis Lowe's Akela, there was the Alibi with a nice one on, and Crawford Savage's radio told us he was hung to one hard by the Light Vessel.

4:30 p. m., and it was called a day. The Alibi, miles ahead, was checking his course for the inlet, and we were on the way in, with not just another fishing trip to look back upon, but one of the grandest days offshore we can ever remember.

Chicubs Win, Gain 2d Place

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 18.—Home runs by Stan Hack and Glen Russell in the first two innings gave Claude Passeau and the Chicago Cubs enough runs to breeze to a 4-2 triumph over the Dodgers today and move past the Giants into second place. Both four-baggers were hit off Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin, Russell's with Manager Gabby Hartnett on base and Hack's on the first pitch of the game.

Passeau, who was touched for nine hits, struck out eight and didn't walk a man. He finished off the game in fine style, for after Babe Phelps and Gene Moore had singled to open the ninth, putting the tying runs on base, he fanned Leo Durocher, Pinch Hitter Art Parks and Van Mungo in succession.

Hamlin, knocked out of the box in the sixth, was charged with the defeat, his eighth. It was Passeau's seventh victory.

Reds Pound 4 Bees Hurlers And Win, 12-3

McCormick Drives In Four Runs With 3 Hits, Including Homer

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 18.—Though his record-approaching string of innings pitched without yielding a base on balls was snapped, Paul Derringer held the Boston Bees in check today while his Cincinnati mates pounded four Boston hurlers for 19 hits and a 12-3 triumph. It was Derringer's twelfth win of the season.

The heavy stickwork of Frank McCormick was the most potent factor in the Reds' attack. The first baseman, who is leading the National League in runs batted in, drove home four runs with three hits, including a homer. He also had four runs to his credit.

With National League President Ford Frick looking on, the circuit's leaders sewed up the game in the first inning when the entire team went to bat. The Reds put over four runs on four hits, two passes and one Boston error in that frame.

Johnson Beats Bucs For Phillies, 8 to 3

Philadelphia, July 18.—The Phillies defeated Pittsburgh today, 8 to 3, behind the 8-hit pitching of Syl Johnson to get an even break in the current 4-game series. The winners made 13 hits off Bill Swift and Truett Sewell.

Sewell, right-handed pitcher of the Pirates, was ejected from the game in the sixth inning by Umpire Goetz during an argument over the fairness of George Scharein's two-bagger.

Chuck Klein, Fern Bell and Elby Fletcher hit home runs.

Barney Welsh Takes Opener

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 18.—Barney Welsh launched the defense of his West Virginia open amateur tennis crown today with an easy victory over Pell Miller, of Charleston, that showed the way for the other three seeded players.

Rain interrupted play several times but let up sufficiently to permit the Rockville, Md., champion to turn in a 6—2, 6—2 performance.

Eighteen-year-old Beacon Parsons, of Huntington, State closed champion and seeded No. 2, came through, 6—2, 6—3, over ailing Stanley Lewis, of Cincinnati, while rangy Paul Kunkel, of Cincinnati, duplicated the score against little Pat Griffith, of White Sulphur Springs. Kunkel was seeded No. 3.

In the other first-round matches, Dr. Maurice Fleiss, of Clifton Forge, Va., measured Phil Mahood, of Bluefield, 6—3, 6—3, while Stacy Hill, of Cincinnati, member of the Dartmouth tennis team, defeated Albert Flack, of White Sulphur Springs, 6—2, 6—2.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Joe Krakauskas, husky 22-year-old lefthander, walked off with the majority of the Man of the Month points award based on the Nats' performance at Detroit yesterday.

To Krakky, four points, because he allowed only six hits, after pitching scoreless ball to the fourth, and because he turned loose a triple in the third inning that brought in three of the Nats' 10 runs.

To Taft Wright, three points, because he turned in a perfect day with three doubles and two singles in three times up for five of the Nats' 15 hits.

To Buddy Myer, three points, because he obtained three hits for three times up and drove in three runs. The totals:

Taft Wright	26	George Case	6
Cecil Travis	18	Buddy Lewis	5
Dutch Leonard	14	Rick Ferrell	5
Johnny Welaj	12	Angelo Giuliani	5
Buddy Myer	12	Ken Chase	4
Joe Krakauskas	12	Jake Early	3

The Brighter Side:

Fabulous Prices Seen At Saratoga Sales

By Damon Runyon

Our American horse traders are now busy giving off sales talks about the stock they will put on the block at the Saratoga yearling auctions next month.

They are employing neatly printed catalogues to present their wares. These catalogues are a great convenience to both the traders and the prospective customers. They save the traders the trouble of going around from door to door peddling their horse flesh and relieve the prospective customers of the embarrassment of refusing some nice fellows.

RUNYON

Suppose you went to the door some fine morning and found Sam Riddle there with a nice yearling colt by Man o' War under his arm. Would you care to turn down a good soul like Sam just because you had no use at the moment for a colt? We think not. Nor do we think you would care to tell Sam that his colt did not strike you as fresh enough.

Slam Door in His Face?

Suppose it was not Sam, but Willis Sharp Kilmer that you found at the door, with a basket of fillies by Sun Briar or Sun Beau, or Sun-something-else. Would you have the heart to slam the door in the benign countenance of Mr. Kilmer? Again we think not. Anyway, Mr. Kilmer would probably have his foot inside the doorway, so you would only squeeze his pet corn and cause him unwarranted pain.

The catalogues are really much better. A prospective customer can shop around in them and pick and choose as he pleases without being placed in an unhappy predicament. Speaking for ourself, we know we would never be able to resist a heart-to-heart canvass from Kunnel Phil Chinn, but we can cast his catalogue aside without remorse.

What interests us more than anything else in the coming Saratoga sales is the fact that Arthur B. Hancock is sending up a batch of foals by Blenheim II, the English stallion for which an American syndicate paid $250,000 a couple of years ago. If those foals look like anything at all, you ought to see some high-falutin' bidding.

Famous English Sire

They are among Blenheim's first crop since he was brought to this country heralded as "the most valuable addition to our bloodstock in years," though he was already a famous sire in England. He sired an English Derby winner in Mahmoud and the unbeaten pride of Italy, Donatello II, among others.

In fact, it was largely Blenheim's established reputation in the stud that made his price the highest ever paid by Americans for a stock horse. The syndicate that bought Blenheim was made up of a number of rich American breeders, including Hancock, R. A. Fairburn, John D. Hertz, Warren Wright and perhaps one or two more. The stallion is at Wright's Calumet Farm, near Lexington, Ky.

The importation to America in comparatively recent years has almost completely changed the race horse blood lines in this country once dominated by sires owned by the Whitneys, and John E. Madden, and J. R. Keene and other giants of another breeding and racing era. The foreigners have taken the play away from the old time lines on which many American breeders continue to rely down through the years, even when it seemed quite apparent that the old lines were getting pretty well washed up.

Incidentally, the newcomers have made important breeders of turf enthusiasts who were not setting the turf world afire with their breeding operations. A syndicate made up of William Woodward, R. A. Fairburn, Arthur B. Hancock and Marshall Field, paid a price said to have been $165,000 for the French stallion, Sir Gallahad III, and Sir Gallahad put Woodward in the first rank of American breeders with Gallant Fox and others.

Joseph E. Widener imported Sickle from England at a cost of $100,000 and Sickle has produced Stagehand, Cravat and a raft of other winners. Only recently, Widener imported Castel Fusano, by Ksar, to join Sickle at his Kentucky stud. Ksar was brought to America well advanced in years by B. D. Jones and A. S. Hewitt, of Virginia, and died, but most foals by him brought big prices at last year's sales in Saratoga.

Bought for $65,000

Kenneth Gilpin, of Virginia, brought over Teddy, sire of Sir Gallahad III, but Teddy, too, was an old horse then and died not long ago. We do not recall his price. Bulldog, another son of Teddy, was bought for $65,000 by the Coldstream Stud and has given the American turf many winners. Quatre Bras II cost the Waggoners of Texas $45,000 as an imported sire.

Hal Price Headley, of Kentucky, moved up as breeder when he imported Pharamond II, sire of Menow, a Futurity winner, High Glee, Mythical King, War Magic, Whopper and others. He seems to be a good stock horse. It is more difficult to get a good stock horse than a good race horse.

Of course, not every stallion imported to the United States was a successful sire over here. For instance, Jock Whitney has returned Royal Minstrel to Ireland. Though the Minstrel got a number of fair race horses, including Singing Wood, a futurity winner, Joseph E. Widener once had Stefan the Great in this country, but returned him to England after a trial in the stud. Blenheim may do better. At $250,000, he should.

Roman Boy, Holland Up, Wins Hagerstown Feature in Mud

Cats Cradle Finishes Two Lengths Back

Lady Buck Third; Victor Turns in 1:07 3-5 for Distance; Winner Pays $2.90

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., July 18.—Roman Boy, a son of Ha Ha and winner of four sprint races at Charles Town, plowed through the mud here today to score as easy victory while racing in the colors of P. H. Faulconer. The 3-year-old colt, who seems unbeatable at distances of less than 6 furlongs, found the Mason-Dixon course of less than 5 furlongs to his liking, and won the Hancock Purse, the day's feature.

The crowd of 5,000, reporting despite the fact that racing conditions were at their worst, respected Doman Boy's record and made him the odds-on favorite in the field of seven. Jockey Skeets Holland rode Roman Boy home two lengths in advance of Capt. Ewart Johnston's Cat's Cradle, and another length ahead of William Royle's Lady Buck.

Rain, which fell throughout the morning and intermittently in the afternoon, turned the track into a sea of mud. Over the mixture of dirt and water, Roman Boy turned in time of 1:07 3-5. He paid an odd mutuel, more to place than to win and almost as much to show as to win. The official payoff was $2.90 to win, $3.10 to place and $2.70 to show.

Starter Ira Gregory had much trouble at the post with Romney Royal dragging the assistant starters around. When the field finally got away, Jockey Holland took Roman Boy to the front, and it was all over. The colt hugged the rail and bounded along, opening a lead of three lengths at one stage. Cat's Cradle and Lady Buck were the only members of the field to come close to the leader and Holland had plenty left in his mount at the end

Krakauskas Beats Detroit, 10-2, as Nats Get 15 Hits

Krakky watched two go by, then stepped into one that sailed high over McCosky for a triple and the last of six runs in the inning. Chase came to bat for the second time in the inning and walked but died when West grounded out to Greenberg.

Relaxing momentarily after that splurge which gave them an 8 to 0 lead, the Nats allowed the first hit of the game—and the nearest thing to an error—when Higgins scratched a single off Myers' glove in the fourth. It went for naught, however, as Greenberg, Cullinbine and Tebbetts went out in rapid order. Ferrell's finger was injured on a catch of Tebbetts' foul. Giuliana replaced him.

The Tigers sprang into action briefly for their only runs in the sixth. With one man out, Gehringer put a double out to left center that he could have gone for a triple. Recovering from a bad leg injury, he pulled up at second and called for Frank Croucher to run for him. Krakky walked Higgins, and Greenberg, the next man up, knocked a double to left center scoring Croucher and Higgins. That ended the Tigers' bid, as Cullenbine and Tebbetts went out.

Walkup turned over his post to George Coffman as Washington went to bat in the fifth. He lasted until the Nats came to bat four hits and one run later in the first half of the eighth when Floyd Giebell came in to finish the game.

The Nats' first score came in the second after Wright got his first double down the rightfield line. He scored on Myer's bunt between Bridges and Greenberg for an infield single. Vernon sent Myer to third with a single to rightfield, and Myer scored on Ferrell's sacrifice fly.

The Nats scored again in the fourth when Myer tripled off the rightfield screen scoring Wright and again in their half of the sixth when Wright came in on Myer's single after getting a double—his fourth hit of the day.

The Tigers made a desperate bid in the ninth and managed to load the bases, but with two men out, Averill forced McCosky with a slow roller to Myer.

Supporting Krakky 100 per cent, the Nats showed some rare fielding acts that brought the 4,000 spectators, including 3,000 Boy Scout guests of Briggs Stadium, to their feet screaming hoarsely. West made a leaping one-handed catch of Greenberg's smash in the fourth inning and robbed the Tigers of a probable run by Higgins. Case, who has been accused of loafing around center, turned on a blinding burst of speed in the eighth inning to make a one-handed running catch of Averill's line drive in deep left center.

Friendly Paul Wins by Nose At Suffolk

Jockey Berger Rides Mrs. Dunn's Mount To Fourth Straight

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 18.—Mrs. Frank C. Dunn's Friendly Paul, getting all the worst of the running under an impost of 120 pounds, came up on the outside to wear down Mrs. William R. Fleming's Loveday in the $1,200 allowance headliner of today's card at Suffolk Downs.

It was the fourth straight trip to the winner's circle for Friendly Paul at the meeting, his fifth of the season, and it was his third in allowance company after running as low as $2,000 in claiming ranks early in the meeting.

His margin at the wire, under Jockey Maurice Berger's expert handling, was only a nose, but the colt was lengths the best considering the way the race was run. T. P. Morgan's Play Pence ran third, two and a half lengths back.

The winner ran the 1 1-16 miles in 1:45 and paid $9.40, $5.40 and $3.80. Loveday returned $4.60 and 3.80, while Play Pence paid $6.40 to show.

Friendly Paul bore out slightly at the start and was last into the clubhouse turn. Berger took him in on the rail, sent him up between horses to gain third place on the backstretch, but in close quarters. He took the colt back, got running room on the rail only to be pocketed again by Black Legion and Sir Mowlee, the Mrs. A. J. Abel entry. Then Berger came up on the outside and down the middle of the home stretch to catch Loveday in the concluding stride. Black Legion ran fourth. Seven went.

Dear Al:

Jockey Sammy Palumbo had so much mud in his eyes after he rode Timetta in the third race today that his valet had to lead him back to the jockeys' room. J. B. Belk has sold the horses Way Out, Walli and Snobbish Lady to Joe Baker. Tell Washington bookmakers to have a crying bucket ready for Art Brown. He has been playing $2 win parlays on the first and last mounts of certain jockeys. He believes that if one of these jockeys has only one mount and wins he is going to be paid off twice on one horse. He contends that in this case the winner would be the first and last mount of the boy. Don't be surprised if Sonny Workman, Washington jockey, signs to ride for A. G. Vanderbilt again. Workman put himself in solid with his fine ride on Now What in Chicago last Saturday. Alan Clarke was a visitor today from his Huntington farm over at Clarksville, but his rooting interest was in the doings of General Mowlee and Sir Mowlee at New York and Suffolk. Clarke, of course, was the breeder of the two crack sons of Mowlee. John Manfusco missed local racing, having gone to New York to see his Ocean Roll perform. Pork Chops returned to circulation today after being confined to the tack room with a tummyache. Jockey Johnny Shanks is taking a vacation until Bel Air. Jockey Lou Machado carried added equipment today in the form of a special brace on his injured back, but it didn't keep him from riding winners. It wasn't muddy enough standing up on the track today, so the gelding Quill got down and rolled in it before the start of the fifth race. BILL.

WORKMAN

First race—Circus Lights had plenty of speed in an outing at Charles Town. Seems to fit well in this maiden field and I'm going to string along. High Betsy has had good foot on occasions and should go well in this company. Skye Lassie has had many chances and may pick this spot for that long-awaited winning effort.

Second race—Justa Jimmie appears to have found a suitable spot in this event. Will appreciate the off track and is in light enough to have his best speed. Golden Key was a winner here last week and is dangerous. Rough Buddy to take care of the others.

Third race—The Pike-Feltner entry of Seplin and Wale Signal seems best suited of the juveniles to be sent postward in this. Seplin probably is the chief reliance of the entry. Molasses Julia may improve with a change of riders. Snobbish Lady has changed hands, but has speed.

Fourth race—Pandoramint will like the track and deserves a chance in a field of this kind. Gets in light and needs only a break. Brainchild has shown good speed in most races and is dangerous. Royal Veil and Pansy's First are possibilities.

Fifth race—Beaufast is asked to go a route in this field and I'm going to take my chances. This one prefers a sprint, but has shown enough closing ability to warrant backing at this distance. Trostar is at home at the disance. Two Aces and Meridian Time will be threats if taken off the reserve list.

Sixth race—Huppy is in the best form of his career. He thrives on tough tracks and it looks as though conditions will be bad tomorrow. W. Kirk will do the riding. National was a winner here last week. Scout Rose has proven consistent of late and deserves a money chance.

Seventh race—Bosopi may take the lead in this and stay on top throughout. Needs only the proper handling. Minna was consistent at Charles Town and likes the distance. Top Shell is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—(Substitute). If this race is used, I'll take Sun Tempest, Short and By Surprise.

Best Bet—Bosopi HAIGHT.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 18.—It is a little comical to see the well-fed New York bookies viewing with alarm the inevitable coming of pari-mutuels, and trying to affect great moral indignation after so many years of sharp practicing within the precincts of their quasi racket. But they have gone pretty thoroughly into the evils and shortcomings of "the machines" and in all fairness their side must be presented. They want to protect the human sheep from the heartless machines, to insure the bookies' own supply of mutton, but a lot of the things they say about pari-mutuel betting are true and those who look upon it as a painless form of deriving a huge additional tax income might well take heed.

CONSIDINE

Herbert Bayard Swope of the New York State Racing Commission, has estimated that the annual tax return, if New York, last of the holdouts, goes into the pari-mutuel business, would be in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. Mayor LaGuardia is understood to be in favor and to have said that tax monies derived from the customary 3½ per cent "take" from the betting pool would pay for the State's relief program. New Jersey already has succumbed to the same type of logic and the ground is about to be broken for the first of its three huge tracks, this one to be near Atlantic City.

Tim Mara, who weeps less than the average New York bookie, has supplied me with the authenticated attendance figures for the first 67 days of New York racing. During the 22-day meeting at Jamaica 194,768 persons came through the gates, or an average of 8,800 per day. Belmont attracted 229,776 in 24 days, or 9,560 per day, and in 21 days Aqueduct drew 177,002, or 8,430 a day. Those figures total 601,546, for 67 days, or 8,900 average per day. An estimated thousand a day were employes of the tracks or stables.

"Play" About $500,000 a Day

Nobody knows how much money is bet each day at the New York tracks. We've stood near a "book" and heard its operator take bets of as much as a thousand dollars from a single bettor, but that of course can't be typical. Joseph M. Shalleck, the lawyer who drew up the constitutions under which Rockingham operates, says that his first-hand investigations shows that the "play" is about a million and a half dollars per day. That seems a lot of money for a crowd of 8,000 to bet. It's about $187 a head, which I know is $185 more than a lot of people bet through an afternoon at the track.

The bookies estimate that to meet the tax figures set by Swope and by other articulate supporters of pari-mutuel racing there would have to be a daily attendance of 59,000, betting an average of $4 per head per race. That would amount to a little on the nether side of $2,000,000 a day, which is more money than has ever been bet in one day by those flush crowds at the Kentucky Derby, the Santa Anita Handicap, the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs, the Widener Cup Day at Hialeah or the Classic Day at Arlington.

And if 59,000 each day left New York City to go to one of its tracks (only one of which could hold anywhere near that amount) it would result in a huge drop in small bank deposits, department store sales and payments of bills to every conceivable type of debtor. And, Mara believes, it would only increase the number of bookies, for if that many people got the gambling habit they would want to pursue it in offices, shops and factories through small handbooks whenever unable to get to a track.

Stress Slump of Other Racing States

The bookies, knowing that there is going to be no great increase in the number of horse-park fans, when the mutuels come, are stressing the smallness of the amounts other prosperous racing States have turned over to State treasuries. Out of the $42,227,374 which went through the California machines in 1936, the State got $1,609,094. Rhode Island that year drew $1,193,390 out of the $34,096,865 bet; Illinois got only $493,880 out of $32,133,764; Maryland $1,044,315 out of $29,452,756 bet; Massachusetts $1,001,197 out of $26,086,400; Florida $822,553 out of $23,451,311; Michigan only $232,097 out of $10,793,497; Kentucky only $177,863 out of $10,369,142 and so on down to Maine, where harness-racing betting amounting to $1,252,472 kicked back only $45,000 to the State. New York State, in 1936, derived $487,387 from licenses and taxes on tickets, property, etc. The total United States revenue from 129 tracks and 16 dog-racks was only $9,323,463 in 1936—less than Swope's hope.

The bookies believe that New York is getting enough and hope to convince the voters that it's better to leave things in their hands than to make gambling easy for the working class by introducing the tax-giving machines. They point out that milk deliveries within 50 miles of Rockingham Park fell off 60 per cent after the coming of the mutuels and that the department store business slumped 50 per cent in New Orleans, when they drove the bookies out. The bookies also say, without blinking, that the machines would bring a lot of undesirable characters to the town. In view of the fact that LaGuardia recently ran the most famous bookie out of town as "an undesirable character," this doleful warning apparently is the comic relief in the bookies whimsically hypocritical efforts to keep the State from muscling in on their horse-race racket.

WAGOLD, within striking distance from start, saved ground entering stretch and, under energetic handling, was up in concluding strides. BREAKING WAVES, probably best, opened a good lead at once, ran wide into turn and W. Snyder appeared to have been caught napping by winner approaching wire. BRIERLY was well placed from start and was held safe in closing stages. KIN MAG had speed in spots. CHILLEEVALLEE went to his knees and lost rider soon after break.

SECOND RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:44½. Off 2:47½. Winner, Mrs. I. K. Mourar's br. g. REIGH TETRARCH, nicely handled, was shaken up to take lead over BERYL KING in opening quarter, drew out nicely and was kept to drive to end. CAUTIOUS BO was forward factor from beginning and closed gamely under strong handling. MISS DAMARA had no excuses. BERYL KING saved ground to set early pace and weakened gradually thereafter. STAND BY, off in tangle, could not reach serious contention.

Daily Double, Wagold and Reigh Tetrarch, Paid $17.80.

THIRD RACE—About 5½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:16½. Off 3:21. Winner, M. Perez's b. f. (3), by Happy Time—White Glade. Trained by J. G. Davis. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $25; fourth, $15. Time, 1:26 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARRACA, $4.60, $3.40, $2.60; WHAT TIME, $20.60, $8.20; GRAY GLEAM, $3.20.

BARRACA, sent to front at once, opened a good lead and won with speed in reserve. WHAT TIME, in first flight from start, came with good energy in closing stages. GRAY GLEAM was hard ridden while close up and weakened in closing quarter. TIMETTA was put to pressure early and tired. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—About 5½ furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:49½. Off 3:59. Winner, P. H. Faulconer's ch. c. (3), by Ha Ha—Roman Girl. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAN BOY, $2.90, $3.10, $2.70; CAT'S CRADLE, $5.20, $3.20; LADY BUCK, $2.80.

ROMAN BOY, off alertly and sent to front in opening furlong, drew out and was running easily at end. CAT'S CRADLE went in first flight from start, but could not menace winner while under strong handling. LADY BUCK was keen forward factor to stretch and tired. FERNBRAKE went evenly. ROMNEY ROYAL and OF COURSE collided at first turn.

FIFTH RACE—About 1$\frac{1}{16}$ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:41. Winner, R. A. Bowman, Jr.'s, ch. c. SCHLEY GOREE was hustled to front in opening quarter, saved ground and was not threatened while winning easily. VICTORY LIGHT went closest to pace throughout and finished under drive, but was no match for winner. NOB was first away and weakened gradually. RUNANSTAY tired. QUILL was fractious at post and failed to rally. ITSAMAID was not helped by rider at any stage.

SIXTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:11½. Off 5:12½. Winner, L. C. Pike's br. m. BIG MUM had speed to go to front in opening quarter, was hard ridden while setting pace and drew clear to win going away. SUGABOOT went close up from beginning and closed gamely. GAYLASS, shut off badly by FLEET WIND leaving gate and carried wide at first turn, tired in closing stages. HUSTLE HOME closed willingly while beaten far off. CARTOUR had early speed and stopped. The others were not prominent.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALL ME ANNE, $13.90, $6.70, $4.30; KESWICK HILL, $8.30, $4.20; COUNTER PASS, $4.40.

CALL ME ANNE, whipped through between horses to get to front going to first turn, assumed good lead, saved ground and finished under hand ride. KESWICK HILL moved to contention boldly, was kept on outside and closed with good energy. COUNTER PASS, slow to begin, closed a gap. JUSTA PILGRIM was roughed about at first turn, saved ground and was held safe. HAGERSTOWN BOY tired. LUCKY ROLL stopped badly. ALICE O. was through after a quarter.

U. S. Incomes Top Year Ago By 11 Per Cent

May Total, 5.28 Billion, Exceeds April but Is Below March

New York, July 18.—The national income produced in the United States in May recovered slightly from the setback in April, but it did not regain the March level, the Alexander Hamilton Institute says today. The national income amounted to $5,287,000,000 in May as against $5,162,000,000 in April and $5,436,000,000 in March.

Although the national income in May was below the March level, it was 11 per cent larger in May last year when it amounted to $4,763,000,000. The national income has thus been larger than a year ago in every month so far this year. The cumulative total for the first five months was $26,725,000,000 this year as against $24,082,000,000 last year, an increase of 11 per cent.

Apparently, the national income in June showed little variation from the May figure although it is not possible to judge from information available at the present time whether there was a slight increase or a decrease. Mine output was higher in June than in May and there may have been some increase in manufacturing activity. The general price level, however, was lower and shipments of agricultural products may have shown some seasonal recession. There is no question, however, that the national income in June was higher than a year ago.

July Gain Expected

According to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, the prospect is that the national income in July will be larger than in June as the result of a seasonal increase in the shipments of agricultural products. During the last half of this year, however, it is not likely that the national income will make as favorable a comparison with that of a year ago as it did in the first six months. A sharp expansion occurred in the last half of last year and it is not likely that a similar rise will occur this year.

The increase in the national income from April to May was due entirely to a seasonal rise in the shipments of agricultural products and to a sharp gain in mine output, primarily as the result of the ending of the bituminous coal strike. Manufacturing activity showed a moderate decline to a new low for the year, while the general price level was the same as in April, when it reached a new low for the current recession.

Daily Oil Output Drops 8,538 Barrels

Tulsa, July 18 (AP).—Daily average crude oil production in the United States declined 8,538 barrels to 3,543,187 for the week ended July 15, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today. Oklahoma output dropped 9,025 barrels a day to 455,400; Kansas 850 to 166,750, and Texas 21,951 to 1,325,735, although East Texas was up 97 to 373,097.

Eastern fields were down 600 to 97,300, Michigan dropped 1,577 to 67,549 and the Rocky Mountain area 3,810 to 76,080. California led the increases, being up 21,750 to 626,500. Illinois hiked production 4,578 to 265,693 and Louisiana 1,087 to 275,940.

Stocks Average New High for Swing Trading Largest in 3½ Months Secondary Rail Bonds Continue Gain

New York, July 18.—The upswing in the stock market continued with added vigor today, the turnover on the big board being the largest in three and a half months and the market breaking through to another new high for the move. The gain of 0.44 point in the composite average carried the list well above the level of June 10 which, before Monday's breakaway, had marked the highest point of the recent sideways movement.

The gain meant that on 12 of the 14 trading days of this month the market has made upward progress. The fact that the best gains came on a large volume of trading and that reactions, of which there were a number today, have always caused the pace to slacken, has given encouragement to the bullish forces.

Technicians can now get deep into their arguments as to whether this is a bull market or nothing more than a rally in the bear market. Favoring the thought that this is a definite change in the trend is the fact that the two previous movements were of unusually short duration. For instance, the bull market which extended from March, 1938, to November of the same year was the shortest on record.

Subsequent bear markets are almost always shorter than preceding bull markets. The trend downward which started in November, 1938, reached a low on April 11, 1939. If the foregoing statement on usual performances holds true, the April 11 figure could be the mark of the beginning of a new bull market and the present surge a more violent movement in the three months' old trend.

Optimism Increases

The better tone of political affairs abroad, encouraging the belief that there is no immediate threat of a war, and the upward trend of domestic business must be given the credit for the current breakaway. In certain issues the jump has been accelerated by the existence of a fair-sized short interest and the Street hears numerous rumors, which obviously are unconfirmed, of one or two important market operators who are stepping in to make things hum.

Discussing what is making the wheels go 'round in the present instance, the financial community is well aware of the newest effort of the Administration to get approval of the latest wrinkle in spending-lending. With an election a little more than a year away, in which the third-term precedent will probably be one of the important issues, it is no surprise that the wheels have already started to turn in the direction of pumping out promises to pay in order to give the Nation a sense of well-being.

Pump priming has not been promoted with quite the same vigor in recent months as was the case just before the 1938 election, but if the dollars are to be instrumental in getting votes, it is time to get moving. It takes a long time to build roads, bridges and political fences. Consequently, the New Deal wheeled up one of its big guns today to help in the bombardment of Congress on the President's spending-lending bill, a measure, so we are told, which somehow will enable the Government to spend money lavishly without adding to the national debt or costing anyone anything.

Morgenthau to the Front

The big Bertha today was Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau who, apparently, was able in some manner to let his judgment on banking and bookkeeping fit in with the misconception that by guaranteeing doubtful loans which banks and investors will not readily make, the Government can help industry without adding to the national debt and without increasing taxes for anyone.

Said the Secretary: "If we can substitute self-liquidating investments in place of Government expenditures we shall have made a great step toward bridging the gap between revenues and expenditures . . . It may well turn out to mark a transition point in the public finances . . . The important thing about this bill is that it will accomplish its objectives without adding to the tax burden or to the public debt of the Federal Government," and so forth.

Government Risks

To the first two assertions, the expression in the Street today was a hearty "Amen." It will mark a terrific transition in public finance, beyond any question—a transition to a point where the Government will spend money and, through bookkeeping, convince itself that it isn't spending money, merely loaning. But as Mr. Morgenthau should know, the loans are those which are unduly fraught with risk. They will be the skim milk in the field of lending. And while such loans are outstanding, guaranteed by the Government, they will be Government debt, no matter how the books are kept. If you guarantee your neighbor's debt, it becomes your debt, and make no mistake.

It would indeed be wonderful to substitute self-liquidating investments in place of Government expenditures. But it won't be done by a law which empowers the Government to back schemes which couldn't get in the front door of a lending institution which has had practical experience on risks. And to say that it will not add to taxes or to debt is to make a statement that leaves with the listeners the impression that the speaker is harkening to political influence rather than to his experience in the field of finance.

A boom apparently has been ordered by the chief medicine man. All efforts must be directed in that direction, for the election is not so far away. Wall Street wants a boom, too, but many of those in the Street today know the price that investors and taxpayers will be called on to pay.

Bond Market Irregular

While the volume of dealings was somewhat above the preceding day, bond prices on the stock exchange showed little of the buoyancy displayed in stocks today. Domestic rails, liens, including those of second grade, were the strongest feature. Industrials and utilities had an easier tone.

Treasurys on the big board were in small volume, with price movements somewhat mixed. In the overcounter market late quotations showed slight declines for a majority of the Federal issues.

Foreign obligations were more actively traded, but price changes were generally small and lacking in uniform trend for the most active bonds.

The average of 30 bonds was down 0.03 points on the day. Contributing to this dip were losses of 0.10 in the average of ten industrials and of 0.20 points in five utilities. Ten rails were up 0.21 points and five second rails were up 0.18.

The rail advance included virtually the entire Baltimore & Ohio group, Lehigh Valleys, Erie, Milwaukees and North Westerns. Santa Fes were easier and Pennsylvania liens moved narrowly.

Among local traction bonds, Interborough and Manhattan issues showed some strength.

Wheat Rally Lifts Prices Cent a Bushel

Short Covering and Demand for Cash Grain Aids Rise

Chicago, July 18 (AP).—The wheat market shook off an early slump today and scored gains of about a cent a bushel.

Covering operations by which previous short sellers bought back their contracts accelerated the rally. Good demand for cash grain, with actual wheat quoted ½ to 1 cent higher, and 1 to 3½ cents over July futures. Price-supporting features of the government program and strength in the securities market were factors that induced the buying of wheat.

Early losses of as much as ¾ cent in sympathy with another break at Liverpool were wiped out in the recovery movement that got under way after midsession. Prices at times rose as high as 1⅝ over early lows, but closed ¼-⅝ higher than yesterday; July, 66½-⅝; September, 67⅛-67. Corn closed ¼-½ lower; July, 43⅞-44. Oats, ⅛-⅜ higher. Rye, 1-1½ up. Morgan Stanley & Co. To Handle So. Bell Issue

New York, July 18 (AP).—Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. has decided to issue $25,000,000 in debentures through an investment banking house without competitive bidding despite protests by various minority stockholders and objections by several State public utility commissions.

J. E. Warren, president of Southern Bell, said $22,250,000 of 40-year 3 per cent debentures would be sold at 106 to an underwriting group of 47 investment banking firms headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., and that the underwriting agreement provided that the price to the public would be 107½. He said the remaining $2,750,000 of debentures would be sold at 106 to the Bankers Trust Co., the trustee of the pension funds established by certain companies associated with Southern Bell.

New SEC Rule Speeds Offering Of Securities

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission yesterday promulgated a rule to facilitate the prompt advertisement of new securities issues to be sold to the public.

The securities act provides that a registration statement becomes effective on the twentieth day after it is filed with the commission. Thereupon the securities may be put on sale to the public. The new rule provides that the twentieth day begins immediately on the close of business at the commission (4:30 p. m. E. S. T.).

Under the new rule a banking group offering securities can get an advertisement into print on the afternoon or evening preceding the day on which the securities are to be sold to the public.

Cotton Futures Yield To Overseas Selling

New York, July 18 (AP).—Foreign selling landed on the cotton futures market with a good thump today. While overseas accounts liquidated holdings of nearby months, hedging sales hit more distant positions, putting the final range 8 to 14 points lower. A few hesitant rallies got under way but they were short lived.

Crop news was held responsible for much of the pressure while principal support came from trade. Wall Street and spot houses, mostly on price recessions. On the whole, though, buyers were indifferent pending constructive news from Washington regarding export subsidy plans.

Worth Street reported a moderately active cloth business as converters bought the more popular print cloth constructions. A few counts, which were reported scarce, commanded a premium for quick shipment.

Exports today were 5,148 bales; season so far 3,511,057. Port receipts 8,193; port stocks 1,927,439.

Cottonseed Oil

A covering movement in cottonseed oil futures swept prices up 10 to 16 points today in a trade largely dominated by stock market action. Many brokers said the market was undergoing a "technical" readjustment following a recent steady decline that lopped around 1 cent off the commodity.

Sales totaled 118 lots; September, 5.97 bid; October, 6.04 bid; December, 6.17; January, 6.12 bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5 cents in the Southeast and Valley, and 4¾@4¾ in Texas.

5 Months' Tire Sales 105% Over '38 Period

New York, July 18.—Tire manufacturers sold an estimated 7,848,000 casings to the automobile industry during the first five months of this year, a gain of 105 per cent over last year's corresponding volume, according to Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys today. This increase exceeded by a substantial margin the 54 per cent expansion in automobile production because a year ago car manufacturers were holding casing purchases to a minimum in an attempt to reduce stocks on hand.

With the introduction of new automobiles scheduled about a month earlier this year, the low point in demand for original equipment tires should be passed about mid-July instead of in August or September, as has been the case in recent years," states the analysis. "Then, too, the period of low activity will be shorter than average, for the automobile industry's model changeover will not take so long as in years when greater style and mechanical innovations have been ventured."

15-Year 2½ Per Cent Debentures Are Priced At 97¾ Per Cent

An issue of $85,000,000 Shell Union Oil Corporation 15-year 2½ per cent debentures is being offered today at 97¾ per cent, plus interest from July 1 to delivery, by an investment banking group headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc.

Net proceeds of the sale, estimated at $81,537,600, will be applied to the redemption of $57,427,000 15-year 3½ per cent debentures due March 1, 1951, at 102½ per cent and $25,000,000 15-year 3¾ per cent sinking fund debentures, due June 1, 1953, at 104 per cent.

Net income of the company for the first five months of this year is estimated at $1,097,342, which compares with $5,110,367 for the same period of 1938. Last year's net was $11,318,423 and that for 1937 was $20,668,880.

The underwriters state that to facilitate the offerings it is intended to stabilize the price of these debentures, but add that this statement is not an assurance that the price will be stabilized, or that the stabilizing, if commenced, may not be discontinued at any time.

Associated with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., as underwriters are Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Smith, Barney & Co., Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., The First Boston Corporation, Blyth & Co., Inc., Lehman Brothers, Lee Higginson Corporation, Hayden, Stone & Co., Lazard Freres & Co., and Dominick & Dominick.

Rukeyser Says: Governments Have Double Standards

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, July 18.—A double standard of morality has developed in recent years. Government at home and abroad has imposed new high ethical and publicity standards on private business, but does not feel called upon itself to live up to its own precepts.

For example, in this period of full disclosure of financial transactions of private corporations, many governments have been conducting in utter secrecy blind foreign exchange pools operating under such high-sounding names as exchange equalization funds. While frowning on private manipulation, government officials have sought to manipulate the course of foreign exchange rates. The stated objective of the politicians in each case is, of course, most worthy.

None except the Secretary of the Treasury and the President are informed about the current operations of our own stabilization fund. The prototype of all such funds for "managing currency" is the British equilization fund set up in 1931. It has operated in secrecy, and its purpose has been to keep the ratio of sterling to other foreign currencies within the convenience of the British economy.

Stabilization

After eight years, a British scholar, Leonard Waight, has attempted to delineate the anatomy and physiology of this British fund in a volume entitled "The History and Mechanism of the Exchange Equalization Account." As Francis Rodd makes clear in the foreword, the time has not yet quite come when the full story can be told. "When the author makes deductions from such figures as are available," Mr. Rodd points out, "as for instance of the state of the fund at any moment, the magnitude of gold movements and hoards, etc., he has, of course, had to use only the incomplete figures available to the public. This side of his study is necessarily therefore conjectural, since outside the Treasury and the Bank of England, the full figures for arriving at accurate results are not available."

In connection with lip service opposition to the concept of price fixing, it is noteworthy that numerous leading governments, including our own, have through equaliztion funds been practicing price fixing in the realm of foreign exchange rates.

The basic significance of the equalization fund is that it is a major tool for managing currency externally in the absence of an automatic gold standard.

The Gold Standard

Mr. Waight, in estimating the permanence of this social tool, says: "The exchange equalization fund can no longer be regarded as a stop-gap pending the establishment of a new form of gold standard. The prerequisite conditions for that event are nowhere apparent. All that has happened in recent years, especially in 1938, has stressed the importance of retaining for the time being some freedom in such vital matters as the external value of the pound or its corollary, the internal purchsing power of the currency. When, eventually, this country (Great Britain) returns to some form of gold standard there is little doubt that the main principles of the exchange equalization fund will be incorporated in it, though, of course, its raison d'etre will have changed."

The Stock Exchange's new committee to study the proposal of a broker's bank and related matters recalls the earlier suggestion of Joseph Mead, of the Economic Forum, that a permanent institution of the capital markets be established to make continuous studies of all phases of the machinery of Wall street, of which the Stock Exchange is only a part.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

RAINBOW TOSSES IMMENSE PARTY: At last! Tonight comes that long-awaited fourth anniversary party in the Rainbow Room. There'll be theatrical celebrities and executives by the dozen, all the trimmings of Mardi-Gras, a birthday cake weighing a ton, more or less. The popular Rainbow Room orchestra has cooked up a big batch of trick numbers for the occasion, and will practically turn themselves inside out to stage one of the biggest parties in the Rainbow Room's history.

Milt Britton and his gang of fiddle-busters will come from the Capitol Theater to help the doings along. Rainbow's Durward Bowersox vows he won't let his violin get out of his hands all evening. Someone suggested to Manager Dick Butler of the Hamilton, too, that he'd better take the Rainbow Room chandeliers down in anticipation of the Britton descent. Singer Sue Ryan, of the Capitol, will also be there along with Managing Director Gene Ford, Publicist Ray Bell and others. Radioman Arthur Riley will act as amcee.

HOT RUMOR. There's a buzz that Havana's Hotel Nacional is about to be added to the Roger Smith chain. The Nacional, you'll remember, was the hostelry in which Battista's revolutionaries besieged Machado's officers.

VITAL STATISTICS. Madrillon's Don Shook is wearing that sunrise smile because he's the proud popsy of a new baby girl . . . Ray Donahue of the Lounge Riviera and his sprightly missus are baby carriage shopping.

PLATTER MAKING. The Cocomo Boys and Eve Knight (King Cole Room and Hour Glass) have just made a group of Hawaiian recordings for Victor.

GLOBE-TROTTING VIOLINIST. Walter Scott, the brilliant young violinist with Art Barker's Trio at Mayfair, has played at leading English shore resorts for the last few seasons. His engagements included Harrogate, Margate and Scarborough. He topped off each summer with a trip to La Paree.

BILL'S VACATION. Lotus' maestro, Bill Strickland, is back in town after a vacation that wasn't a vacation. He spent all but three days of it in New York getting contracts straightened out, finally went fishing at Chinchoteague and practically got frozen.

FACES AND PLACES. Shoreham Terrace. Aubrey Williams, New Dealer extraordinary. J. Herman van Royen, former attache of the Netherlands Legation, now stationed at the Hague . . . Mayflower Lounge. Miss Frances E. Hinkebien, whose engagement to Gen. Max Tyler, of the Engineer Corps, has just been announced. Mrs. Dolly Flynn, wife of Newsman Michael Flynn, very smart in black and white . . . Lounge Riviera. Betty White, naturally the star of her own birthday party. Radio Maestro Morgan Baer and his lovely wife, Jolly . . . Carlton Lounge. Representative George H. Tinkham and his famous black beard. Gen. Hugh Johnson and his secretary, "Robbie" . . . Jerome Frank, of the SEC . . . Roger Smith roof garden. Miguel La Valle, of the Argentine Embassy, with Sam Chew, Sun Valley publicist, and Mary Lou Marsh.

HI HAT PRESENTS TOPPERS. Jack Manning's "Strings of Romance," who've just opened at Hi Hat, are authentic topnotchers. They do the current hits sharply and brightly, but several Hi Hat patrons nearly fell off their chairs when the "Romancers" launched into Brahms' Hungarian dance No. 5. N. B. The Brahms number drew the heaviest applause of the afternoon.

HITHER AND THITHER DEPARTMENT. Bamboo Gardens' Five Darlings are doing a "Walking Stick" number that's the last word in cane-carrying technique . . . Harry Hooley's back from Chicago: say's he lined up a bunch of smart revues for Bamboo's fall season . . . Carl Lorch, whose stylized music has proven an immediate hit at Glen Echo, is a graduate of Hal Kemp's and Kay Kayser's orchestras . . . Maitre d'Hotel Theon, of Wardman Park Hotel, has just won a radio the easy way, meaning via a punchboard . . . That corner table by the pool at Maryland Gardens is the one made sacred by Movie Star Jimmy Stewart and Assistant Director Arthur S. Black . . . Esther Taylor, the marimba player of the Neptune Room's Four Girls of Note, is also a fine drummer girl, may put on a few drum specialties in a couple of weeks . . . Proprietor Tom O'Donnell, of O'Donnell's Farms, says it would be cheaper for him to buy vegetables than to raise them, but he wants garden-fresh vegetables for the O'D. F. dinners. SHRIMPS! SHRIMPS! Comes the bargain of the ages! You can eat all the shrimp you can hold at the A. T. & S. barbecue tonight for a trifling two bits. The A. T. & S. is just 3 miles down the Alexandria pike from the airport. Also it's a smart, new place, furnished and decorated in modernistic style.

No one convention has created so much excitement, provided so much discussion or become so popular as the Blackwood convention. From the time this slam signal first was used in tournaments, it was the subject of dispute. Immediately after its first public appearance scores of players said they were the inventors of this bid which Mr. Easley Blackwood, of Indianapolis, said was his own. Despite all claims, the name stuck and since its exciting debut the Blackwood, now mature and mellow, is still the center of discussion.

Nearly every system maker has tried to improve on it, tacking on some invention of his own. Even the Four Aces, who themselves favor natural bidding, have submitted it to various laboratory tests.

Their findings have supported the efficacy of the Blackwood query for aces—four no-trump being the question, five clubs the negative reply, five diamonds indicating one ace, five hearts two aces, five spades three aces.

But they decided against the five no trump and its similar responses for kings, concluding that in the Blackwood system a player, having a king and forced to show it, almost automatically committed the partnership to grand slam. Point two made by the Aces against the five no trump demand was that in contracting for seven it was usually more important to know what kings partner had rather than how many.

"Let us consider this hand as bid under both regular Blackwood and the Four Aces variation:

NORTH
♡ Q62
◇ A842

SOUTH
♠ AKQ64
◇ 93
♣ AQJ54

SOUTH	NORTH
1 ♠	3 ♠
4 N.T.	5 ◇ (1 Ace)
5 N.T.	6 ◇ (Black.)
	or
7 ♠	6 ♣ (Four Aces)

"Using Blackwood, the responder shows he has one king. The original bidder does not know which king it is, and, hence, if he does bid seven, he is gambling (1) that his partner has the king of clubs, (2) that the finesse will work. Under the Four Aces variation he knows about the king of clubs, and bids seven."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE NATIONAL Civil Service Reform League, carrying a banner for the establishment of a merit system for personnel in State agencies established under the Social Security act, sent a telegram yesterday urging this policy to the conference committee now considering amendments to the act.

The personnel provision inserted by the Senate makes it necessary that this merit basis be required before Federal funds are designated.

According to the league, an efficient and competent personnel organized along the lines of a merit system, will be better able to carry out the methods of administration approved by the Federal board. Under the present act, the league points out, many of the State agencies were found to be "fertile fields of patronage for local political organizations."

The Civil Service reformers further state, that such a merit system has been approved by most of the State social security administrators.

THE NFFE PLAYHOUSE is planning to take a census of its own. Tabulated reports will select the "outstanding employe of the month," beginning next September. The person selected can count on being interviewed at the Playhouse performance for that month.

Whoever is tapped for the honor by fellow workers may be named for superlatives on the following counts: scholastic work, philanthropy, leadership in employe activities, contributions to the service and heroism.

Lee H. Shugar says mail the name of your nominee to Room 604 at 710 Fourtenth street northwest.

There will be an award; but more about that later. In the meantime the Playhouse is taking a vacation during August.

WE THOUGHT Iceland was a place where you wore a fur coat, ear muffs and reinforced mittens, but it seems it's not as cold as all that. According to the Department of Commerce, Reykjavik, Iceland's big city is going to be heated with water piped from nearby hot springs. And the springs are only about 10 miles away from Reykjavik.

The project will get going this summer and will be all finished some time next year. The system, when finally established, will mean annual savings on 34,000 tons of imported coal.

The average sizzling temperature of the water from the springs is close to 190 degrees. Ingenious Icelandic engineers figure that only three of those degrees will be lost in the piping process.

BACK ON THIS SIDE: Three new local unions have just been chartered by a jubilant National Federation of Federal Employes. The first is No. 666 at Trinidad, Colo.; the second is No. 667 at New Matamoras, Ohio, and the third is No. 668 at Fort Worth, Tex. According to Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally, all three of the unions are starting off with membership booms.

Employes in the Trinidad unit include workers from the Soil Conservation Service, the C. C. C. and members of the administrative personnel of the W. P. A. The local at New Matamoras is composed entirely of engineer employes of the War Department; and workers in Internal Revenue have the Fort Worth local all to themselves.

IT'S METAL for Mahatma Ghandi: Way off where the temple bells are ringing, there's a chant in the air for American-made metal furniture. So says Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, who points out that possible tariffs on teakwood imports from Burma may open a field for metal desks and filing cases in India. Wooden equipmen in the Kipling country, he says, takes a beating from high temperature, humidity and gnawing insects.

However, American manufacturers will have to meet or undersell the low prices charged by four Indian firms already in the metal furniture business.

OR TRY the Philippines: Where sales in cash registers for 1938 were valued at $97,215. And where more than 95 per cent of the office equipment sold was of American origin.

A high year for desks, typewriters, safes and vault doors was reached in 1937 during a gold-mining boom. Since then the demand has been shaved off a trifle, but you never can tell when the Filipinos will find another mine.

THE CIVIL SERVICE gets busy: A flock of examinations is being posted for the following positions. Final application date east of Colorado is August 14. West of Denver it's August 17.

Inspector, ordnance material, $2,300 a year; senior, $2,600; associate, $2,000; assistant, $1,800; junior, $1,620, all for Ordnance Department, War Department.

For the Office of Education, educational and technical consultant in curriculum problems, $5,600, and Federal agent for home economics education, $4,600.

For Agriculture, principal extension agriculturist, $5,600 a year; senior extension agriculturist, $4,600 and senior extension home economist, $4,600.

NUTS AND JOLTS

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XLIII.

JODY WONDERED if the quail would die of the black tongue. In another month, his father had told him, he might make a trap of crossed twigs and catch a few for eating. Shot was too valuable to be wasted on such small mouthfuls. But Penny would not allow them to be trapped until the covey was full-grown, and he insisted each year that two or three pairs of cocks and hens be left for seed. And would the turkeys die, and the squirrels, and the wolves and bears and panthers? Speculation absorbed him.

M. K. Rawlings

When a muffled sound in the distance became the recognizable beat of old Caesar's hooves, he had forgotten his discomfort. Penny was as grave as before, but he was relieved and stimulated by his talk with the Forresters. On the trail of game for food, they had discovered the condition two days before. No breed of animals, they said, had been spared. They had found the predatory creatures dead or dying beside their quarry, on an equal footing at last, the weak and the strong brought together to earth, the sharp-toothed and the dull, the clawless and the clawed.

Jody asked, "Will ever'thing die?"

Penny spoke sharply.

"I've told you the last time, don't ask me them questions. Wait like me and see."

IN NOVEMBER, the Baxters and the Forresters knew the extent of the plague and what to expect, both of the game and the predatory animals, during the winter. The deer had been cut down to a fraction of their usual numbers. Where a herd of a dozen had fed across the edge of the clearing, a lone buck or doe leaped the fence into the cow-pea field in search of food that was not there. The deer became bold, nosing in the old sweet potato beds for undiscovered nubbins. The quail appeared in almost their usual numbers, but the wild turkeys were decimated. From that fact, Penny concluded that the damage indeed lay somehow in the polluted swamp waters, for the turkeys fed there and the quail did not.

All the food animals, deer and turkey, squirrel and 'possum, were so scarce that a day's hunt might produce nothing. The unfriendly animals had suffered as heavy losses. At first Penny thought that this would be of advantage. It became plain almost at once that the result was to make the remaining killers hungrier and more desperate because of their own shortened food supply. He became alarmed for the Baxter hogs and built a pen for them inside the lot. All the family went together to the woods and gathered acorns and scrub palmetto berries for the hogs. Penny set aside a measure of the new corn for fattening them. A few days later a stampeding and squealing sounded in the lot at midnight. The dogs, aroused, ran barking and Penny and Jody pulled on their breeches and followed with a torch. The fattest barrow was missing. The kill had been made so neatly that there was no sign of struggle. A small trail of blood led across the lot and over the fence. It had required a large animal to kill and carry a heavy hog so handily. Penny took a hasty look at the tracks.

"Bear," he said. "A big un."

Old Julia begged to take the trail and Penny himself was tempted, for the killer might be easily and quickly come up on, gorging. But the night was dark and the risk of an encounter if the bear should be shot and only wounded was, he decided, too great. The trail would still be fresh enough in the morning. They went back to bed, to sleep lightly. At daylight they called the dogs and set out. The track was that of old Slewfoot.

Penny said, "I'd as good to of knowed, him, of all the bears in the scrub, 'd live through a plague."

Slewfoot had fed a short distance away. He had eaten heartily and scratched a covering of trash across the carcass. Then he had gone south and crossed Juniper Creek.

Penny said, "He'll be back agin to feed. A bear'll stay a week with his kill. I've seed 'em fight off buzzards even when they didn't want to eat, theirselves. If 'twas ary bear but this un, we could set us a trap. But no trap was made will fool him since he lost his toe in one."

"Cain't we come wait for him and ketch him at his fedin'?"

"We'll try."

"Tomorrer?"

They turned back toward home. A light galloping sound came close and closer. Flag had broken loose and joined the hunt. He kicked up his heels and held his small tail erect.

"Ain't he a sight, Pa?"

"He's a sight, son, a'right."

The next day, Penny was down with chills and fever. He was in bed for three days. There was no use in trying to catch old Slewfoot now. Jody begged to go alone and watch for him in ambush, but Penny refused permission. The great bear was too wise and too dangerous, he said, and Jody was too rattle-headed.

Ma Baxter said, "Now I don't crave to feed them shoats to no bear, even if they ain't plumb fat."

When Penny was able to leave the bed, they agreed that it was best to kill the hogs without waiting either for the full moon, or for the animals to be properly fattened. Jody split fatwood and built a fire under the syrup kettle and brought water from the sink-hole to heat in it. He tilted a barrel on its side and propped it with sand. When the water was exactly right, Ma Baxter ladled it into the barrel. Penny killed the hogs and scalded them one after the other in the barrel, twirling them by the legs with his quick deftness. Ma and Jody had to help him lift them to the cross-trees, for his strength suddenly failed him. All three worked furiously at the scraping, for the hair must come off before it set.

AGAIN JODY marveled at the metamorphosis of live creatures in whom he had felt interest and sympathy, into cold flesh that made acceptable food. He was glad when the killing was over. Now, scraping away on the smooth firm hides, he enjoyed seeing the skin become clean and white. He began to anticipate the smell of sausage frying and of cracklings browning in the fat. Nothing was wasted, not even the entrails. The meat itself was dressed out into hams and shoulders, side-meat and belly-bacon, which would be cured with salt and pepper and brown sugar made from their own cane juice, and then smoked slowly over hickory coals in the smokehouse. There remained the hocks and feet, which would be pickled in brine; the ribs and backbones which woould be fried and put down in crocks under a protective layer of lard; the heads and livers and kidneys and hearts which would be made into head-cheese and put down the same way. The trimmings of lean meat would be ground into sausage. The fat would be tried out in the wash-pot and the lard put down in crocks and cans and the brown cracklings laid away for shortening in cornbread. The stomachs and intestine would be scraped and turned and soaked, and then used for casing in which the sausage meat would be stuffed, and the sausages hung in festoons and smoked along with the hams and bacons. Odds and ends would be cooked with cornmeal for the dogs and chickens. Even the tails were dressed. Only one part, like a windpipe, seemed without use and was tossed away.

Jody asked, "What's that, Ma?"

"Why that's his goozle. What's a goozle? Well, if he didn't have no goozle, he couldn't squeal."

Eight hogs in all were dressed. Only the old boar hog, two young sows, and the brood-sow, peace offering from the Foresters, were left to begin the cycle over again. These must take their chances in the woods. They would be fed the slops, and a little corn at evening, to toll them into their pen to be shut up at night for approximate safety. For the rest, they must root for a living, maintaining life if they could, dying if they must.

SUPPER THAT night was a feast, and the table seemed lavish long afterward. There would soon be collards in the garden behind the house, and wild mustard greens all about the clearing. There would be bacon to cook with them, and with the dried shelled cow-peas. Cracklings would hold out for cracklin bread for months. The Baxters were in fair shape for the winter. The season was the most abundant of the year. The scarceness of game would not be so serious with the smokehouse full.

The flattened sugar-cane had sent out whiskered roots along the stalks and had to be torn free of the clutching earth. The stalks were like ragged mops. The extraneous roots had to be cut off before the cane could be ground. Jody drove old Caesar around and around the small cane-mill and Penny fed the thin, fibrous stalks into the revolving gears. The yield was low, and the syrup was thin and acid, but there was again sweetening in the house. Ma Baxter dropped oranges into the last boiling of syrup and the result made a rich preserve.

The corn was not much damaged, even the ears that had stood in the field through the rains. Jody spent hours every day at the millstone. The lower stone had small grooves that waved out from the center like the spirals on a snail shell. The upper stone rested on it, and the pair sat in a wooden frame with four legs. The shelled corn was fed into a hole in the center of the upper millstone, and when the ground meal reached a certain fineness, it sifted out through the waste hole and was collected in a bucket. Swinging the overhead lever in a circle hour after hour was monotonous but not unpleasant. Jody dragged up a high stump and when his back was tired, sat on it by way of rest and variety.

He said to his father, "I do most o' my figgerin' here."

Penny said, "I hope you do a heap of it, for the flood's done you outen a teacher. The Forresters and me had it settled to board a teacher between us for you and Fodder-wing this winter. When Fodder-wing died, I still figgered I'd do some trappin' and git cash money that-a-way. But the creeturs is so scaret now and the hides so pore, hit's no use."

Jody said comfortingly, "That's all right. I know a heap now."

"That jest proves your ignorance, young feller. I do hate for you to grow up and not know nothin.' You'll jest have to make out this year with what leetle I kin learn you."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Japanese Liner Burns Near Philippines; No Americans Aboard

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 18.—The rescue at sea of 209 passengers and crew of the burning Japanese freighter Bokuyo Maru was tersely told today in a message from the American tanker S. S. Associated.

Capt. L. E. Hawkins, skipper of the tanker, said he took the victims of the Bokuyo Maru explosion and fire aboard his ship 3,750 miles west of San Francisco. Whether the Japanese ship sank was not learned here.

The captain's meager message to his employers, the Tide Water Associated Oil Co., said there were three casualties among the crew of 102 and 110 passengers. No names were given.

No Americans Aboard

The 8,619-ton Bokuyo Maru was en route from San Pedro, Calif., to Japan with a cargo of nitrates from Valparaiso, Chile. The stop at San Pedro had been made after fire was discovered in the forward hold.

There were no American or European passengers aboard the vessel when it left San Pedro July 2, I. Nishimara, Los Angeles agent for the Nippon Yusen Kaisha (Japan Mail Line), Co., operator of the ship, said today. Master of the Bokuyo Maru was Capt. C. Amano.

The San Francisco Marine Exchange said it understood that the passengers were Hindus and Orientals en route home from South America. The Nyk Line San Francisco office said unofficial reports indicated all passengers were safely transferred to the Associated.

On Way to San Francisco

The Associated, 8,407 gross tons, was en route from Manila to San Francisco and officials of the company said the vessel would not alter its course.

The Japanese freighter, 1,200 miles East of Yokohama, sent out S O S calls for 5 minutes before the signals abruptly ceased, indicating the fire had reached the radio room.

The Nyk company asked four Japanese vessels in the vicinity to aid the Bokuyo Maru, and one of these may be asked to relieve the Associated of its rescued passengers and crew.

15 Sailors Die in Blast

Swinemuende, Germany, July 18 (INS).—Fifteen members of the crew of the North German Lloyd steamer Berlin were killed and 18 injured when one of the ship's boilers exploded today 15 miles off the coast.

Federal Union Official Denies Guilt in Theft

Jack Freshour, former treasurer of the Federal Power Commission employes' credit union, was freed on $2,000 bond yesterday pending grand jury action on a charge of embezzling $1,800 from the credit union.

Freshour was a filing assistant at the FPC until July 4. Following an audit of the credit union's books, covering $7,000 assets, the president, Willard Gatchell, and a supervisory committeeman, Ralph Gates, swore out a warrent for Freshour.

Gatchell said Freshour was bonded and that the credit union would suffer no loss.

Newport Matron May Join Divine

Newport, R. I., July 18 (U.P.).—Father Divine may receive a wealthy "angel" into his flock when he comes to take over a heavenly "castle" in this fashionable summer colony, it was disclosed tonight.

Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, who offered her baronial mansion to the colored cultist when she couldn't get a liquor license, announced she was "interested in Father Divine's earnest group."

House Votes For Park in California Sierras

A proposal to conserve permanently "one of the most famous scenic areas in the United States" moved toward realization yesterday when the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill establishing the 454,000-acre Kings Canyon National Park in the California Sierras.

Sponsored by Representative Gearhart (Republican), of California, and bitterly fought by his California colleague, Representative Elliott (Democrat), the bill was approved by voice vote after a motion to recommit—the equivalent of killing the measure—had been defeated, 205 to 140.

By overwhelming vote, the House struck from the bill a committee amendment that would have permitted construction of irrigation or power projects within the park boundaries.

250 Fair Cadets, Fired, Wade Pool, Pull Out Shirts

New York, July 18 (A.P.).—The New York World's Fair tonight dismissed several hundred of its employes, including an estimated 250 information officers, mostly college boys.

After the information "cadets" were given the sad news and a week's pay, they yanked the gold braid, badges and other paraphernalia off their uniforms, tacked it on their civilian clothes, and wandered around the grounds, whooping it up.

One group waded about 100 yards through a long pool on the fair's main avenue, yelling and pulling out their shirtails.

Senate Approves D.S.M. For Admiral Yarnell

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a bill authorizing President Roosevelt to award the Distinguished Service Medal to Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet, for service of the "highest order and greatest value" in protecting American interests affected by the Sino-Japanese war.

The naval committee, in reporting the measure, said that no authorization was necessary to enable the President to make the award, but that it considered the bill "appropriate" in that it would "announce the approval of Congress of his services."

Bridges Hearing Told Communists Run Dock Unions

San Francisco, July 18 (A.P.).—A Government witness in the Harry Bridges deportation hearing testified today he lost his union card and his livelihood through Communist machinations.

The witness was John Layton Leppold, of San Francisco, former marine cooks unionist, who said he was reduced to taking $36-a-month employment in a Maritime Commission school, and that he had been warned by an anonymous telephone caller June 6 "not to testify at the Bridges hearing. Leppold said a "Communist group" determined policies for the affiliated waterfront unions.

Labor Board to Act On Normandy Building Strike

Labor Department Conciliator Stanley V. White who attempted without success to arrange a conference between L. A. Montague, owner of the new Normandy Building, 1626 K street northwest, the union representative of striking employes, has temporarily withdrawn from the scene while awaiting action by the National Labor Relations Board, he said yesterday.

Picketing by members of the Building Service Employes, Local 82, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, continued yesterday amid conflicting reports of the number of employes on strike. Montague claimed that only one charwoman had not returned to work. James Kimbro, president of the union local, however, maintained that three men are still on strike in addition to the charwoman.

The strike began Monday morning after Montague refused to reinstate two discharged charwomen.

U. S. Missionary's Reported Seizure By Japan Probed

Shanghai (Wednesday), July 19.—Orders to investigate the reported detention by the Japanese of the Rev. L. W. Holland, an American missionary at Nanchang, who has been missing since July 14, were sent from Washington last night to Clarence J. Spiker, United States consul general at Hankow.

On June 14, the Domei (Japanese) news agency reported Japanese soldiers had searched Holland's house and the hospital, and had found anti-Japanese leaflets, along with evidence that Holland had been helping the Chinese guerrillas.

American authorities and officials of the Methodist mission here immediately inquired into the Japanese charges, but received no reply. The Japanese military authorities at Hankow denied Holland had been arrested, but made vague replies concerning the action which had been taken against him.

Premiums Unpaid, Roosevelt Vetoes War Insurance

A bill designed to award Mrs. Catherine Humler, mother of a marine who died in service, $13,732 from war-risk insurance, was vetoed "with regret" yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt explained that the marine, Joe McFarland Humler, applied for insurance October 20, 1917, specifying that the premiums were to be paid by his father, Bert Humler, instead of being deducted from his service pay.

Young Humler died July 20, 1918, and "unfortunately," Mr. Roosevelt said, no premiums had been paid on the insurance since it had been taken out.

Mrs. Humler was paid $463.50 under the World War adjusted compensation act and is receiving $45 per month in death compensation benefits, he said.

Will Fight Alone, Says Polish Chief

London, July 18 (A.P.).—The News Chronicle in a dispatch from Warsaw tonight quoted Marshal Smigly-Rydz as saying that "Poland has decided to fight for Danzig even if she has to fight alone," after she has exhausted "all methods of settling the question of Danzig peacefully.

"The whole nation is agreed on this . . . Poland does not want war, but there are things that are worse than war to us, and one is the loss of our freedom."

4th Time's a Charm To Youth Who Tried To Be Arrested

Only unflagging determination on his part brought Walter E. Brady, 21, of 1600 block, S street northwest, before Judge John P. McMahon, of Police Court, on an embezzling charge yesterday.

Although there was a 3-month-old warrant for his arrest on the charge of embezzling $46.21 from a paint concern here, precinct and headquarters police three times refused to arrest him. Finally, on the fourth try, Brady convinced an officer that he ought to be arrested.

Brady's attempts to give himself up were revealed yesterday by Detective Sergt. Charles Warder before Judge McMahon, who referred the case to the probation officer and curtly remarked, "That's fine cooperation."
